HOOVER TALKS BALK RECOVERY, GARNER CLAIMS

Flow of Statements Harm U. S., He Says.

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

Washington, D. C., May 14.—[Special.]—Too many Hoover statements were blamed today by Speaker of the House John N. Garner as one of the principal causes of the continued unsettled conditions of the country.

JOHN N. GARNER.

"The President's habit of continuous statement making during the last two years," said Mr. Garner, "has done more to keep the public mind on the uncertainty of the future, and has done more to freeze the confidence of the people than any other one thing."

The speaker's attack on the frequency of White House utterances came as one of the foremost signs of a developing state of friction between the administration and congress which may in the opinion of authoritative observers force a summer session in the midst of the presidential campaigns.

It should be possible, in the month before the Republican convention, to push through the revenue bill, the economy and the eight remaining appropriations bills, together with other essential legislation.

Stormy Sessions at White House.

But more than one member of congress was dubious when it came to the subject of the counter relief measures which have been proposed by the Democrats and by Mr. Hoover.

Outwardly today matters were left open for a meeting of minds and the consummation of a compromise measure. Under cover there was much determined opposition to the President's proposal that relief should be extended through the Reconstruction Finance corporation and that it should include private as well as public enterprises.

It was learned today that Friday night's White House conference on the relief question was a stormy one. Supporters of the administration plan were described as having indicated that they would like to see loans made to certain specific industrial concerns. The idea, it was said, met immediate criticism.

Hoover's Program Attacked.

If such a scheme is adopted, the Democrats declare, it might be difficult to keep loans from following political channels and going perhaps to industries whose leaders are known as generous campaign contributors. Or loans to states might somehow be tempted into areas where the Republican chances are doubtful.

Nor was the President's program much better received by some Republicans, who declare that loans to private industries would come several steps nearer state socialism than loans to states. It would mean, they averred, lending federal aid to failing concerns, while their competitors, having so far weathered the storm on their own resources and enterprises, would be forced to continue in the same fashion.

The subcommittee of Democratic senators engaged in trying to work out a compromise bill did not meet today, but Senator Wagner [Dem., N. Y.], chairman of the group, said he was engaged upon the measure.

On top of these discussions concerning a rift between White House and congress came Speaker Garner's outburst against Mr. Hoover's fondness for issuing statements.

"Talks Too Much," Garner Says.

"Mr. Hoover started out in 1929 to cure the depression," the speaker declared, "but his policy of emitting statement after statement as to conditions has served to freeze the confidence of the country."

"I suggest that the President follow the example of his predecessor, Mr. Coolidge, and keep silent for 30 days. If he would only go into reverse for a little while, I think it would do more good than any other thing toward restoring confidence."

Asked if he thought the series of statements represented an effort on the part of the President to lay the foundations of his campaign for reelection, Mr. Garner replied:

"I don't know about that, but it seems to me that he's mighty anxious to keep his name before the public.

WALSH WARNS DEMOCRATS TO AVOID DEADLOCK

Senator Recalls '20 and '24 Results.

BY ARTHUR EVANS.

Prospects that the "stop Roosevelt" movement may deadlock the Democratic national convention at the Stadium in June led Senator Thomas J. Walsh of Montana to declare in Washington last night that deadlocks are dangerous to the Democracy.

Senator Walsh, an adherent of Gov. Franklin D. Roosevelt of New York, in a letter to W. W. McDowell, state chairman of Montana, urged Democrats of his home state to instruct their delegates for Roosevelt Tuesday. He declared it was being "insidiously" suggested by anti-Roosevelt groups that state conventions refrain from voting instructions with a view to tying the national convention in a knot and prolonging the balloting. Walsh cited the deadlocks at San Francisco in 1920 and at Madison Square Garden in 1924 as examples of the danger.

Recalls "Unhappy" Results.

"The unhappy result in 1920, and again in 1924, of the selection of a candidate by a deadlocked convention," he wrote, "ought to dissuade any Democrat from looking eagerly to the recurrence of such an issue, and little hope is entertained of the nomination of any one of the able and eminent gentlemen whose names have been mentioned in connection with the nomination, other than Gov. Roosevelt, except through a deadlock.

"In truth, it may be said that, however worthy they may be, there is for none of them much more than local spontaneous support."

Senator Walsh, who is assistant Democratic leader in the senate, was western manager of the Woodrow Wilson campaign in 1916, and was permanent chairman of the national convention at Madison Square Garden in 1924.

154 Delegates to Be Picked.

This week 154 more national delegates are to be picked by the Democrats. The Roosevelt forces concede that the "stop Roosevelt" forces will take New Jersey's 32 delegates on Tuesday and that Al Smith will get a majority of Connecticut's 16 tomorrow. In the west and south the Roosevelt managers figure that the primaries in Oregon will pledge 10 delegates for the New York governor, and that conventions in Kansas, New Mexico, Montana, South Carolina, Vermont, Tennessee, and Nevada will add another 90 or so.

To date the tally at Washington stands:

Total delegates	1,154	Majority	578
One-third, to block	385	Two-thirds, to nominate	770

Instructed, pledged, or claimed:

Roosevelt	362	Murray	23
Lewis	58	Ritchie	16
White	52	Pref'nce in doubt	169
Smith	46
Garner	44	Total	806
Reed	36

The 169 in dispute include 76 from Pennsylvania, 92 from New York, and one from Alaska. Claims of Smith and Roosevelt in Pennsylvania are still in disagreement, Smith claiming a minimum of 38 and Roosevelt claiming 63, the total number of Pennsylvania delegates being 76.

The Roosevelt total of 362 includes 11 in Porto Rico and the Canal zone, which are disputed by Smith.

Two Primaries This Week.

Republicans this week will select 87 national delegates in primaries in Oregon and New Jersey, and in conventions in Vermont and Alabama. The Hoover managers claim the President already has 921 delegates in the bag, or 343 more than a majority.

"Candidates' row," from all appearances, will be an extensive adjunct at the Democratic convention. Most of the seekers for the Democratic nomination for President are expected to be on the scene in person, and headquarters for most of them have been reserved at the Congress hotel.

Gov. Roosevelt, according to present plans, may not be at the convention, although it has not been definitely announced. A large Roosevelt suite has been engaged, and it is expected to be opened well in advance of the arrival of the delegates.

A women's Roosevelt headquarters has been opened by Mrs. George Bass.

Many Have Reservations.

Reservations for headquarters have been made for Al Smith of New York, Gov. Albert C. Ritchie of Maryland, Speaker John N. Garner of Texas, Gov. William H. [Alfalfa Bill] Murray of Oklahoma, ex-Senator James A. Reed of Missouri, ex-Gov. Harry F. Byrd of Virginia, and Senator James Hamilton Lewis. All are ex-

SUPPORT HOOVER OR QUIT JOBS, MISSOURI POSTMASTERS TOLD

Springfield, Mo., May 14.—(AP)—Urging Missouri postmasters to defend and support Herbert Hoover, W. Irving Glover, second assistant postmaster general, told the postmasters' state convention here today, "that as long as you do that you are filling the job of postmaster."

"You are a part of this administration," he said, "it is best for us to get out on the firing line. I shall be back in Washington Monday, and I will be glad to take the resignations of any postmasters who do not want to do it."

Answering those who say that America needs a leader, Glover declared, "We've got a leader. We have had one for years. If we do not stand back of that man Hoover, regardless of party, God help this country."

FLAMES ROUT 100 GUESTS IN HOTEL NEAR UNIVERSITY

Fire starting on the fourth floor routed more than 100 resident guests from the Charlevoix hotel, 6213 University avenue, early this morning. The blaze destroyed several rooms on the upper floor and ate through the roof.

A 2-11 alarm was sounded, bringing apparatus from all sections of the south side. Prompt action confined the blaze to the fourth floor and roof. Damage, part of it from water, was estimated at $20,000.

No one was injured, and this was due in a measure to fast work on the part of Ray Welty, night clerk. He discovered the fire and hastened to the office switchboard to turn in an alarm. He then warned every occupant by telephone to leave. All but a few had sufficient warning to dress and flee. Two women, a little slower, were carried down a rear fire escape by Fireman William Moore of Engine Company 51. A crowd of 5,000 persons, many of them students at the University of Chicago, a block away, watched the fire.

SUMMER SPELL TO END WITH RAIN TONIGHT

Midsummer temperatures which prevailed in Chicago yesterday are to continue today, according to the official weather forecast, but it is expected that it will be much cooler tonight and tomorrow. The break in the heat, it was indicated, will come after thundershowers in the late afternoon or evening.

The highest mark recorded here yesterday was 86 at 5 p. m. Unseasonable warmth prevailed over the Mississippi and lower Missouri valleys during the day, a maximum of 96 at Minneapolis being the highest ever recorded there so early in the year.

Chimpanzee Keener Than Human Child

Bloomington, Ind., May 14.—[U.P.]—The strange story of how a chimpanzee that was reared with a human child surpassed the child in learning ability, memory, and coöperative spirit, was told here today.

Dr. W. N. Kellogg, Indiana university psychologist, related the experiment before members of the Mid-Western Psychological association. He and his wife conducted the experiment at their home in Orange Park, Fla., using their own child for comparisons with the chimpanzee.

Through the experiment, Dr. Kellogg sought scientific support of the theory that environment is so important in life that a chimpanzee, if reared in domestic surroundings, will act much as a human being. Its results, Dr. Kellogg said, tended to substantiate the theory.

Live and Eat Together.

The chimpanzee and the baby lived under identical conditions. They played together. They ate together. Their clothes were the same. As a result, Dr. Kellogg reported, the chimpanzee behaved in almost all respects like his own child.

Dr. Kellogg noted that due to the animal's shorter life, it matures earlier. Hence it progressed more rapidly than the baby.

To test their learning ability, Dr. Kellogg tied slip knots on their wrists and feet. Then he timed them to see which would untie the knots quickest. The chimpanzee won.

The chimpanzee also learned the use of the hoe and rake quicker than the baby, Dr. Kellogg said.

Test of Their Memories.

To test their respective memories, Dr. Kellogg arranged two doors in full view of each. He then disappeared through one door and watched to see which could longest remember through which door he went.

The chimpanzee, Dr. Kellogg found, could remember for 30 minutes. The baby could remember for only five minutes.

The chimpanzee showed superior coöperation, the psychologist said, by responding more quickly when called and by doing small tasks more readily than the child.

Dr. Kellogg was unable to teach the chimpanzee to speak and doubted whether this ever would be accomplished. This finding is contrary to that of several other scientists, who have reported that they succeeded in teaching chimpanzees to say a few words.

Upsets an Old Theory.

The experiment, Dr. Kellogg believes, established the fact that much of an infant human's early behavior is acquired, not "native or natural" reactions, as often contended.

"It is very likely," he said, "that infants begin to acquire traits very soon after they are born. Many of their reactions are due to their environment and are not 'natural.'"

The chimpanzee which Dr. Kellogg used was provided by the Yale experiment station at Orange Park.

'Give Us Beer,' New York City Paraders Cry

Wet members, by petition, succeed in forcing vote on beer in house of representatives on May 23.—Details on Page 5.

New York, May 14.—[Special.]—New York went on record today as being in favor of additional taxation. It said so on banners and streamers, on signs painted along the sides of trucks, on small buttons that superseded gardenias in frock coat lapels. This taxation would balance the budget, put men to work, start moving the rusted wheels of industry, and remove the rackets from the social side of life—so they said. And, yes, New York likes a glass of good beer now and then.

All day long and till far into the night the city expressed its thought—and hope—in the event that will be known to history as the "beer parade." Led by Mayor "Jimmy" Walker himself, an almost endless line of marchers started out long before noon to display their wares and expectations. Late this evening they were still walking bravely along. Banners that waved against the noonday sun still waved at the midnight moon.

Really a Nice Day.

Heralded by all save the drys—and sneered at by them—the parade was indubitably a success. No one was kept out for lack of a horse or a uniform. There were scores of bands to provide music, and the better known of the Teutonic drinking songs, and when the musicians ran out there were trucks bearing mechanical devices for playing phonograph records. Overhead circled airplanes, and the route of the event was such that picnic luncheons could be eaten on the grass of Central park. It was a very nice day.

Just how many took part was an open question. Police and other officials bandied figures about carelessly. Mayor Walker said before the event that between 75,000 and 100,000 would march. During the afternoon a policeman reported that "about two million" were participating, either by parading or cheering on the sidelines. A statistician estimated that 2,000 went by any given point each hour, and there were a great many hours, indeed.

Carry Tin Buckets.

Every one seemed interested in beer. Some of the paraders marched by the makeshift reviewing stand at 72d street and Central Park West, proclaiming the future of the balanced budget. A few floats carried replicas of old time bars of happier days. Many men carried tin buckets, and a few of the women. It was, after all, Saturday.

Crowds of marchers went by in uniform, with eyes very formally facing left at Mayor Walker and the leaders of the parade. Other units were in every day dress, just out from the workshop and the bakery. The Tammany society went by, tipping high silk hats with commendable dignity, and a fleet of trucks rolled up the street with hordes of small boys undecided whether they wanted "beer" or "Jimmie." The choruses of a couple of musical comedies rode by in automobiles, waving their knees.

Milwaukee Cheers for Beer.

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

Milwaukee, Wis., May 14.—[Special.]—Thirty-five thousand Milwaukeeans jammed the sidewalks along Wisconsin avenue through the heart of the city's business district late today to view a "beer for taxes" parade arranged by the Wisconsin Wet League, Inc.

Cheers rose from the massed audience as the 3,000 marchers, led by bands, most of which were imported from Racine and other metropolitan centers of southern Wisconsin, trudged through the streets.

Sentiment against prohibition and in favor of the return of beer was expressed by the huge audience if not in the length of the parade, officials of the league said. Citizens of Milwaukee are more inclined to passive demonstration than to dramatic displays.

50,000 March in Detroit.

Detroit, Mich., May 14.—[Special.]—At least 50,000 persons marched through downtown streets this afternoon in Detroit's beer-for-taxation parade.

Leaders in many walks of life, two congressmen, city and county officials and persons representing various nationalities, fraternal and patriotic organizations marched.

Jobless War Vet Loses 5 $100 Bills; Asks Return

An appeal was made yesterday by R. W. Taylor, 4130 North Keystone avenue, an unemployed war veteran, for aid in recovering $500 which he lost. Taylor, who had been employed in a bank until recently, had received back the $500 which he had paid into a pension fund. He said the loss occurred between 8 and 10 p. m., Friday night, between the corners of Milwaukee and North avenues and Belle Plaine and Crawford avenues. The money was in five $100 bills.

MANY PLANES, FLEET OF SHIPS SEEKING 5 MEN

Condon Claims He Knows One.

New York, May 15.—[Special.]—A fleet of airplanes and seventy-five sea vessels concentrated along the Atlantic seaboard today in an intensive search for the slayers of Col. Charles A. Lindbergh's infant son as the nation's greatest manhunt took on added activity in towns and cities throughout the country.

The ocean hunt was for a seemingly phantom ship which lured Lindbergh and his aides time after time to sea by vain, colorful promises of the return of the kidnaped baby alive and well.

The Day's Developments.

Today's outstanding developments included:

[1]. The search along the Atlantic seaboard from Norfolk to Cape Cod for the kidnapers' craft, described as a schooner of the Gloucester fishing type.

[2]. The statement by John Hughes Curtis, the Norfolk shipbuilder who acted as a go-between, that he had supplied a description of the boat and the names or nicknames of the five persons on board. No names or descriptions are given out.

[3]. The belief by Curtis and others close to the search that the boat carries the kidnapers and murderers of the baby.

[4]. The fact that the Norfolk intermediary saw $1,500 of the bills that were paid in the Bronx by Dr. John F. Condon [known as Jafsie] and which resulted in the "double cross."

[5]. Dr. Condon's statement, following a three hour session with the Bronx county prosecutor, that he knew the name and appearance of the man to whom he turned over $50,000 of Col. Lindbergh's money as a ransom for the baby and that he could pick the culprit "out of a thousand."

[6]. The assigning of the case to be heard before the Bronx grand jury on Tuesday on the strength of the "Jafsie" angle.

[7]. The offer and acceptance by Gov. A. Harry Moore of New Jersey of federal aid from William D. Mitchell, attorney general, who is acting under direct instructions from the President.

Lindberghs Still Helpful.

[8]. While federal, state, and local agencies combined in the hunt which President Hoover said must never be relaxed until "those criminals are implacably brought to justice," the Lindberghs were still calm and helpful in the direction of the search for the slayers of their 20 month old baby.

It is supposed the jury will bring the narrative of Jafsie down to brass tacks and that the Curtis stories, too, will be probed to the bottom in New Jersey.

United States Attorney General Mitchell, in his letter to Gov. Moore, suggested that the state authorities work with J. Edgar Hoover, chief of the bureau of investigations of the department of justice, who will coördinate the activities of the several federal departments called upon for assistance. Gov. Moore announced that Col. H. Norman Schwarzkopf, superintendent of state police, would be in full charge of the New Jersey state forces.

Digging Around the Spot.

Prosecutor Erwin E. Marshall of Mercer county, said he could see no clews, but he had the soil around the spot where the baby lay removed for analysis. A shovel found nearby was soon eliminated as a clew of importance.

The main line of inquiry, however, was based on the facts supplied by Curtis and Condon about the men who made daring approaches, with or without the knowledge that the child lay dead in the woods a few miles from the Lindbergh home near Hopewell, N. J.

Five destroyers, coast guard cutters, rum patrol boats and amphibian planes are covering the seaboard looking for a 116 foot fishing vessel, equipped with an auxiliary engine of 275 horsepower.

They are divided into twenty-four patrols and are maintaining constant radio communication with land bases and police authorities. Orders have been issued to board any craft imperfectly identified, and the men in the various coast guard stations have been put on a twenty-four hour watch.

Eyes Off Rum Fleet.

This patrol has played havoc with the usual chase of the rum row fleet. The liquor ships are immune from seizure outside the 12 mile limit, but fear constant stopping and search. They appear to be having an easier time now that the coast guard fleet is seeking the phantom "kidnap ship."

They are looking for the fishing vessel equipped with an auxiliary engine, the story surrounding which is one of fantastic aspects, including the possibility that the intention was to kidnap Col. Lindbergh.

The baby's father was completely persuaded of the importance of the contact and was at sea, optimistically believing himself to be within a few hours of recovering the child when the news reached him by radio that the baby's body had been found.

Phantom Craft a Mystery.

The operations of the mysterious craft, as described by Curtis and by Capt. Frank H. Lackmann, skipper of the Marcon, the yacht which was used in the early phases of contact covered a period of weeks. She was always tantalizingly out of reach, at least after the colonel came into the picture. Mr. Curtis says he was on her once, but at that time the baby was not on board.

From his contacts with the men on the schooner Curtis is sure they are the actual kidnapers. With an intimidated captain on board, the shipbuilder was shown $1,500 of the listed "Jafsie" money, indicating that at least the two lines of contact were related.

"That fifty grand was taken by a double crosser in our crowd and we have taken good care of him," he quoted one of the men as saying.

May Be Crossing Atlantic.

Mr. Curtis feels that they have put far out to sea and may be well across the Atlantic by now. Their supplies, however, will not last them indefinitely. Meanwhile, all landing points on both sides of the Atlantic will be watched.

"They know too much," said Mr. Curtis. "They had too many definite bits of evidence to be any other than the murderers themselves."

He believes the captain to be innocent of complicity, and says that his hair was actually turned white in the three weeks during which he has been in the hands of the supposed kidnapers. Their boat left Cape May on April 21, and thereafter they insisted that the baby was on board and being cared for by a German nurse they had forced into service. On the day before the boat sailed Curtis boarded her, but there was no child on the boat at that time.

Sought to Kidnap Lindbergh?

Meanwhile, the supposed kidnapers were frightened by the discovery that navy planes were on guard. The pursuing group switched to the Cachelot, a ketch which could take the seas more sturdily than the Marcon. It was while he was on the Cachelot Thursday afternoon, believing himself to be near his goal, that the receiving radio set brought the news to Col. Lindbergh that his baby was dead.

But to Curtis the bewildering part of the negotiations was the failure of the supposed kidnapers to demand a sum of money. This led Curtis to believe that their real purpose was to get Col. Lindbergh on board and kidnap him, a bold coup which might bring them a fantastic ransom sum.

"These men asked no ransom before the baby's delivery," said Capt. Lackmann of the Marcon. "They said they would return the child safe and sound and depend on Mr. Curtis' good faith to pay them later. What could they have been aiming at, if not to get Lindbergh?

"I believe they intended to board our yacht and take Lindbergh, or else persuade him to get on their boat. I believe that in any event they would have put us off until Lindbergh was desperate and then would have suggested that he himself go out to get his baby."

Cachelot's Owner Talks.

Further details of the colonel's efforts at sea to contact with the criminals were supplied by A. L. Foster, owner of the Cachelot.

"I have known John Hughes Curtis, the Lindbergh go-between, for several years as the result of having some work done at his shipyard in Norfolk," Mr. Foster said. "He asked me several weeks ago if I would be willing to use my boat in the search for the Lindbergh baby and I was only too glad to offer my services.

"On Sunday afternoon I received a call and on Monday afternoon Col. Lindbergh, Lieut. Richard and Edwin Bruce arrived at my home. I set a point for a rendezvous with the kidnapers' boat in a conference with Mr. Curtis and toward evening we drove to the boathouse. We left Atlantic City at 7 p. m. and arrived at the rendezvous at 12:30 a. m. Tuesday in a northeast storm. We remained at the station until 5 a. m., but no boat hove into sight. Then we pulled into Cold Springs harbor.

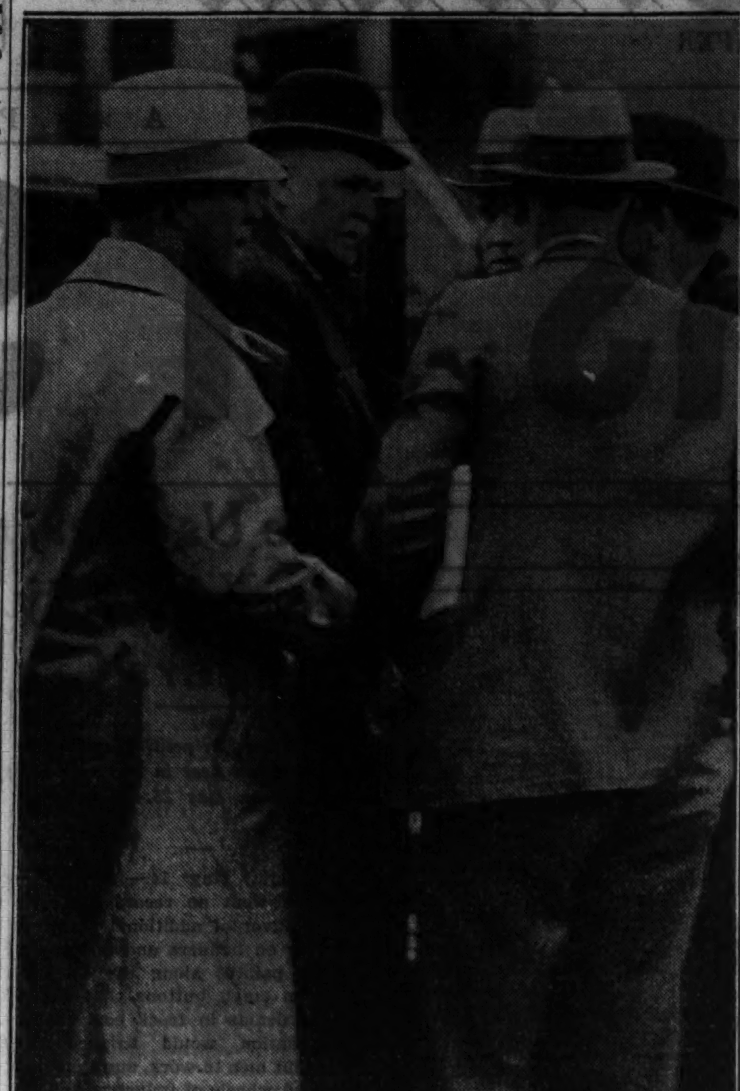
Lindbergh Flashed the Signals.

"A continuous effort was made to contact the other boat by prearranged signals, using a masthead light for the purpose. Col. Lindbergh personally flashed the signals. The sea was rough, but it would have been possible to visit the supposed boat.

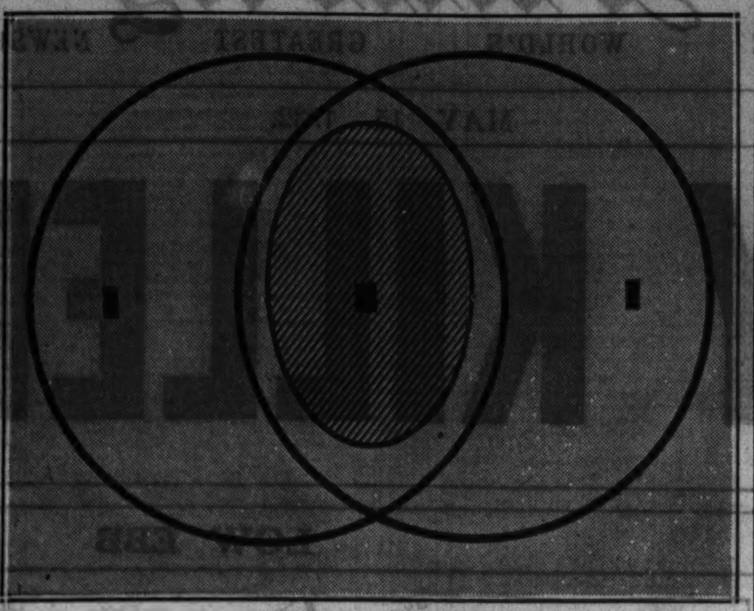
"On Tuesday the storm increased and it was not possible to leave anchorage. Col. Lindbergh was aboard from Monday night until Tuesday night.

"Mr. Bruce and Lieut. Richard made a trip to New York on Wednesday. Mr. Curtis was in Atlantic City on Thursday. He caught Mr. Bruce and Lieut. Richard with a phone message about 7:10 p. m., just when they started to board the Cachelot. Mr. Bruce broke the news of the discovery of the dead child to Col. Lindbergh about 9 p. m. It was evident that something was wrong from 7 o'clock, but it was thought to concern the contact arrangements, and there was a tense atmosphere aboard until the explanation was made."

"JAFSIE" QUIZZED ON NEGOTIATIONS WITH KIDNAPERS



Dr. John F. Condon, the "Jafsie" of the Lindbergh case (wearing derby), shown surrounded by reporters in New York. Dr. Condon, under questioning by New York authorities yesterday, said he knew the name and appearance of the man to whom he turned over $50,000 of Col. Lindbergh's money as ransom for baby.



A reproduction of the symbol used by the supposed kidnapers in their dealings with Dr. Condon. The symbol is said to have appeared on the ransom note left in the baby's crib, and it was by this means, Condon says, that he identified the kidnapers' letters and thus became convinced he was paying the $50,000 to the right persons. The shaded part of the symbol was in red ink, while the large circles were drawn in blue. The black squares represent three holes punched in the paper.

[Copyright: 1932: By the New York Times.]

MEXICO CITY, May 14.—Following a protest signed by all pupils of the Mexico primary school, which was given wide publicity in Mexico City yesterday, there has developed an unprecedented wave of indignation over the murder of the Lindbergh baby which, within a couple of days, will culminate in a parade of 10,000 children evidencing their abhorrence of the crime, which has shocked this republic more than anything within years.

Many other elements, including labor, will join the manifestation of sympathy for Col. Lindbergh, who, during his stay here, when he wooed and won Anne Morrow, gained esteem from the highest to the lowest.

El Nacional, in an editorial on the Lindbergh case, says: "We are not now in the pagan age when the sacrifice of human life, much less that of children, is necessary to propitiate to the gods. Such theories were thought to be things of the past, and the murder of the child is the humiliation of the human race."

Woman Given 1 to 40 Years on Charge of Kidnaping

Rochester, Minn., May 14.—[Special.]—A sentence of one to forty years' imprisonment in the state women's reformatory at Shakopee was given Mrs. Minnie Stevens Traynor, 20, by Judge Vernon Gates in Olmsted county District court today. She was convicted March 17 of kidnaping Lyle Proud, Rochester taxi driver, on the night of June 30, 1931, after aiding her husband, John Traynor, to escape from the county jail. Traynor is now serving a thirty year sentence in Iowa state prison at Fort Madison for attempting to kill a Des Moines detective last Feb. 15.

CROWE'S NAME BOBS UP AGAIN IN LINDY CASE

Wyoming, Pa., May 14.—(AP)—Pat Crowe, kidnaper of a quarter century ago, is being "investigated" in connection with the Lindbergh kidnaping, it was learned at the headquarters of the Pennsylvania state police tonight.

Authorities at the barracks here said they had decided to question Crowe because of his repeated statements on lecture platforms that the infant son of Col. and Mrs. Charles A. Lindbergh would be found not far from Hopewell.

Police at Hazelton, Pa., said Crowe called at their headquarters last Monday to ask their assistance in placing a telephone call to the Lindbergh home. It was reported from Hazelton tonight that State Trooper Robert Knight had picked up Crowe and was taking him to the barracks here for questioning. Lieut. Plummer, commander of the barracks, said, however, that he had not been advised to that effect.

Seek Vandals Using Air Rifle to Smash Windows

Town Hall police yesterday were seeking the vandals who shattered several plate glass windows in the vicinity of Southport avenue and Grace street late Friday. Among the windows to be broken were those of the Martha Burial Dress company, 3857 Southport avenue. The windows were broken with pellets fired from air rifles. Police believe small boys are responsible.

Horse Falls on Groom, Sending Him to Hospital

Canton, Ill., May 14.—[Special.]—The next time Claude Staggs of Farmington curries a horse he probably will use a ladder. A horse on which he was working fell on him, causing injuries which sent him to a Galesburg hospital.

BABY'S MOTHER IS CALM AGAIN; WILL GO AWAY

Lindberghs May Make Trip to Europe.

Hopewell, N. J., May 14.—(AP)—Displaying unusual recuperative ability, the frail mother of the kidnaped and slain Lindbergh baby again took an active interest late today in the conduct of her desolate household atop the Sourland mountains.

Last night her strength wavered for the first time during the long strain and a physician was consulted. At her insistence she had been told the details of the finding of her first born.

She retired early, but this afternoon she again exhibited the calm and composure that has been a remarkable characteristic of the tragedy.

"They're the kind of people that the harder things get the braver they become," was the way a friend and visitor explained her condition.

Expects Child in August.

Late in August she expects another child. Reports persisted she and her aviator husband will go abroad to remain until after the child is born.

One report was that they would leave on June 4 on the Ile de France, but at the steamship office it was said they had not booked passage on that ship.

Another report was that they intended to go to a friend's château in France.

If they do leave the Sourland countryside, it is generally believed they will never return to that hilltop house into which stark tragedy stalked the night of March 1.

The house had just been completed when the kidnaping occurred. It was not yet completely furnished. Until March 1 the Lindberghs had spent only week-ends there, living at the home of Mrs. Dwight Morrow, Mrs. Lindbergh's mother, in Englewood. It was at his grandmother's home that the flyer's namesake was born.

There is also a possibility, it was said, that they may go to the Morrow estate in Maine for the rest and seclusion they desire and need so badly.

The wiry, lanky colonel has borne the strain of anguish, impatient waiting, and uncertainty with remarkable fortitude. His direction of a personal campaign to get in communication with the kidnapers gave him an outlet for pent-up energy.

Trips Taken in Vain.

He made numerous dashes about the countryside in his automobile. He took several plane trips. Then he went off with John Hughes Curtis, Virginia intermediary, on a boat trip, hoping to come back with his long lost son.

The perseverance and fortitude he has displayed have been reminiscent of his display of those qualities on his epochal oceanic flight.

But now both he and his grief-stricken wife seek peace, quiet, and seclusion. Where they will seek them is their immediate problem.

HOOVER OFFERS EVERY FEDERAL AID IN MAN HUNT

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

Washington, D. C., May 14.—[Special.]—The federal government today offered all of the investigating services of the federal government to New Jersey to help hunt the murderers of the Lindbergh baby.

Attorney General W. D. Mitchell, at the request of the President, sent this message to Gov. Moore:

"As a result of the recent developments in the Lindbergh case and by direction of the President, I desire to renew the offer of the federal authorities, who hold themselves at the disposal of the authorities of New Jersey to render every possible assistance and the use of our facilities to aid you in apprehending the guilty persons.

No Federal Police Power.

"We recognize, of course, that the offense is not one against the federal government, and that the federal authorities have no police jurisdiction over the case, but there may be many ways in which the various detective agencies of the federal government may be of assistance to the police of your state.

"Several of the executive departments of the federal government have investigating forces whose aid you desire to invoke and in order to avoid confusion it has been suggested that Mr. J. Edgar Hoover, chief of the bureau of investigation of the department of justice, coördinate such service as the federal agencies are called upon to render.

"If you will advise me what police official in the state of New Jersey is to have general charge and control of the investigation, Mr. Hoover will get in touch with him."

Urge $100,000 U. S. Reward.

Simultaneously Representative John J. Douglass [Rep., Mass.] initiated a move in congress to effect the passage of legislation offering a $100,000 reward for the solving of the Lindbergh kidnaping and murder. A bill to this effect was introduced by Mr. Douglass under circumstances indicating its passage through congress will be swift.

Up to the finding of the baby's body officers of the federal government played only a minor part in the search for the kidnapers. Several agencies of the government offered their services but nothing was done about it. Finally, at the request of friends of the Lindberghs, Murray W. Garson, special assistant of Secretary of Labor Doak, was given a force of 35 men and assigned to the task of solving the crime.

Federal Agent Called Off.

Garson worked one week and then dropped out of the case. According to information available here Garson made five trips to the Lindbergh home, questioned several of the servants, and then found that the New Jersey police or some of the people back of the investigation had lost interest in having the immigration section of the labor department on the job.

According to one report it was Mr. Garson's questioning of Betty Gow, the baby's nurse, which aroused the ire of those conducting the hunt for the baby. Mr. Garson, it is understood, had made a start on an exhaustive investigation which included severe questioning of the servants and a thorough search of the premises before he was called off.

STATE APPROVES DIVERSEY AVE. BUS EXTENSION

The Illinois commerce commission yesterday granted the Chicago Surface Lines authority to extend trolley bus service on Diversey avenue from Narragansett to Harlem avenue, contingent upon the federal court's approval of a request by the receivers for authority to expend the money necessary for the extension.

The extension would serve approximately 8,500 persons living within the square mile bounded by Belmont, Harlem, Fullerton and Narragansett avenues, it was said.

The commission pointed out that there are pending before it applications for orders directing street railway extensions, the total cost of which would be more than a million dollars.

ILEANA IS KEPT OUT OF AIR RACE; EXPECTS A BABY

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

VIENNA, May 14.—Dowager Queen Marie of Rumania today forgot the marital troubles of her sons, King Carol and Prince Nicholas. Stopping here for a short rest, she drove to the local air field and watched her son-in-law, Anton Hapsburg, take off in the annual around-Austria flight of amateur pilots.

Princess Ileana was to have been her husband's passenger, but Queen Marie persuaded her not to fly. The princess expects a baby soon.

YACHT'S SKIPPER DESCRIBES HUNT FOR BABY AT SEA

Made Seven Trips Seeking Phantom Ship.

[Copyright: 1932: By the United Press.]

Norfolk, Va., May 14.—[U. P.]—The amazing story of John Hughes Curtis' negotiations with the men he believed were in possession of the Lindbergh baby were revealed for the first time today by Frank H. Lackmann, skipper of the yacht Marcon.

In an interview Capt. Lackmann disclosed that the Marcon's seven trips to sea were in pursuit of a phantom ship, always tantalizing just out of reach, and that on all of its voyages the Marcon was heavily armed with automatic rifles and followed, secretly, by a navy seaplane.

Beset by storm and fog John Consolvo's 86 foot ship, the Marcon, tossed like a cork in the heavy seas off the Maryland and Delaware coasts. Col. Charles A. Lindbergh, father of the missing infant kept almost constant vigil aboard the yacht.

Planned to Kidnap Lindbergh.

In telling his story, Lackmann expressed frankly his belief that the kidnapers who promised to deliver the Lindbergh baby to Curtis really aimed at getting Lindbergh himself, to hold him for an inestimable ransom that conceivably might have been raised by national subscription.

Though he emphasized that his belief could be no more than a theory, he offered the suggestion that unless the kidnapers were after Lindbergh, their motive in promising the delivery of the baby entirely without previous payment, as they did, was inexplicable.

To protect Lindbergh the Marcon was armed principally with Browning automatic rifles.

In addition, each time the Marcon cruised, a navy seaplane, in personal charge of Capt. Kenneth Whiting, commandant of the Norfolk naval air station, went out to reconnoiter for the Marcon, to look for the phantom kidnap ship and if necessary to speed back to the air base on Hampton Roads for aid.

Navy Craft Ready.

There the navy tug Owl was ready for any emergency and the Norfolk fleet of coast guard boats would have been on call.

The argosy of the fast, sturdy, keen lined Marcon must be one of the most romantic of modern times.

To Lackmann, cool, matter of fact, in mid-thirties, with his face hardened to a dull brown by wind and sun, apparently the search for the Lindbergh baby was just another of his many jobs, though he admitted it was the most exciting thing in his career.

Capt. Lackmann was taken into the confidence of Curtis early in the negotiations with the men who now are believed to be the actual kidnapers and murderers of the Lindbergh baby.

Asked Owner for Ship.

As soon as the kidnapers told Curtis to meet them at sea and obtain the baby [whose body even then lay in the woods near its home], Lackmann offered the Marcon, with the consent of Col. Consolvo, the owner.

"It was quite a business," Capt. Lackmann said. "Curtis was in constant touch with the supposed kidnaping gang by telephone. He said they gave him directions where to sail. They said they got their instructions from the boat on which they pretended they had the baby. They described it as a two masted fishing schooner a little over 100 feet long.

Signals Were Towels on Deck.

"We were to sight it from the air—the seaplane—by means of two white towels laid flat on the deck house. One day Capt. Whiting did see a boat of that description flying two white pieces of cloth from the shrouds, but it might have been washing.

"The kidnapers' agents used to say they got their messages from the schooner on a 500 meter wave length, from a special rum runner's radio set that could send and not receive.

"They took Curtis aboard the ship on one occasion, before they claimed they took on the baby.

"The kidnap messages used to be sent to a shore station, a rum running gang apparently. Curtis would telephone these people each day and get directions. It seemed as if the men were moving along the coast because Curtis used to have to telephone to various points.

Kidnapers Explain Delays.

"After each cruise the kidnapers would tell us, they said by messages from the ship, why they could not meet us because of fog and storms. One day the battleship Utah came near us; again it was destroyers; again a fishing trawler.

"They changed our orders nearly every day, and finally they ordered Curtis north. Had the baby's body not been found they would have come back here again, to carry on their terrible game to the finish—which I believe must have been an attempt to kidnap Col. Lindbergh.

"The way we worked things out aboard was a system of three hour watches.

"Lindbergh was splendid. It is not hard to fancy what he was enduring. But he took his turn like the rest, eager to help, and he certainly made a fast friend of me."

NOW GEORGE HAS A $300,000 CHECK, BUT CASH IS GONE

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

BUENOS AIRES, Argentina, May 14.—George Walter Johnson, who says he is from Chicago, recently arrived in Buenos Aires to seek a check for $300,000 which, he had been informed, lay at the bottom of a trunk belonging to a man serving a long prison term.

All Johnson had to do was to give $1,400 cash to an individual who would show him where the trunk was. Johnson parted with his money and obtained the check, which was drawn on the Buenos Aires branch of the "Bank of London, Mexico and South America." He inquired his way to the bank, only to learn that it did not exist.

He informed police, who are now searching for one David Martens. It was his letter that beguiled Johnson to leave Chicago.

QUOTES PASCHEN AS ORDERING HIS RECORDS BURNED

Stormy Scene Marks New Testimony.

Chris Paschen ordered numerous records of his company destroyed one night in September, 1929, a witness testified yesterday at the income tax trial of the former city building commissioner before Federal Judge Barnes. The following day, said the witness, packages of canceled checks and invoices were carried to the basement boiler room in Paschen's office at 1450 Clybourn avenue.

"Then the radiators began to heat up as if something was being burned," the witness said.

This testimony precipitated a stormy session, for upon cross-examination Defense Counsel Cassius Poust brought an admission from the witness, Walter A. Redfield, 916 Diversey parkway, that he had pleaded guilty to a charge of forgery in Detroit twelve years ago.

Repeats Paschen's Order.

Examined by Assistant Attorney General William J. Froelich, Redfield said that he worked for Paschen as a bookkeeper in 1929 and 1930. One night when Paschen and Daniel J. O'Connell, another employé, were having dinner in the office, Redfield said he heard Paschen order O'Connell to "see that those records are destroyed."

The following day, he said, "Charlie Howard, a truck driver, carried loads of checks, invoices and burlap sacks taken from a vault to the basement and then the radiators began to heat." While this went on, Redfield testified, the street doors were locked.

On cross-examination Poust was unable to shake Redfield's story materially. A tall man with a deep voice, the witness said he was sure of the language of Paschen's order.

"It wasn't 'better clean out that vault,' was it?" Poust suggested.

"No," said Redfield positively. "He said: 'See that those records are destroyed.'"

Redfield sat in the witness chair and replied combatively when Poust asked: "You were discharged by Paschen for becoming intoxicated, weren't you?" The answer was a thundering "No!"

Poust began to question Redfield about several checks. Froelich objected and Poust replied that he intended to show that the witness "embezzled $3,438.20 from Paschen by raising amounts on checks he cashed at the Foreman bank." Poust charged that Redfield had also purchased merchandise on Paschen's credit and resold it.

"He was discharged for being drunk, incompetent and dishonest," said the lawyer.

Questioned About Checks.

"Were you ever accused by Joe Sladek [Paschen's manager] of raising the amount of this check from $3.20 to $603.20?" asked Poust, handing the exhibit to Redfield.

"Never by Joe Sladek but I was called into an insurance office and asked about it," replied the witness. His answer was the same when shown four other checks.

"Did you ever tell John Brown [another Paschen employé] that you had raised these checks?" asked Poust. Redfield denied he did.

Poust continued this line of attack with Froelich objecting and being sustained by the court after almost every question. Judge Barnes warned the defense lawyer to discontinue this method and when Poust asked, "Did you tell Brown you had served time in Ohio?" the judge said, with some emphasis: "Mr. Poust, I'll have to ask you to cease. If you don't, I'll have to do something unpleasant."

Admits Pleading Guilty.

Poust then asked, "Are you the same Walter A. Redfield who pleaded guilty to forgery on Sept. 12, 1920, in Recorder's court in Detroit?" "Yes," answered Redfield defiantly.

"Did you tell Brown that you cashed checks with a teller in the Foreman bank by giving the teller a baseball pass?" This was objected to.

"Did you ever forge the name of B. M. Squires [head of the Cleaners and Dyers Institute] to a check for $540 cashed at the Harris bank in May, 1927?" continued Poust. An objection was made but the "No" of the witness could be heard.

"Did you call Chris Paschen on the telephone after you were discharged and tell him that if he prosecuted you on the bad check charge you would be a witness for the government in this case?" asked Poust. Redfield denied it and said he had quit Paschen's employ and had not been discharged.

ARREST THREE FOR EXTORTION IN LOS ANGELES

Los Angeles, Cal., May 14.—(AP)—Police tonight had made three arrests here in two extortion plots they attributed to "attempts to take advantage of the fear inspired by the Lindbergh case."

Carl Poehnl, 26 year old chauffeur, is charged with demanding $50,000 from C. R. Fuller, wealthy motor car dealer, in a letter signed "The Mob." Poehnl denied guilt. Police said they were holding him because of similarity of handwriting. Robert Cavinee, 18, former life guard, and Frederick J. Gambs, 32, both of Santa Monica, were arrested by private detectives employed by Albert Leonard, real estate dealer, who said he received a letter last Thursday demanding $2,500 and threatening his wife and children.

Obeying instructions in the note, Leonard placed a package of money beneath a board walk at the beach. Cavinee and Gambs were arrested when they walked to the spot and Cavinee, detectives said, picked up the package.

NO SIN TO DANCE IN NUDE? COPS DIFFER; KILL TWO

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

BUCHAREST, May 14. — In the dimly lighted fastness of a cave near Petrunia, Bessarabia, 100 naked men and women danced, sang and made merry last night. They were members of a religious sect called the "Innocents."

The "Innocents" refused to obey the police orders to cease singing and dancing and to conceal their nudeness. A barrage of stones met the police advance. Several officers fell wounded. The police opened fire, killing two "Innocents" and wounding four. The remainder escaped to the inner recesses of the cave, where the police are trying to smoke them out tonight.

The "Innocents" believe that spiritual purity is only possible by turning the clock back to the days of Adam and Eve. Clothes are a mark of sin, they insist. The authorities tolerated them until the cave became too popular.

DOUMER SLAYER IS IDENTIFIED AS EX-COMMUNIST

PARIS, May 14.—(AP)—Paul Gorguloff, assassin of President Doumer, fainted today when he was confronted by three persons seeking to establish his identity, one of whom declared the prisoner was a former communist people's commissar in Russia.

M. Astakos, a Russian living at Le Havre, made the charge. He said the prisoner was not the real Paul Gorguloff whom he knew, but the former Commissar Zolotanes. Gorguloff jumped to his feet with an indignant denial.

Col. Yelasiess, a former officer in the Russian imperial army, questioned the prisoner concerning his military service and said he was satisfied the man had served in the imperial army, as had been previously testified. A third witness said he had seen Gorguloff shortly before the assassination with "a mysterious woman."

DRUGGAN BROKE? HE BUYS 9 PRIZE COWS FOR $2,485

Beer Baron Improves Farm Though He's in Prison.

Two mistaken notions about the affairs of Terry Druggan were exploded yesterday. One was that the former beer baron, now confined in Leavenworth penitentiary, is broke, and the other was that he seriously desired to get rid of his pure bred Guernsey cattle.

The records of an auction sale held at the Chicago Guernsey Farms, Hinsdale, on Thursday, show that Druggan is building up his herd and that he is in a financial position to do it, having paid $2,485 for nine prize cows.

Charges Concealed Assets.

During his court hearings the government charged that Druggan "concealed" assets consisting of 35 head of Guernsey cattle at the time he tried to compromise his income tax liability. This charge grieved the gangster convict who told Federal Judge Wilkerson that he offered the cows to Dwight H. Green, assistant United States district attorney, to Mrs. Myrtle Tanner Blacklidge, then collector of internal revenue, and to other government officials, but nobody would take them.

Druggan's lawyer, Capt. William F. Waugh, offered in court to drive the cows right down to the federal building. Nevertheless, Judge Wilkerson sentenced Druggan to two and one-half years in prison.

The nine prize cows, were bought Thursday by John Sullivan, manager of Druggan's Sanola farm at Lake Zurich, and the transfer order was made out in the name of Terrence Druggan. One of the cows, Loma Doris, was formerly owned by Mrs. M. Y. Kaufman, owner of Tick-On, who was a Kentucky Derby favorite. Another, Caumsett Farm Maiden, was formerly owned by Marshall Field III.

Druggan Gets Revenge.

All of them, according to cattle men, have been purchased by millionaires for several times what Druggan paid. Even the millionaires, apparently, had no money to spend on noble Guernseys in times such as these, so Druggan stepped in and got revenge on the people who bought his period furniture, etchings, and oils at auction.

Druggan entered the prison on Feb. 28, so, barring a parole or probation, he will have to wait the expiration of his term before seeing his cows. They were delivered to Sanola yesterday. The government has a civil tax lien on Druggan's equity in the farm, but he has made arrangements to compromise everything for $150,000, so the lien will come off.

CALDWELL WILL ANSWER SCHOOL BOARD'S CRITICS

Attacks 'Claims, Boasts' of City Officials.

BY OSCAR HEWITT.

Trustee H. Wallace Caldwell said yesterday that at the special meeting of the board of education tomorrow he will attack the "claims and boasts" of city officials and aldermen, on their alleged savings in city expense.

Mr. Caldwell said he doubted whether the city is saving "$15,000,000 on city employés' salaries and on other expenses in like proportion," as was claimed at the city council session last Friday. At that meeting the aldermen criticized the school board for its $90,180,263 budget for this year.

Denies Charges Are True.

"I'm tired of the way some city officials and aldermen are talking about school affairs," said Mr. Caldwell, "and I am going to say so at the board meeting Monday.

"Some of the aldermen are saying we have made no savings and must spend many millions less than our appropriations call for. They are not telling the truth.

"We already have made a decrease of $11,000,000 under our 1931 budget. That is a far greater percentage than any one else has cut, including the city.

"Those attacking the school board and praising the city are speaking for the interests who oppose payment of taxes on personal property. They want to becloud the issue.

"It takes audacity for the council to call upon every one else, including the federal government, to make drastic cuts, before such a program has been started in their own house."

Board Charged with Bad Faith.

In some of the council speeches the school board was charged with "bad judgment" in adopting its $90,180,263 budget, which none has found a way to finance; and also with "bad faith" in not reducing its 1931 tax levy.

"Why does the school board levy $10,658,000 more in taxes than it reports it spent last year?" asked Ald. John S. Clark yesterday. "Why doesn't the board vote to reduce that levy? The 1931 taxes have not been spread, and the levy easily could be cut. I do not see why the property owners should be soaked $10,658,000 more than the board itself says was necessary to operate the schools last year."

Clark Reveals Tax Figures.

The alderman has compiled a table showing the amount of taxes the board has levied for 1931 and what the board has reported it expended in 1931, as follows:

Fund—	1931 taxes levied.	1931 expenditures.
Educational	$56,580,442	$53,181,482.60
Building	21,172,036	15,829,515.81
Text book	1,457,267	1,174,949.32
Playground	912,587	650,836.52
Pension	912,587	380,098.03
Bonds and int'st	4,228,888	1,251,083.33
Lunch room	....	134,581.74
Special income	....	2,800.17
Totals	$85,263,807	$74,605,436.92

The special meeting of the school board tomorrow is for the purpose of reducing expenditures. Some of the trustees desire to defer action. The board last Wednesday adopted a motion of Mrs. W. S. Hefferan to delay a start until Dr. George D. Strayer submits his complete report, which he said would fill 10 volumes.

ROBBER CAUGHT TWICE; PLEADS FAMILY IN NEED

A man about 35 years old, with his right hand in his pocket and pretending that he carried a pistol, last evening stepped into the Parkview laundry at 1844 North Wells street and demanded money from Mrs. Samuel Eisenstein, wife of the proprietor.

Mrs. Eisenstein gave up $2 and the man ran out. She followed. Her screams were heard by Albert Topp, 1832 North Wells street, and Edgar Burnette, 4030 Clarendon avenue, who pursued and caught the bandit. Having no pistol, he convinced them that he was the wrong man.

They released him but Mrs. Eisenstein arrived soon and Topp and Burnette again captured the robber and held him for the police. At the Hudson avenue station he said he was Oliver Bush, 840 Lakeside place. He said he was stealing because his family was destitute.

HEART VICTIM UNIDENTIFIED.

HER PLAY TO AID TEACHERS

4,000 AT NORMAL COLLEGE VOTE TO OPPOSE CLOSING

Speakers on the annual teachers' day program at the Chicago Normal college yesterday afternoon urged opposition to any attempt on the part of the board of education to discontinue the college as an economy measure. More than 4,000 teachers participated in a full day of activities.

Pleading for the organization of all teachers, Miss Florence Hale of Washington, D. C., president of the National Education association, said business men should underwrite the school system and the normal college in the same manner that large public ventures, such as the 1933 World's Fair in Chicago, are financed.

Miss Hale praised the preliminary report of Dr. George D. Strayer of Columbia university, which called for a $15,000,000 reduction in Chicago's annual school expenses.

The teachers' cause also was espoused by Mrs. Helen Hefferan, a member of the board of education.

After the speeches the assembled teachers voted unanimously to oppose closing the normal college.

G. L. HOSTETTER IS OUSTED BY LAUNDRY OWNERS

Gordon L. Hostetter, executive director of the Employers' association, has resigned as counselor for the Chicago Laundry Owners' association by request, it became known yesterday.

The resignation revived reports that George (Red) Barker, Capone labor union racketeer, is trying to gain a foothold in Chicago's huge laundry industry. A month ago, Hostetter was sued on a charge of slander by Simon Gorman, a union organizer, who alleged that because Hostetter referred to him as a hoodlum and gunman he had been rejected as counselor by the association.

"The executive committee asked me to resign about a week ago and said the drivers' union would not enter into negotiations for a wage reduction as long as I was connected with the association," Mr. Hostetter said yesterday. "The contract of Otto Jabureke, as attorney for the association expired April 30 and was not renewed. I anticipate a wage cut of 10 per cent.

T. Henry Klein, president of the owners' association, was asked if racketeers had been trying to seize control of the association and had forced the two men out. "I don't think so," he replied. Six weeks ago, at a meeting in the Union League club attended by 350 owners, Mr. Hostetter was given a vote of confidence.

GIRL CASHIER HELD UP.

An armed man entered the Loblaw groceteria at 713 East 79th street and compelled the cashier, Miss Maybelle Chapman, to surrender $52. He concealed his pistol so that five customers in the store at the time did not know a holdup was in progress.

Benefit Today

"The Barretts of Wimpole Street," current stage success, will be given in the Civic Opera house this afternoon for the benefit of the sick teachers' fund of the Chicago Teachers' federation. Miss Katharine Cornell, star and producer of the play, and her company will donate their services.

With the exception of the boxes, which will cost $25, all seats will be sold for $1 each. Mayor Cermak took one of the boxes yesterday. Among others who have engaged boxes are Mrs. Emmons Blaine, Mrs. Kellogg Fairbank, Miss Eleanor Holden, Mrs. C. P. Goodspeed, Robert Dunham, Mrs. Albert Lasker, Mrs. S. H. Dewey, and A. Conger Goodyear.

GERMANY OFFERS VON SCHLEICHER DEFENSE POST

BERLIN, May 14.—[U. P.]—Gen. Curt von Schleicher, advocate of peace between the Bruening government and Adolph Hitler's Fascists, has been tentatively chosen by Chancellor Bruening to replace Wilhelm Groener, who resigned last Thursday as minister of defense.

The broad, strapping, bald undersecretary of defense has repeatedly acted as intermediary between Bruening and Hitler. He caused a stir recently when he induced Bruening to dine at his home with the former crown prince.

Gen. von Schleicher has been offered the post informally. It was said he will accept only if Bruening consents to a reconciliation with Hitler and later includes Hitler's Nazis in the government.

NEW LAW HALTS SALE OF SCHOOL BOARD WARRANTS

Teachers' 'Checks' Cause of New Muddle.

Legislation passed at the special session of the Illinois general assembly, in the opinion of attorneys and of fiscal officers of the city and the board of education, will block the further sale of tax warrants by the city schools.

City Controller Szymczak has been informed by Chapman and Cutler, regarded as the leading firm of attorneys specializing in tax warrant matters, that they cannot approve the sale of more warrants under the circumstances.

"Unless this firm attests the validity of this paper," said the controller, "we cannot sell it. In that case there will be no cash for the educational fund."

Senate Bill Causes Trouble.

The measure which caused the trouble was senate bill 152, signed by Gov. Emmerson. It provides that taxes for the educational funds of the Chicago school board and other school districts throughout Illinois may be paid with checks marked "not sufficient funds," issued to teachers and other school employés and creditors. Under the law, it is held, these checks are as good as cash in the payment of taxes levied for the educational fund. Tax warrants issued against the fund can also be used to pay taxes.

The legal effect of the checks is to lessen the security of tax anticipation warrants which are a first lien on tax receipts.

Chapman and Cutler, in their message to Controller Szymczak, pointed out that if enough of such checks were offered in payment of taxes, there would be insufficient tax collections in cash to redeem the outstanding warrants.

See No Way For Approval.

"We can think of no method at present," the firm stated in its opinion," by which this situation can be satisfactorily worked out so we can approve tax anticipation warrants. It looks very much as though educational financing of school districts hereafter will have to be carried on by the issuance of teachers' orders.

"To our mind this proviso in the law has completely upset the possibility of school districts financing themselves by issuing and selling tax anticipation warrants."

The troublesome bill was introduced by State Senator Andrew S. Cuthbertson of Bunker Hill, No Chicago teachers' organizations appeared to support it and it was believed that it affected only downstate districts. Its unfavorable bearing on the local warrants came to light only when Chapman and Cutler were asked for an opinion.

Seek a Solution.

Conferences of attorneys representing the city, the schools and the teachers have been held with the hope of finding some means to circumvent the law and sell more warrants. Two possible solutions have been suggested. First, that the Supreme court be asked to pass on the constitutionality of the law and second, that the board of education restrict the issuance of teachers' orders, the "not sufficient funds" checks.

The 1932 appropriation for the educational fund, which is 60 per cent of the school board's total budget, is $55,040,710. Of this $42,931,630 is set aside for the salaries of regular and special teachers, civil service employés and personal services.

Women Raise $219,769 for Joint Relief Fund

In the seven months it functioned the women's division of the Joint Emergency Relief fund was responsible for collection of $219,769, it was announced yesterday by the chairman, Mrs. Joseph M. Cudahy. The general campaign fund, according to the report, received $172,012 collected by the women's division. Of this amount, $100,731 was contributed by individuals, $56,898 by clubs, and $14,381 by students in private, public, business and art schools. The number of separate contributions was 73,556.

AGED PLAINSMAN BEATS HIS PAL TO DRAW; KILLS HIM

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

PRINCE GEORGE, B. C., May 14.—A verdict of not guilty of murder was returned by a jury in the trial of Wade Starleigh, Montana cowpuncher, plainsman of the Canadian prairie and sourdough of northern placer fields, who was charged with murdering his prospecting mate, Jack Frey.

Starleigh, known to the northwest mounted police as far back as the eighties as a square shooter, told the court that, after a series of quarrels as to disposition of their gold, Frey suddenly drew his rifle, which caught in the scabbard. Starleigh drew first and shot him through the heart.

"When you saw his gun had caught why did you not call on him to throw up his hands," Crown Prosecutor A. M. Johnson asked.

"Did you want me to coax him out of killing me?" replied the aged ranger. "He had his chance and I was taking mine."

CANAL YIELDS TWO BODIES.

VOTERS DEFEAT LABOR RULE IN AUSTRALIA STATE

Victoria Crushes Langism; Heeds Economy Plea.

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

MELBOURNE, Australia, May 15.—[Sunday.]—The United Australian party, headed by Sir Stanley Argyle, yesterday overwhelmingly defeated the labor government of Premier E. J. Hogan in the general election in the state of Victoria. The result is considered a sweeping victory for the continuance of the plan of Federal Prime Minister Joseph A. Lyons calling for drastic economy and for reduction of wages and salaries in all public services.

Sir Stanley becomes premier of Victoria. Hogan, resigned his post recently and is now in London. He regained his seat in parliament as a conservative Laborite by acclamation. While he favored Prime Minister Lyons' economy plan, Chief Secretary Thomas Tunnicliffe, who has been acting as premier, refused Victoria's adherence.

Labor Party Crushed.

The United Australian party will control the new parliament of sixty-five seats with 49 votes, including 31 members from its own ranks, 15 from the Country party, and three from the Labor party. The Labor party opposition has 16 seats.

Sir Stanley characterized the result as a "decisive victory of a party standing for sound finance and political honesty over the forces of Langism."

Premier J. T. Lang of New South Wales was dismissed from office yesterday as a result of a long dispute with the commonwealth government which opposed his policy of defaulting debts.

Lang Out; Market Rises.

SYDNEY, N. S. W., May 14.—(AP)—B. S. B. Stevens of the United Australian party became premier of New South Wales today, succeeding J. T. Lang, who was removed from office yesterday by Sir Philip Game, the governor. The change was the culmination of a long dispute between the provincial and the commonwealth governments over Lang's default on foreign obligations. With his dismissal, issues on the local stock exchange moved upward from one to ten points.

MICHIGAN GOVERNOR SIGNS BILLS PASSED BY THE LEGISLATURE

Lansing, Mich., May 14.—[Special.]—Gov. Wilber M. Brucker signed a number of special session bills today, including the Horton measure pertaining to highway taxation which abolishes the general county road tax.

Another bill approved today is the Armstrong measure creating a commission of nine members to study state employment with a view to effecting economies and reducing the number of state pay rolls.

The Dykstra bill, considered a companion to the Horton weight tax diversion bill, was also approved.

The Espie bill removing personal responsibility of local treasurers for the safety of depositories in which they place public funds, was signed, although the governor objected to an amendment suspending depository bond requirements for public funds until July 1, 1933.

A measure prohibiting new covert road construction for five years was the most important of the bills approved.

MRS. SARAH RICE, 75, DIES OF FALL.

HOUSE VOTE ON BEER IS ASSURED BY SIGNATURES

Test to Be Forced by Petition.

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

Washington, D. C., May 14.—[Special.]—A house vote on the proposal to legalize beer was assured today when wet members obtained the necessary 145th signature to a petition to bring to the floor the question of discharging the ways and means committee from further consideration of the O'Connor-Hull beer bill.

The bill provides for modification of the Volstead act to permit the manufacture and sale of beer of 2.75 per cent alcohol by volume and proposes a tax of 3 cents a pint on the legalized beverage.

The 145th signature needed to make the petition effective was affixed by Representative Carl G. Bachmann [Rep., W. Va.] amid the cheers of house wets. The 143d name was that of Representative Paul Kvale [Farmer-Labor, Minn.], who represents the congressional district formerly represented by Andrew Volsted.

Claim It Will Raise 500 Million.

The O'Connor-Hull bill, which its sponsors claim will raise 500 million annually through the proposed tax on beer, was referred upon its introduction to the ways and means committee, and its passage urged there as a revenue measure. The committee refused to give it a favorable report and efforts to attach a beer amendment to the revenue bill failed of adoption.

House wets then undertook to make use of the newly liberalized house rules, which permit 145 members by petition to bring to the floor the question of whether or not a measure unduly delayed in committee shall be brought to the floor for a showdown vote.

The vote on the discharge of the committee will take place on May 23. Had the final name not been signed today the vote on beer at this session would have been impossible since May 23 is the only "discharge" day remaining before adjournment and under the house rules a petition must lay on the table seven legislative days before the discharge day on which it becomes effective.

List of Midwest Signers.

Representative William E. Hull [Rep., Ill.] co-sponsor of the beer bill, with Representative John J. O'Connor [Dem., N. Y.] said immediately following the signing of the last signature to the petition that while he hardly dared hope for its passage he felt confident the people of the country would advocate it if they knew the details of the bill.

"I believe that if people throughout the country understood that 2.75 per cent beer was non-intoxicating that it would stand up under the 18th amendment and would raise 500 million dollars to help balance the budget," he said, "they would urge their congressmen to vote for the passage of the measure."

Representatives from central states who signed the petition were:

ILLINOIS: Republicans — W. E. Hull, De Priest, Britton, Chindblom. Democrats — Kelly, Beam, Sabath, Igoe, Schuetz, Kunz, Maj. Karch, Dieterich.

INDIANA: Democrats—Boehne, Larrabee, Pettengill.

MICHIGAN: Republicans—Clancy, McLeod, Person. Democrat—Hart.

IOWA: Democrat—Jacobsen.

SOCIETY ATTENDS WEDDING

Decorations Simple

A fashionable throng of guests witnessed the wedding of Miss Barbara Neff and Solomon B. Smith, son of Mr. and Mrs. Solomon A. Smith, at 4:30 o'clock yesterday afternoon in St. Chrysostom's church. The altar, with simple decorations of calla lilies, tall tapers, and ferns, formed an impressive background for the blue and white motif of the bridal party.

The bride, who was given in marriage by her brother, Richard Neff, wore an Empire gown of cream colored satin with a surplice neckline, three-quarter length bell sleeves, and a flowing train. Her wedding veil of rose pointe lace was draped to fall in points over the shoulders before billowing out over the length of her train. Instead of flowers, she carried a white prayer book which belonged to her mother, the late Mrs. Nettleton Neff.

The maid of honor was the bride's sister, Miss Louise Neff, and the six bridesmaids were Miss Elizabeth Rumsey, Miss Jane Schuttler, Mrs. Louis C. Sudler, Mrs. W. Press Hodgkins, Miss Louise Brewer, and the bridegroom's sister, Mrs. M. Scott Bromwell.

Edward Byron Smith served as his brother's best man. The ushers included Scott Bromwell, Press Hodgkins, Gardner Brown, Huntington Eldridge, George S. Stevenson, John P. Wilson Jr., Frank H. Woods Jr., and Malcolm Stevenson of Chicago, and Irving H. Peck Jr., and Herbert H. Stratford of New York.

The ceremony was followed by a small reception at the Neff residence at 50 Bellevue place. After a month's honeymoon in Bermuda, Mr. and Mrs. Smith will reside at 26 Scott street.

WOMEN LAUNCH A NATION-WIDE ATTACK ON DRYS

Mayor's Proclamation Opens Repeal Week Here.

BY KATHLEEN M'LAUGHLIN.

By a mayoral proclamation issued yesterday, this is Repeal week in Chicago. With other large cities of the country, Chicago will have various demonstrations against the eighteenth amendment during the week. Locally the activities will be largely under the direction of the Illinois division of the Woman's Organization for National Prohibition Reform, of which Mrs. George Brennan is executive head.

Mayor Cermak's proclamation, announced yesterday from the headquarters of the Illinois division at 700 North Michigan avenue, constituted the opening of the local offensive.

Indorses the Plan.

"I heartily indorse the movement in which you are engaged," the document read, "to liberate the people of the United States from the most oppressive and crime breeding law that has ever been written into our constitution.

"I am in full sympathy with your plan to enroll a large number of members from Illinois in your organization, so that the public policy so often and repeatedly expressed by a vote of the people of Illinois may more formidably overcome the narrow, bigoted, and impractical measure adopted by our nation at a time when the people were harassed and distraught by the world war."

Enrollment of 100,000 members in the state will be the major effort of the women's group during the week. There are, at present, nearly 700,000 members in the country, of which 65,000 belong to the Illinois division.

Hundreds of women, enrolled as active workers, will participate tomorrow in a motorcade of cars leaving Broadway and Wilson avenue at 10 o'clock on a tour of the city to obtain signatures. Short talks will be made at various points, and cards offered to be signed. Mrs. Ernest R. Graham is chairman of the motorcade.

Plan Other Activities.

Elsewhere, other women will be promoting the campaign in many ways. Shops, theaters, elevated and railroad stations will be manned by the antiprohibitionists. Radio, outdoor billboard and advertising appeals will be carried on. Factories will be canvassed in the attempt to recruit all dissenters against the legislation.

Chairmen of the committees include Mrs. Mark Trude and Mrs. George R. Nichols Jr., hotel lobbies; Mrs. Valentine C. Bartlett and Mrs. Clifford Rodman, theaters and movies; Mrs. Vincent Healy and Mrs. Richard Frank, shops; Mrs. Stanley Field, railroad and elevated stations; Mrs. William H. Mitchell and Mrs. Leslie Wheeler, radio, billboard and other advertising; Mrs. George Heed, publicity.

20 GAMBLING HOUSES RAIDED; WARNED TO CLOSE

Twenty alleged gambling houses on the north, northwest, and west sides were visited yesterday by state's attorney's police and ordered to close up. The drive, headed by Assistant Chief Investigator John Leonard, was described as the forerunner of a campaign to close every gambling house in the city. All the spots visited operated handbooks. In several cases the squads broke down the doors, and in one case found the place empty. No one was arrested.

400 ATTEND PARTY FOR LIEUT. HAYES, POLICEMAN 50 YEARS

Nearly 400 south park officials, policemen, employes and friends attended a dinner given for Lieut. Michael C. Hayes in Windermere West hotel last night in celebration of his fiftieth anniversary as a member of the park police force.

LIEUT. MICHAEL C. HAYES.

A gold star set with a diamond was presented by Edward J. Kelly, president of the south park board. The emblem was the gift of Lieut. Hayes' associates and others of the park system. Among the speakers were Commissioner Michael L. Igoe; Mr. Kelly; Capt. Schramm of the west park force, and Capt. Sammis of the Lincoln park force.

Lieut. Hayes is 72 years old. He is considered an expert in handling crowds, especially in the big outdoor events in the Stadium. One of the largest throngs he helped direct was at last year's Chicagoland Music Festival, sponsored by THE TRIBUNE, in the Stadium.

STOLEN AUTO'S OWNER IS GIVEN PAINT JOB FREE

Within a week the automobile of Charles L. Bradford has twice changed appearance, both times because of thieves. Bradford is a salesman from Kansas City. Last week thieves stole it from in front of the Cass hotel, 640 North Wabash avenue. Yesterday police recovered the car, but it had a changed appearance. It had been painted over in another color.

Last evening the auto was stolen for the second time and from the same parking place. Three hours later police again found it, this time being stripped at Randolph and Ada streets. Once more Bradford's car had changed appearance. Its tires, lights and other exterior accessories were gone. Bradford said the insurance company would make those good.

CONVICT MAYOR OF PITTSBURGH; FACES PRISON

Guilty of Malfeasance in Office.

Butler, Pa., May 14.—(AP)—Mayor Charles H. Kline of Pittsburgh tonight faces one year imprisonment, removal from office, and a $500 fine.

The dapper, affable mayor who has tendered many keys to the city to visiting notables in Pittsburgh, and in turn has been knighted and fêted abroad, was convicted today of malfeasance in office. Bertram L. Succop, former army colonel, whom he discharged as city supplies director, was also convicted.

The charges resulted from an investigation of city buying methods. Kline was convicted on one count and Succop on 29. The law provides a maximum penalty of one year imprisonment and a $500 fine on each count. The sentence is left to the court's discretion.

The jury recommended that the lightest sentences possible be imposed. Removal of the accused from office is mandatory.

The defense moved for a new trial and arrest of judgment.

Arguments on the motions will be heard later. The mayor, meanwhile, will remain in office.

Mayor Kline testified at his trial that his many duties forced him to entrust city purchasing to subordinates. The law holds him responsible. Among the charges were that supplies were bought from high bidders and contracts were let without bids being offered.

BOOST SILVER, END DEPRESSION, HOUSE ADVISED

Coinage Committee Urges World Conference.

BY ARTHUR SEARS HENNING.
[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

Washington, D. C., May 14.—[Special.]—The economic depression throughout the world can be cured by raising commodity prices and commodity prices can be raised by restoring the former value of silver as a medium of exchange, according to the report the coinage committee made to the house today in recommending adoption of the Somers resolution for an international monetary conference.

After months of investigation a subcommittee of the coinage committee reached the conclusion that the depression is largely the result of the demonetization of silver in some countries and debasement of silver coinage in others and it is to undo these acts and reëstablish the former bases of metallic money systems that the committee would have an international conference called.

Urge International Conference.

"We recommend, therefore," says the report, "that the President of the United States immediately issue a call for a conference of all nations interested in the restoration of the commodity price level though the stabilization of the international exchanges by restoring the equilibrium in the metallic bases of the money systems or otherwise; such conference to be held at the earliest possible date, but not later than July 1, 1932, and in such city as the President may designate.

"We recommend that it be conveyed to the proposed conferees that, as debts of all nature are fixed and measured in money, but, in fact, are paid in commodities or their proceeds, the problem should be approached from the angle of the price level which can be most effectually controlled through the money systems, because these systems have a disproportionate power of leverage on the large body of commodities through the price level which regulates their movement.

Normal Money Ratio Needed.

"All these systems, whatever their local nature, have their bases in the two precious metals, so that a normal relationship between these two is a prerequisite to equilibrium in money and through money in the price level of commodities."

The senate at the close of the last congress requested the President to call an international silver conference, but nothing came of it. According to the state department the suggestion was not hospitably received by the European powers. Senator William E. Borah [Rep., Ida.] recently charged in the senate that the administration did not proceed in good faith to induce other nations to participate in such a conference. Representative Andrew Somers [Dem., N. Y.], author of the resolution, reported to the house today. Senator Reed Smoot [Rep., Utah] and Senator Wesley L. Jones [Rep., Wash.] recently talked with the President and became convinced that Mr. Hoover is now willing to submit definite proposals to the powers.

Raise Prices; Cut War Debts.

The house committee says in its report that the raising of the commodity price levels should appeal to the nations that are debtors of the United States because the debts would be reduced in inverse ratio to the rise of commodity prices.

"The nations," says the committee, "which decline to attend a conference which will be called for the sole purpose of reëstablishing the normal basis of economic relations between debtors and creditors, thus materially favoring such nations as are debtors of the United States, will automatically have served notice on this country that their true intention is not to reduce their debts to the United States, but rather to induce our government to establish the principle of the capacity to pay at a time when that capacity is virtually nonexistent."

United States Might Go On Alone.

Then the report cryptically observes:

"In such event the inference is clear and this government should at once accept the only other alternative which the self-preservation of our people imposes upon it."

The meaning of this, according to Representative Edgar Howard [Dem., Neb.], a member of the committee, who once was secretary to the silver tongued Bryan, is that if the powers decline a conference the United States shall proceed independently to enlarge the employment of silver as a circulating medium. Mr. Howard says he made this the condition of his signature of the report.

"We recommend," the report concludes, "that, despite noncoöperators, the conference be held with such countries as are willing to make a common effort for a common cause, so that together with them we may devise ways and means to cope with a condition which threatens the very foundations of our economic life."

Denounce Credit Inflation.

The subcommittee dismissed as unsound inflation other schemes for raising commodity prices, asserting that "world commodity price levels can only be raised soundly and effectively through strengthening the metallic bases of the money systems by coöperative international action; not by addition to an already overburdened credit structure."

What the powers have done to silver in the last 12 years was another "crime of '73" on a larger scale, the committee found.

"Our investigation," says the report, "has revealed that certain European nations, in an effort to protect their manufacturing industries by affording a better cost basis through lower prices of raw materials and foodstuffs, suddenly and either inadvertently and unintentionally or quite deliberately depressed the world commodity price levels below the point that admits of any profit to the American producer. We find that this result has followed directly and definitely from certain governmental acts, the effects of which are clearly traceable so that all the important facts are well sustained by the evidence we have gathered.

Sell Silver for Gold.

"Anything that suddenly changes the supply of money affects its value in commodities and anything that suddenly threatens to destroy the value of silver money in Asia causes a flight of silver capital which is converted into gold or gold exchange in tremendous amounts, thus rarefying gold, which thereupon rises in terms of commodities. This also constitutes a drain upon the central banks of the gold standard countries by sterilizing their stock of gold and threatening their credit structures which automatically inflate in relation to the reduced volume of their metallic base.

"Our investigation has shown that legislation affecting silver has had a double effect: [1] It has decreased the metallic base of money in the world and [2] at the same time has caused a sudden and violent increase in the demand for gold in nations which had previously used silver as the base of their monetary systems."

"Prices Follow Silver."

Commodity prices tobogganed after the decision of the United States government in 1919 to sell silver in large amounts, the British government's debasement of silver coinage in 1920, the Indian government's demonetization of silver in 1925 and similar action by Indo-China and Belgium in 1928 and 1929, the committee found.

"The blow which silver received during the interval of twelve years is attributable to governmental action and not to an abnormal increase of silver production, as no increase has taken place," says the report. "Debasement and demonetization and the flight of capital which they superinduced are the direct consequences of governmental acts. If the stability of money has thus been destroyed by governmental acts it can be restored by the same process and, therefore, this committee is convinced that it is possible to restore confidence in money, stabilize its purchasing power and raise commodity prices through the instrumentality of sound legislation and administration."

CANNON LOSES FIGHT TO HALT APPEAL OF CASE

Washington, D. C., May 14.—[U.P.]—Bishop James Cannon Jr. of the Methodist Episcopal Church, South, today lost his effort to prevent the government appealing its case against him to the District of Columbia Court of Appeals.

The Appellate court ruled that it would hear the government's appeal some time in October. Cannon had opposed hearing of the appeal on technical grounds.

Cannon and Ada L. Burroughs of Richmond, Va., were charged with violating the federal corrupt practices act in connection with the 1928 presidential campaign, in which Cannon was active against Alfred E. Smith. The District of Columbia Supreme court quashed the indictment against them on technical grounds and the government sought to appeal from the ruling.

Maurice Sciapio, Chicago Singer, Makes Paris Debut

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

PARIS, May 14.—Maurice Sciapio, Chicago basso, who has just won the rare honor of a three year contract with the Opera Comique, made his debut last night in the rôle of Angelotti in "Tosca." His full, resonant voice, skillful singing and convincing acting earned him generous praise from Parisian critics. He will be featured next season in operas in which the leading part is bass.

100 MINISTERS IN CONTEST FOR 2 BISHOP POSTS

Boston and Detroit Men Are in Lead.

Atlantic City, N. J., May 14.—(AP)—More than a hundred Methodist Episcopal ministers were entered in the balloting today as the general conference of the church started the task of picking two new bishops.

Dr. Lewis O. Hartman of Boston, Mass., chairman of the New England delegation and editor of the Zion's Herald, received more than half the 547 votes necessary for election on the first ballot, which ordinarily is considered only nominating in character.

Detroit Man Second.

His total of 228 votes compared with 147 for Joseph H. M. Gray, pastor of the Central church of Detroit, who was second highest in the totals announced early in the evening by the tellers who had worked many hours tabulating the results of the first ballot on which 112 ministers were listed for possible Episcopal elevation. Fifty-one of them received only one vote each.

Both Dr. Hartman and Mr. Gray received a large vote for promotion to bishop at the Kansas City conference four years ago. Neither could attain the two-thirds vote necessary for election at that time.

J. Ralph Magee, one of several ministers whose name was discussed prominently as a candidate before the balloting started, was third on the initial total with 131 votes. No other of the 112 received more than 100 votes.

Peoria Man Gets 61.

Merle N. Smith of Pasadena, Cal., received 93; A. E. Day of Pittsburgh 92; A. S. Cushman of Rochester, N. Y., 89; Morton S. Rice of Detroit 70; Loren M. Edwards of Denver 64; W. E. Shaw of Peoria, Ill., 61; O. W. Fifer of Indianapolis 43, and W. E. Hammaker of Youngstown, O., 43.

After the results of the first ballot were announced both Dr. Smith and Dr. Rice withdrew their names. The second ballot then was cast and sealed for tabulation on Monday.

Meanwhile the conference had enacted legislation reducing episcopal pensions approximately 50 per cent in a compromise on a proposal to circumscribe the privileges of a retired bishop by returning him to his annual conference in the same status as a minister and at a minister's pension.

Sympathy for Lindberghs.

The conference adopted a resolution of sympathy to Col. and Mrs. Charles A. Lindbergh over the kidnaping and slaying of their son.

Frank A. Horne of New York City asked the conference to approve a request to the President for the appointment of government officials, economic and social scientists, and representatives of agriculture and industry to study aned outline a plan to cope with economic conditions.

ICELAND PARLIAMENT PLANS REFERENDUM ON PROHIBITION LAW

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

REYKJAVIK, Iceland, May 14.—Since there is little prospect of the althing accepting the bill for abolition of prohibition at this session, three members representing the two major political parties have introduced a resolution proposing a national referendum on the question of abolition at the next general election, which is likely to be this summer. Two questions will be listed in the referendum—whether the voter favors prohibition; if so, does the voter agree to regulation of the import and sale of intoxicants.

Finland Fights Bootleggers.

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

HELSINGFORS, Finland, May 13.—The Finnish government is pursuing a drastic policy to defeat bootleggers. Pursuit of suspects beyond territorial waters is permitted by law, but it is limited to chasing vessels flying flags of countries adhering to the Baltic union anti-smuggling pact. Booze ships invariably carry colors of nonsignatory countries.

The foreign office, therefore, has addressed inquiries to the various countries not included in the union requesting their suggestions for dealing with abuses. The first reply, received today from Bolivia, suggests chasing the smugglers with warships, seizing the abused flag, and punishing the offenders according to the laws of Finland.

Farm Board Soon to Die, Senator Moses Predicts

Concord, N. H., May 14.—(AP)—United States Senator George H. Moses thinks the federal farm board will soon die a natural death.

He made the assertion today in a letter received by a Rockingham county constituent, who had asked him to explain his stand on certain national problems.

Moses said the end of the farm board would be brought about "by reason of exhaustion of its funds and changing conditions which will render its continuance unnecessary."

COUNTY HOSPITAL IS SANITARY NOW, CRITICS ARE TOLD

Faults Remedied Since Survey, Heads Say.

DR. KARL MEYER.

Dr. Karl Meyer, chief of the surgical staff at the county hospital and assistant warden, and Dr. Frederick Tice, head of the medical staff, joined with Warden Michael Zimmer and members of the county board yesterday in asserting that most of the ills pointed out in Dr. Malcolm T. MacEachern's survey of the institution already have been remedied.

The report was presented to the hospital committee of the county board by Dr. Franklin H. Martin, director general of the American College of Surgeons, on Friday. In the report Dr. MacEachern charged that there was a shortage of sterilizing equipment and instruments, that the walls and ceilings of wards and operating rooms were in an insanitary condition, and that the death rate was unusually high. Many changes in the administrative phases of the hospital were suggested.

Report Fair When Made.

Dr. Tice voiced the opinions of the majority of the staff physicians, he said yesterday, when he stated that the report was fair and accurate for the time when it was made. He explained, however, that Dr. MacEachern had made his survey almost a year ago and that his findings were generally known to the hospital directors months ago.

"During the intervening months the hospital staff has been busy and physical changes such as washing of walls and the painting of wards, operating rooms, and corridors have been carried out. The staff has been reorganized along the lines suggested by Dr. MacEachern and new sterilization equipment has been purchased and the old repaired where necessary," Dr. Tice said.

Jobless Given Work.

"The governor's relief committee has sent us workmen for the jobs we all knew were necessary and the resulting change is very great. It is unfair and misleading to accept Dr. MacEachern's report at face value as of today.

"We could spend more money if we had it, but I'm sure the county hospital now is more efficient medically, surgically, and on the administrative side than any other such charitable institution in existence."

Warden Zimmer said that the findings of the survey were not critical and that he had no quarrel with the report. He also said all the physical needs could be remedied if funds were available.

Money Held Only Need.

Dr. Meyer also asserted that the basis of all the criticism in the survey was financial. Every change suggested could be achieved easily if the hospital were given a large appropriation.

"In questioning members of our staff I have found that none complain of the physical equipment. We are, however, overloaded with patients and our staff is cut to the bone," Dr. Meyer stated.

He explained the high death rate cited by Dr. MacEachern by saying that the county hospital is primarily an "accident hospital."

Many Dying When Received.

"As a charitable institution we cannot take in selective cases, but we must take every type and act in all emergencies. Police cases of every sort, from men and women who have attempted suicide to those probably fatally injured in accidents, are sent to us. The deaths in hopeless cases count against us," he said.

"I have investigated many other charity hospitals myself and I feel sure that the county hospital is on a par with the best in the country."

President Emmett Whealan of the county board said that he knew the hospital had need of more money, but he added it is impossible at present to increase the appropriation.

IT'S TULIP TIME HERE AS WELL AS IN MICHIGAN

HOLLAND'S TULIP TIME PARADE IS DAZZLING AFFAIR

Michigan Fete Enters Second Day.

BY VIRGINIA GARDNER.

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

Holland, Mich., May 14.—[Special.]—An ardent sun today made up for any coldness a late spring may have shown to Holland's tulips and brought even the most timid buds to a triumphant blossoming.

The second day of the annual tulip time festival therefore proved a complete success and although the sun beat mercilessly on thousands of flaxen heads as townsfolk and hundreds from neighboring towns watched the parade of bands this afternoon, no one minded the heat in the least. A good scorching hot day was just what the tulips needed, it was agreed.

The Ottawa Hills High school from Grand Rapids, Mich., won the first prize of $50 contributed by the tulip festival committee to the band adjudged best in the parade.

Girls' Band Wins Applause.

The Muskegon Heights High school band won second on the strength of their playing aside from the fact of their flashing orange and black caps and white pants.

The Grand Haven high school band won $30 as third prize, and the Benton Harbor High school band won $10 as fourth prize.

At that, the Benton Harbor band won more than its share of applause, but it was a girls' band which did a lot of fancy marching.

Fully as colorful as the parade, were the sidelines, full of yellow haired blue eyed children, the girls dressed in the long full skirts, white kerchief, cap and apron of the Netherlands, the boys in pantaloons and brilliant red blouses. Children who were barely out of arms clattered around easily in wooden shoes.

In the bright sunlight the ranks of lavender tulips, or orange-red tulips, of pale pink and mauve tulips, and tulips of 100 varieties and shades appeared to keep step with the parading bandsmen.

Tomorrow the 28 churches in Holland, bedecked with tulips, and the city parks and gardens will be the chief interests of the day. The early Dutch fathers who sailed up the Black late to its head, where the Black river flows into it, and there in 1847 founded the town of Holland, incorporated as a city in 1867, did so because they wanted religious freedom.

Throughout the coming week high school and college operettas, concerts, flower show displays, home garden exhibits, and other friendly entertainment will be provided. Monday is Governor's day, with Gov. Wilbur M. Brucker the guest of honor.

GEORGE WASHINGTON'S BIRTHPLACE IS TURNED OVER TO GOVERNMENT

Wakefield, Va., May 14.—(AP)—The lands and buildings of Wakefield, birthplace of George Washington, were given into the custody of the federal government today by the Wakefield National Memorial association.

After years of effort, motivated largely by the patriotic interest of the late Mrs. Josephine Wheelwright Rust, the organization's first and only president, the association has completely restored Washington's birthplace to its colonial aspect.

Mrs. Anthony Payne Cook of Cooksville, Pa., first vice president of the association, made the address of presentation at the ceremonies this morning.

Secretary Wilbur was present to accept for the United States.

Bullets Fly at Bandits as They Rob Food Shop

Lester Hoffman, owner of the Sunny Food shop, 640 Addison street, fired three shots at two bandits when they fled after holding him up in his store this morning. The robbery was committed a short distance away from Town Hall station. Hoffman's shots attracted a squad.

JAPAN DEMANDS POWERS ASSURE SHANGHAI SAFETY

PARIS, May 14.—[U. P.]—Japan pointed out in a note to France and other governments today that Japanese troops have been withdrawn from Shanghai and that, therefore, it is necessary for the powers to assure protection of their concessions as soon as possible.

Accuse Japan of Atrocities.

GENEVA, May 14.—[U. P.]—The Japanese were accused of perpetrating "atrocities against all the principles of mankind in Manchuria," in a communciation submitted by the Chinese delegation to the league of nations today.

The Chinese quoted a telegram from Gen. Ma Chan-shan, former Chinese ally of the Japanese in Manchuria and now supposed to be opposing them, in which he said Japanese troops entered the town of Tungho, about 105 miles east of Harbin, and ravaged the place cruelly.

Ma charged that the Japanese set fire to buildings, "looted foodstuffs, disarmed police, arrested and imprisoned on a gunboat both the magistrate and director of public safety, killed women refugees with bayonets, sealed the mouths of pits where civilians had been hiding and burned them to death."

POLAND TO HANG 2 AS RED SPIES; WOMAN GETS LIFE

[Copyright: 1932: By the New York Times.]

WARSAW, May 14.—Two men will be put to death here as soviet spies early tomorrow morning. They are Wladyslaw Borakowski, a civilian clerk attached to the Polish general staff, and Jan Bakowski, an engineer.

They were tried under summary jurisdiction procedure in the utmost secrecy and nothing but a laconic communique was permitted to appear in the newspapers. The communique said that the two men and a woman, a cabaret dancer named Tiodozja Majewska, had been arrested on April 30 and tried in Warsaw's court yesterday and today. The men were sentenced to death and the woman to life imprisonment.

The defense counsel, consisting of three lawyers appointed by the court, have appealed to President Moscicki to grant a pardon, but rejection of the plea is held certain and the gallows have already been erected in Warsaw's citadel.

Fireman Dies from Fall Off Engine in Quarters

Michael Morrissey, a city fireman, died early this morning in the Franklin Boulevard hospital of a skull fracture which he suffered Feb. 2 when he fell off a fire engine. The accident occurred in the station house of engine company 31, 2012 Congress street, when Morrissey leaped to his place on the engine in response to a still alarm and slipped, falling to the floor. Since the accident he had been transferred to engine company 12. Morrissey lived at 3848 Lexington street. He is survived by his widow and a son.

MEXICO BREAKS WITH PERU IN ROW OVER ENVOY

Diplomatic Mission Told to Come Home.

MEXICO CITY, May 14.—(AP)—Foreign Minister Manuel C. Tellez announced tonight that diplomatic relations between Mexico and Peru had been severed.

The Peruvian government, the foreign minister revealed, recently asked Mexico to withdraw Minister Juan B. Cabral and his staff from Lima, saying they no longer were acceptable as diplomatic representatives. Peru's action, Tellez said, was based on alleged charges made by Haya de la Torre, a Peruvian, that while in Mexico he had used Mexican diplomatic pouches to transfer private correspondence to Peru.

Peru charged that the Mexican mission in Lima had "intervened in internal politics and served plans of communistic elements to disturb the public order."

Orders were sent to the diplomatic mission in Lima today to withdraw from the country and passports were handed to Oscar Barrenechea y Raygadas, the Peruvian minister here.

According to dispatches from Lima, the controversy between the two countries was understood to be based on documents found by the police in a raid on the headquarters of the opposition Aprista party, which has been charged by the Peruvian government with responsibility for the recent naval revolt.

Among the documents seized in the raid, it was reported, was a letter from De la Torre saying he had sent a communication into Peru in a Mexican diplomatic pouch.

HOOVER'S TALKS HALT RECOVERY, GARNER CLAIMS

Blames Statements for Unsettled Conditions.

speaker, "that he cannot even let the department of justice, the real law enforcement agency of the government, make a statement on the Lindbergh case. The White House statement on that case is unprecedented; no other President has ever done such a thing."

In the house as well as the senate there was talk of continuing beyond June 10. It was announced that a nonpartisan group had already been formed with the purpose of carrying out "constructive legislation to meet the present crisis."

Trio Issue Statement.

Three members were chosen as a steering committee: Representatives James Mead of New York, representing the Democrats; Clyde Kelly of Pennsylvania, representing the Republicans, and F. H. La Guardia of New York, representing the radicals.

Following a meeting today the three issued a statement which declared:

"Only one problem confronts this congress today—the depression which is working deadly injury to every American. Only one duty rests upon congress today—to wage war upon that depression. We propose to meet that problem and perform our duty before the session adjourns. Aggressive, constructive action is necessary. The measures already passed have maintained bank credits. That we have seen is not sufficient if we are to cure the evils of unemployment. There can be no restoration of confidence without the assurance of an upward trend in employment, prices, and sales. There can be no revival in industry, no payment of farm debts, no wages earned, and no return of commercial activities unless and until we put men to work and provide for the restoration of the purchasing power of the American people. That we propose to do."

Representative Henry T. Rainey [Dem., Ill.], majority floor leader, issued a statement praising the relief demand which the railroad brotherhoods yesterday addressed to the President. It was the first such demand, he said, that had pointed out that the country's isolation behind tariff walls was primarily responsible for the stagnation of industry.

Fears Dole Inevitable.

"A dole in this country is inevitable," Mr. Rainey declared, "unless we can restore international trade.

"We have before us today the challenge of a great communistic nation and we must meet it," he went on. "We must furnish our workmen with employment or we must suffer the consequences. The right to work is a right which belongs to every man, and the reason for the very existence of a capitalistic nation depends on its willingness and its ability to furnish work for men who are willing and able to work. If it fails to do this the consequences are apparent, and the statement of the brotherhoods indicates what the consequences may be.

"The country is indebted to the brotherhoods for the plain, forceful, indisputable declaration they have just issued in their plea to President Hoover, and the whole thing is up to him.

"If the policies of his party keep him from suggesting to congress the obvious remedies the time has come to turn this government over as speedily as possible to a party which will carry into effect the suggestions of the railroad brotherhoods."

Bandits Kidnap Manager, Seize $1,672 Pay Roll

Three bandits yesterday took a pay roll of $1,672 from James Way, manager of Briede & Rogovsky, wholesale tailors, at 833 West Jackson boulevard. Way had returned from a bank with the money when the bandit trio threatened him with revolvers as he entered the building which houses the tailor company. They forced him into their automobile, took the money, and put him out of the car at Morgan and Congress streets.

Senator Collapses

SENATOR M'KELLAR.

Washington, D. C., May 14.—[Special.] — Senator Kenneth McKellar [Dem., Tenn.], a member of the senate's special economy committee, collapsed at his hotel here today, causing a postponement of the committee's scheduled meeting tomorrow. Senator McKellar was taken to a hospital, where he was reported to be threatened with pneumonia. His illness was said to be the result of overwork on the economy program. Tonight his condition was said to be "satisfactory."

SENATE RADICALS OPEN DRIVE FOR HIGH INCOME TAX

Seek to Put 1918 Levies Into Revenue Bill.

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

Washington, D. C., May 14.—[Special.]—Senate radicals made their drive today to write into the billion dollar revenue bill the 1918 income tax rates, as proposed by Senator James Couzens [Rep., Mich.].

JAMES COUZENS.

They sought, according to their claims, to raise an additional 486 million dollars through the income tax, or 331 millions more than are expected to be raised by the bill as approved by the senate finance committee.

By so doing, they declared, the major tax burden would be placed on those best able to pay, and excise taxes, which they asserted were proposals to levy on hoped for production, might be stricken from the bill.

For the greater portion of the day's session the senate was a forum where speakers tossed back and forth their views on the social implications of the various proposed income tax rates.

Radicals Back Couzens Plan.

For the radical group, which backed the Couzens amendment to a man, Senator C. C. Dill [Dem., Wash.] led off with the assertion that congress wasn't going to get revenue from "the eight million unemployed, from the farmers with wheat at 30 cents, hogs at 3 cents, and cotton at 5 cents, or from the depositors in the four thousand banks which have closed."

The choice of a source of revenue lies, therefore, he said, between those barely making a living and those with adequate and with large means. He saw in higher taxes on higher incomes a means of "keeping wealth out of the chains which are pushing independent business men to the wall." He agreed with a suggestion by Senator Huey Long [radical Dem., La.] that if high taxes drove the wealthy to invest in tax free state and local securities it would serve a good end in that it would thus put wealth at work for the common good.

"The old idea was that a man could make just as much as he pleased," the Washington senator concluded. "But a younger generation is growing up. And it's not going to beg for a living. It is going to see that the laws, and the constitution if necessary, are amended to give a fair opportunity to everybody. Those who insist on sticking to the old theory will find that they have only accelerated the change and perhaps driven it to more drastic lengths."

Cohen in Maiden Speech.

Making his maiden speech, John S. Cohen, Georgia's new Democratic editor-senator, said that the 1918 rates would work no hardship, for, he declared:

"If there be no net income, there will be no payment, and certainly those who enjoy net incomes in a period such as this cannot with justice complain of a nonconfiscatory contribution to support the government."

The higher income tax rates proposed in the committee are expected to raise an additional 155 millions, Senator Couzens explained. The 1918 rates, he estimated, would raise another 331 millions or 486 millions above the present rates. He admitted that the treasury disagreed with this estimate of an extra 331 millions and thought the increase would amount to only 193 millions.

Even so, he argued, 193 millions would permit the excise taxes on automobiles, rubber, chewing gum, and lubricating oil to be stricken from the bill and the tax on admissions cut in half.

Huey Long Breaks In.

Senator Park Trammell [Dem., Fla.] objected that the 1918 rates, with normal tax rates of 6 per cent on the first $4,000 of net income and 12 per cent on all net income above that, would fall heaviest on the "average taxpayer."

Senator Trammell produced figures to show that the 1918 rates fell heaviest on the lower brackets. Under the present laws the $1,000 to $5,000 net income class pays $8,950,000, Senator Trammell showed; under the committee bill this class would pay $64,500,000; under the Couzens amendment, it would pay $189,196,200.

"The average family does not pay an income tax at all," Senator Long broke in. "The average man would be happy to have a $3,000 income on which to pay $60."

"You are going to take it out of a man's right pocket or out of his left," supplied Senator Millard E. Tydings [Dem., Md.]. "If you don't take $60 in income taxes, you are going to do it when he buys a car or a radio or goes to the movies."

Norris Adds His Bit.

It was brought out that on an income of $3,000 the bill as passed by the house would levy a tax of $3; as reported by the senate committee, a tax of $4; and as Senator Cousens would amend it, a tax of $60.

"It is just as important," said Senator George W. Norris [radical Rep., Neb.], "to consider how much a taxpayer would have left as how much would be taken from him."

He read from a table showing that under the 1918 rates a man with a million dollar net income would have $300,000 left; with a half million dollar income, $200,000; $100,000 income, $65,000; $50,000 income, $39,000; $30,000 income, $25,000; $10,000 income, $9,170 left.

But Lewis Disagrees.

"With people starving, children half clothed, persons with that much money clear at the end of a year should consider themselves favored," he said.

Senator J. Hamilton Lewis [Dem., Ill.] disagreed. He believed persons who had made fortunes only to have them taken away from them would not seek to make other fortunes. Opportunities for work, therefore, would grow fewer. He reminded Senator Norris that in 1918 the heaviest taxes fell on the war profiteers.

Police Return Same Stolen Car Twice in 12 Hours

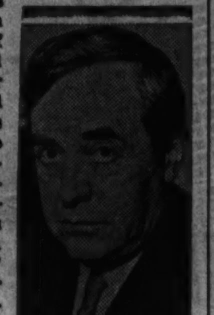
For the second time in little more than twelve hours the Chicago police last night found and returned the stolen automobile of Charles L. Bradford, a salesman from Kansas City. The car was first stolen about two weeks ago. The police got it for him yesterday morning. Last night Mr. Bradford parked it in front of the Cass hotel, 640 North Wabash avenue. An hour later it was found at Ada and Randolph streets, where it had been abandoned by the thieves.

FISHER DEFENDS WILKERSON AT SENATE HEARING

Chicago Railways Case Is Brought Up.

By GENEVIEVE FORBES HERRICK.
[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

Washington, D. C., May 14.—[Special.]—Judge James H. Wilkerson isn't perfect, but he's got so much courage that if Samuel Insull tried to dicker with him he'd give the utilities magnate the same answer he recently gave Al Capone, gangster—namely: "You can't bargain with this court," Attorney Walter L. Fisher of Chicago today insisted before the senate subcommittee reconsidering its confirmation of Wilkerson to the court of appeals.



JUDGE WILKERSON.

"Of course, his record isn't 100 per cent perfect," Mr. Fisher admitted. "Is there any judge's record that is? But making all allowances, and realizing that his opponents are using every weapon possible, I tell you gentlemen there has never been a judge who has better performed his judicial function as to deserve advancement. And I believe that is the opinion of an overwhelming membership of the Chicago bar."

Acts as Friend of Court.

Mr. Fisher, who acted as friend to the court when Judge Wilkerson was hearing litigation growing out of the receivership of the Chicago Railways company, was called to testify about two charges recently made against Judge Wilkerson by Attorney Donald Richberg of Chicago.

The first charge was made directly by Mr. Richberg that Judge Wilkerson permitted Henry A. Blair, president of the Chicago Railways System, of which the Chicago Railways was a part, to draw his $60,000 a year salary as chairman and in addition $60,000 a year as receiver. The second charge, more indirect, was that the contemplated plan of traction consolidation in Chicago was all a plan of Samuel Insull of the elevated lines to gain control of the surface lines.

On the first charge, Mr. Fisher said he did not know of his own knowledge that Judge Wilkerson knew of the two salaries paid Blair until a city council resolution called it to his attention; but he believed that Judge Wilkerson did not know of the chairmanship salary when he approved the receivership fees.

Definite on Implied Charge.

As to the second, and implied, charge that any traction plan pointing toward consolidation of all transportation lines would be playing into the hands of Mr. Insull, Mr. Fisher was very definite.

"There is not a shred of evidence on that point, and Mr. Richberg had to admit that when he was before this committee," he said to Senator Borah [Rep., Idaho], chairman. "Far from trying to get this plan over, Mr. Insull has been the reluctant participant in it. And as for taking orders from Insull, that is ridiculous.

"Why gentlemen, I tell you that if Mr. Samuel Insull walked into Judge Wilkerson's court and tried to make negotiations with him, Wilkerson would give him the same treatment he gave Alphonse Capone, just the same. He'd tell him that you can't bargain with his court. O, he may make mistakes, but he has courage, and capacity and industry that entitles him to promotion if any judge in Christendom is entitled to promotion."

Sprague Also Testifies.

Col. A. A. Sprague, Chicago's commissioner of public works, and vice president of the 1929 citizens' committee that worked on traction ordinances at the suggestion of Judge Wilkerson and with the unanimous approval of the city council, reaffirmed Fisher's testimony with regard to any Insull interest in the plan.

Senator Glenn [Rep., Ill.] closed the hearing by reading into the record various letters in support of Judge Wilkerson's conduct in the receivership case. Senator Borah indicated that no further hearing will be held. The committee has previously voted, 3 to 2, in favor of the nomination, but the judiciary committee referred it back to the subcommittee.

BELL COUNTY BARS HAYS; HE ASKS $100,000

Fiery Prosecutor Among Nine Named in Suit.

London, Ky., May 14.—(AP)—On the grounds that bloodshed might follow their visit and a mob that could not be controlled would form in Pineville, an American Civil Liberties union delegation was barred from the southeastern Kentucky coal fields today.

Returning here, Arthur Garfield Hays, a leader of the group, filed a $100,000 personal damage suit against nine officers and citizens named as having blocked his progress at the Bell county line. It would test, he said, whether members of a community can legally prevent citizens from entering.

After being halted at the Bell county line by Mayor J. M. Brooks of Pineville, Walter B. Smith, Bell county attorney, and others, and told it would be dangerous for them to enter, the delegation was warned here to leave within four hours.

Prosecutor Named in Suit.

Sheriff W. H. Steele, who delivered the warning, said "there might be trouble" if the visitors did not heed it. He did not explain. Crowds gathered on the streets here, but there was no demonstration.

The suit filed by Hays named County Attorney Smith, Mayor Brooks, Pearl Osborne, chief of police of Pineville; Walter Baker and Charles Stacey, named as a Bell county deputy sheriff; J. E. Whitaker, a Pineville business man; W. L. Hammond, Pineville business man; Herndon Evans, Pineville newspaper publisher, and Walter Mayhew, chief of police of Barbourville.

Denied Federal Injunction.

Feeling in Bell and Harlan counties against outside investigators and visitors had been described before Federal District Judge A. M. J. Cochran, who last night denied the injunction the Civil Liberties group sought. Witnesses from the two counties said the residents would forcibly prevent such visits, fearing they would arouse certain elements among the miners who were on strike last winter and lead to bloodshed and destruction of property.

"The town is full of a mob and we can't do anything with them," the visiting group was told by a Pineville resident giving the name of W. L. Hammond, when it reached the Bell county border today. "The situation can't be handled if you come into Pineville."

BAPTISTS WARN THEY'LL DESERT ANY WET PARTY

St. Petersburg, Fla., May 14.—(AP)—A warning that Southern Baptists will not support the political party that nominates a "wet" for President was issued here tonight by the 77th annual convention of the denomination.

It was contained in a 24 page report of the convention's social service commission. The paragraph read:

"If either of the political parties shall go wrong, either in platform or its nominees, and undertake to destroy prohibition, we will turn away from that party and support a party and candidate that stand for maintenance and perpetuation of prohibition as our greatest national policy."

The report commended prohibition, world disarmament, better interracial relations and Boy Scout work and opposed military training, the motion picture industry "as it is operated at the present time," gambling, mob violence, and a referendum on the prohibition question.

ARREST STUDENTS STAGING PARADE AT INSULL HOME

Gold Coast Neighbors Call Police.

Ten university students parading in front of the home of Samuel Insull at 1100 Lake Shore drive with banners denouncing treatment given Kentucky miners on Insull properties were arrested yesterday by Chicago avenue police. Residents in neighboring Gold Coast homes made the complaint. They were held at the police station charged with unlawful assembly.

Karl Borders, executive secretary of the League for Industrial Democracy and a Socialist leader and lecturer, was arrested when he appeared at the police station and protested against the other arrests.

Borders and the ten students were released on bond for an appearance tomorrow morning in police court at the Chicago avenue station.

Plan Other Demonstrations.

"Similar demonstrations were planned to be held simultaneously at the homes of Henry Ford in Detroit and Andrew Mellon in Pittsburgh," said Borders after his arrest. Ford, Mellon, and Insull are said to be owners of Kentucky mine properties.

Among the students arrested were five graduate students of the University of Chicago, George Wheeler, 23 years old, 5528 Dorchester avenue; Philip Booth, 24 years old, and his wife, Mrs. Mary Booth, 23 years old, 5524 Ellis avenue; Donald Thompson, 25 years old, 5659 Woodlawn avenue, and Aron Gilmartin, who resides in a university dormitory.

Two were Northwestern university students. They are Paul E. Trimpey, 24 years old, and William Law, 22 years old. The other three, James McKnight, Andrew Javinall, and Charles Myres, are students at the Garrett Biblical institute in Evanston.

Lectures Ten Students.

Lieut. Patrick O'Connell lectured the ten.

"What right have you young people who have never done any real work to criticize a man who has proved his ability for work?" Lieut. O'Connell asked.

Prof. J. W. Armstrong, dean of men at Northwestern, said an investigation of the students' actions will be made. Shailer Mathews, dean of the divinity school of the University of Chicago, said, "If the students wish to parade it is their concern."

ELGIN WOMAN NAMED PRESIDENT OF STATE BUSINESS FEDERATION

Champaign, Ill., May 14.—[Special.]—Miss Celia Howard of Elgin was named president of the Illinois Federation of Business and Professional Women's Clubs for next year at today's business session of the annual meeting here. Joliet was awarded next year's convention.

Other officers elected were Miss Helen McMackin, Salem, first vice president; Miss Jane Magan, Chicago, second vice president; Miss Margaret Scheflow, Elgin, corresponding secretary; Miss Ruth H. Pulley, Marion, recording secretary, reëlected, and Mrs. Arthur Chamberlain, Aurora, treasurer.

The convention indorsed a national legislation-educational bureau and adherence of the United States to the world court.

It also indorsed a state motor drivers' license act, changes in election laws, and adequate protection for children in industry.

BIRTH OF NEW PARTY REVEALED BY JUDGE LYLE

Judge John H. Lyle announced yesterday that preliminary steps have been taken toward organization of the "Cook County Republican party," which, he predicted, is to be a permanent political unit in Chicago and its suburbs.

"At a meeting in my home last night," he said, "there were 37 wards and 12 country towns represented by 156 people. We are to have a large meeting in the Morrison hotel Cameo room next Friday and on Saturday we will open our headquarters at 145 North Clark street. Our purpose is to battle for honest elections, and efficiency and economy in government. There are to be no dues, assessments or collections. I and a few of my friends will finance the movement out of our own pockets."

At the meeting Friday evening, he said, fifteen committees are to be created. Adolph Marks, former state senator from the First district, is slated for chairmanship of the executive committee.

GREEN'S DEATH HELD SUICIDE.

A verdict of suicide was returned yesterday at an inquest into the death of Sidney Green, 35 years old, 7645 Sheridan road, who drank poison in his apartment Friday. Notes indicated stock losses prompted his act. Police were seeking his wife, Ruth, to notify her.

CELEBRATE 50TH ANNIVERSARY OF PLUMBING GROUP

The fiftieth anniversary of the founding of the Plumbing Contractors' Association of Chicago was celebrated last night by 500 representatives of the industry at a dinner and dance in the gold room of the Congress hotel. David S. Bain, 90 years old, 2855 Wilcox street, one of the two surviving founder members, was the guest of honor. Alex W. Murray, 84 years old, of Twin Falls, Idaho, the other, was unable to attend.

The speakers included P. W. Donoghue of Boston, president of the National Association of Master Plumbers; E. B. Kleine of Cincinnati, vice president; John J. Vogelpohl of Cincinnati, past president, and H. P. Roger, 1501 East 72d place, president of the Illinois association.

W. E. Clow, president of James B. Clow & Sons, pioneer dealers in plumbing and heating equipment, discussed developments in the industry since the founding of the Chicago association, one of the first of its kind in the country. Joseph W. Cannon, 11823 Michigan avenue, was toastmaster.

INVESTORS WIN POINT IN FIGHT FOR FACTOR FUND

Taking of Depositions in Europe Authorized.

British investors seeking to break the $8,000,000 trust fund established in Chicago by John [Jake the Barber] Factor, were victorious yesterday in preliminary motions argued before Federal Judge Charles E. Woodward. Factor is alleged to have defrauded the English investors of $7,000,000 in fraudulent stock deals.

The attempt of the British government to extradite Factor for criminal trial in England is before the United States Court of Appeals. He was ordered extradited by United States Commissioner Edwin K. Walker, but the ruling was set aside by Federal Judge George A. Carpenter in habeas corpus proceedings.

O. K.'s Foreign Depositions.

Judge Woodward ruled yesterday that Attorneys John H. S. Lee and Charles McConnell for the investors, may take depositions from witnesses in London, Paris, and New York after reasonable notice to the defense. Their motion to take depositions from Chicago witnesses and for a subpœna duces tecum for the books of Chicago brokerage houses was overruled. Judge Woodward held with the defense that Chicago witnesses should be present at the trial.

Although hearing yesterday disposed of preliminary motions in the case, no date was set for trial.

Lacks Funds for Trip to U. S.

Attorney Lee argued that the depositions were necessary because Factor obtained most of the money of investors bringing the suit and they are financially unable to attend the trial. Attorney McConnell asked the privilege of questioning by deposition officers of brokerage firms in London, New York, and Chicago in order to show the transfer of more than $2,000,000 into the Chicago trust fund.

Attorney G. Gale Gilbert, for the defense, termed the petition for the depositions from officers of brokerage firms as a "mere fishing expedition" through which the plaintiffs hope to discover facts which could be used in the trial. He opposed the taking of all depositions as an unnecessary expense so early in the proceedings.

OVERCOME BY GAS, DIES.

Frank Kohler, 63 years old, owner of a restaurant at 5643 West Chicago avenue, died yesterday in St. Anne's hospital. He was found Friday in the restaurant, overcome by gas from the range. Police said the death was accidental.

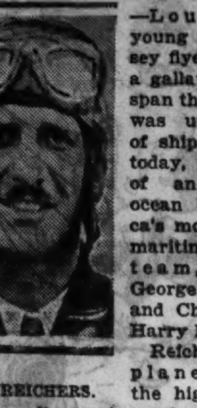
REVEAL SCENE ON SHIP AS ATLANTIC FLYER IS SAVED

Passengers Are Excited by Thrilling Rescue.

ABOARD S. S. PRESIDENT ROOSEVELT, en route to New York, May 14.—[U.P.]—Lou Reichers, young New Jersey flyer who lost a gallant fight to span the Atlantic, was under care of ship's surgeon today, pulled out of an angry ocean by America's most famous maritime rescue team, Capt. George R. Fried and Chief Officer Harry Manning.



LOU REICHERS.

Reichers' airplane, Liberty, the highest powered aircraft ever to venture over the Atlantic, was claimed by the ocean. Manning's lifeboat was abandoned after Reichers had been taken out of his gold and black speed machine, his nose broken and his face lacerated.

The flyer said he was forced to land because one wing of his plane was damaged and his fuel supply was almost gone.

The President Roosevelt's passengers had finished dinner and were chatting in the salons when the ship slowed down suddenly. News that an airplane had been sighted spread rapidly. Soon the passengers were at the rail while Capt. Fried gave his orders from the bridge and Manning summoned the crew of lifeboat No. 10.

A strong southwest wind was blowing. The President Roosevelt's searchlights picked up the form of an airplane. Passengers gasped as the pilot nosed his machine down and struck the water with a crash that sent a sudden, white spray up from the black waters.

The airplane righted itself and remained on top of the water, but was tossed about like a cork and in obvious danger of foundering. Meanwhile Capt. Fried maneuvered the bulk of the ocean liner alongside the plane. Manning and his crew were lowered in the lifeboat.

After the rescue the excited passengers rushed to the captain's cabin to congratulate the captain and chief officer, who have figured in more thrilling rescues than any other "team" on the North Atlantic run.

LITTLE ENTENTE AGREES TO KEEP ITS 'LOVE MATCH'

Heads of Nations Meet at Belgrade.

BY WILLIAM SHIRER.

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

BELGRADE, Jugo-Slavia, May 14.—The most realistic conference in Europe—realistic because it backs its decisions with armies, not words—was in session here today.

It was the annual conference of the Little Entente, composed of Czechoslovakia, Jugo-Slavia, and Rumania, and supported by France to maintain the status quo in southeastern Europe.

The foreign ministers of the three little powers, Dr. Edvard Benes of Czechoslovakia, Dimitri Ghica of Rumania, and Dr. Voyislav Marinkovitch of Jugo-Slavia led their respective delegations. At the very first session they heartily agreed to continue the status quo.

The two main questions on the agenda were disarmament and reparations and there was no disagreement on these. Concerning disarmament there was an informal understanding not to disarm one whit. Concerning reparations they agreed to back France's demands for as much as can be squeezed out of Germany.

"Basically our position on these questions remains unchanged and all three states of the Little Entente are agreed to maintain it in closest harmony," said Dr. Marinkovitch.

He likened the Little Entente to a love match in which mutual assurances of affection at first predominate, later settling down to a quiet and effective coöperation.

Economic coöperation with Austria and Hungary also was discussed by the conference, but the Little Entente desires it only on the condition that Budapest and Vienna remain unarmed.

The statesmen will discuss only general military matters, since their army experts concluded a secret military treaty at Bucharest last week.

One main purpose of the Little Entente is to keep Hungary "in her place," and there was some nervousness here tonight when it was learned that the Hungarian Revisionist league had called meetings next week.

TOKIO, May 14.—(AP)—The ministry of communications today granted permission to Lieut. Harold Bromley, American flyer who is planning a flight from Seattle to Tokio this month, to land in Japan. It was specified, however, that he must reach the Japanese coast between Sendai and Mito and land at the Haneda international airport on the southern outskirts of Tokio, avoiding the long circle of the Kurile islands.

CONGRESSMAN RAINEY ASKS SOME QUESTIONS.

Congressman Henry T. Rainey of Illinois has prepared a set of questions which he mails to citizens who write urging him to help in the reduction of government costs and taxation. The congressman says his mail is heavy, which in itself is encouraging. His queries present the issue of federal economies in specific terms for Illinois.

Although the questions as Mr. Rainey phrases them might indicate that he regards them as posers there is no reason why they cannot be accepted with the assumption that he is entirely candid and answered in the same spirit. He and the other Illinois congressmen are entitled to know that when their constituents ask for heavy federal cuts they do not mean merely prying Hiram Johnson out of Boulder dam, the South Carolina senators out of the Charleston navy yard, and the farm board out of the federal treasury. The reduction of federal costs means the stopping of federal spending. Even justified expenditures must be suspended and unwarranted ones must be abolished forever. Mr. Rainey's questions and the answers THE TRIBUNE would give them follow:

1. A large amount of money has been appropriated heretofore for vocational education in the states. Illinois has been getting a larger appropriation than almost any other state. We are considering cutting off this appropriation entirely from the schools of Illinois and from the schools of other states. Please advise me what your judgment is in this matter.

Answer: This expenditure should be stopped. There is no authority for it in any unstrained construction of the federal constitution. It is not a federal function. There is no justification for any educational subsidy to the states.

2. The federal treasury advises it is in its present position largely on account of its building program. Of course, under the authorization heretofore made, there will be no further appropriations for any projects, but the question is being agitated now as to whether or not we should suspend work on the projects we have already undertaken or contracted for. Of course in Chicago you have the most expensive public building in the entire program. In fact, the public building in Chicago will be the most expensive public building ever constructed in the United States or perhaps in the world, and if any suspensions are made this building of course will be included. I am glad to note your position in these matters of economies, and I am writing to ask you whether or not in your judgment construction for a year or for longer, if necessary, should be suspended on the Chicago public building.

Answer: The work on the Chicago postoffice should be postponed. If the federal bureaucracy had been capable of decision this needed postoffice would have been completed several years ago when revenue was ample and when government funds were being wasted, as they are still, on extraneous and unjustified projects. The building is at a stage where construction can be suspended. It is a sacrifice which is required by previous government folly.

3. The Illinois waterway is approaching completion. It requires, however, some other quite large appropriations from the federal government. Please advise whether or not in your judgment these appropriations should be definitely suspended.

Answer: The Illinois waterway is the Chicago outlet of the Mississippi water transportation system upon which the government has spent many millions. Although it is ninety-nine per cent completed it will not be valuable until the outlet at Chicago is opened. This will be about equivalent to knocking out a bulkhead. The state of Illinois presents a virtually completed link to the federal government. The federal appropriation is comparatively trivial. It would be costly and not economical to suspend this construction.

4. Fort Sheridan was a rather expensive proposition located in Illinois, near Chicago. Inasmuch as there apparently will be no danger of an Indian attack on Chicago in the near future, do you not think it would be a good idea to abolish Fort Sheridan? The work done there could be consolidated and could be accomplished much cheaper at other positions. Let me know how you feel about this.

Answer: If the facts are as stated by the congressman Fort Sheridan should be abandoned. It should not, however, be merely a transfer of the costs to some other locality of no greater desirability or importance as a military post. The congressman does not inquire as to the Great Lakes Naval Training station. It should be abolished. There is no need for it.

5. The federal government has authorized the appropriation for next year of nearly three hundred million dollars for roads. Only two states will get a larger appropriation than Illinois. The Illinois appropriation will be expended, as I understand it, largely on widening the highways which lead into Chicago. We could accomplish a very great economy by suspending this appropriation for a few years. Let me know what you think about this.

Answer: Federal road building is unwarranted and unjustified. The roads are not post roads. Congress has no authority for such expenditure. The fund distributed is a subsidy for votes.

6. A considerable amount of money will be expended next year, if there is a river and harbor bill, improving the harbors on the great lakes near Chicago and on the Mississippi and Illinois river work. It would accomplish great economies if we could suspend this. Please let me know what your judgment is in this matter.

Answer: The work should be suspended.

EX PARTE 104.

The fatty degeneration of the American government was never better illustrated than in the record of the interstate commerce commission in the case known as Ex Parte 104, Part 2. If this were the only instance of bureaucratic absurdity, it would be enough to warrant the American people in destroying the wild growth, root and branch. Unfortunately, it is not the only instance but merely one of many. The observer can only conclude that if the producing forces of America do not destroy the bureaucracy the bureaucracy will make short work of America.

Ex Parte 104, Part 2, is concerned with the charges made by the railroads for spotting cars in private yards. It is a matter which, of course, concerns thousands of business men, large and small. They are represented, many of them, in this proceeding by the National Industrial Traffic league. Hearings have taken place in Boston, New York, Pittsburgh, Detroit, Buffalo, Cincinnati and Chicago. Thirty-eight days have been spent in hearing only a part of the railroads' evidence. The record already covers more than 6,700 pages, not to mention the 294 specially numbered exhibits.

At the Pittsburgh hearing 110 operating officials of the Pennsylvania railroad were obliged to wait around ten days to be placed on the stand, though, when the firing ceased temporarily, only twelve of them had been called to testify. The rest were there in response to an order of the commission requiring their presence to answer questions which might arise but didn't. Obviously these railroad men were unable to attend to their routine duties during the hearing, and obviously, also, the stockholders of the Pennsylvania Railroad company paid the salaries of men who were able to give nothing in return for their pay as long as the hearing was on.

Finally, in disgust, the Traffic league has petitioned the commission to put an end to the costly and wasteful business. The league has not yet started to present its witnesses, but is willing to waive that right. Rather than prolong a hearing already too long, the league is willing to let the judgment of the commission be made on the basis of the testimony now in hand.

Scrutator, in recounting this story in THE TRIBUNE, observed that the case covering the switching charges in the Chicago district has been pending for five years and that meanwhile four of the principal figures in the controversy have died. Likewise, the valuation of the railroad companies' properties has been going on since 1913, at a cost of $40,000,000 to the taxpayers and of $138,000,000 to the railroads. As time has gone on the opinion has become more and more widespread that the whole undertaking was a mistake from the start.

All these proceedings and procedures run into money, but the direct, out-of-pocket expense is the least part of the cost. Much more serious is the effect which these endless interferences have on the initiative of the railroad executives. They have been bulldozed and hamstrung to the point where independence, originality, and initiative are almost a dead loss in the railroad business.

The first step in restoring the railroads to solvency must be a lifting of the bureaucratic load which they now bear. As matters stand, the American people are paying the bill for a kind of railroad regulation which is ruinous alike to taxpayers and railroads. The initiative in rate making and in the management of their properties must be returned to the railroad executives with the interstate commerce commission reduced in authority to the rank of a specialized court with strictly limited powers to correct specific injustices and abuses. If congress is not prepared to reorganize the commission along some such line as this it would be better for all concerned if the commission were abolished.

A MODEL SCHOOL FOR THE WORLD'S FAIR.

The school board, at last account, was still determined to spend approximately half a million dollars in erecting a model schoolhouse as an adjunct to the Century of Progress. The building is to be located in the Oakland district, close to the World's Fair grounds. The structure, so it is said, is to embody the best thought in school design and equipment of our day and will therefore serve to illustrate the progress which has been made in architecture and education in the last hundred years.

The prospectus sounds well, but is not particularly convincing. There is a significant lack of detailed description. What departures from the ordinary practice in school construction are to be introduced? Wherein is this school to be markedly in advance of other well-designed schools erected in all parts of the country in the last five years? Is there to be any hitherto undiscovered economy of space or of maintenance? Is this school going to be better adapted to the business of instruction than a hundred other schools of recent construction in a hundred cities and villages throughout the country? Possibly the answers to all these questions will be reassuring; but certainly the fact that the propaganda for the model school has consisted largely of generalizations suggests caution in accepting the claims at their face value.

There is, to be sure, vast room for improvement in school design. With thousands of communities in the United States bankrupt, or on the verge of bankruptcy, any economies which can be introduced into school building without seriously impairing usefulness would be more than welcome. If the school board can produce a school, say, for $150,000 which will be at least as good as any of our present $450,000 schools, the demonstration will be worth making. Otherwise, in the present financial condition of the board, it is difficult to believe that any money is available for the project.

This is not said in the belief that the goal set is unattainable. On the contrary. The World's Fair buildings themselves are evidence to the contrary. The type of construction employed by the Century of Progress figures out at 10 or 12 cents a cubic foot. Perhaps this type of construction, applied to the somewhat more complicated school structure, might cost 20 or 25 cents a foot, or about half the ordinary school cost. The World's Fair architects insist that their buildings could stand for 20 years or more without any extraordinary charges for maintenance. With a little added cost they could be made as fireproof as any school building in Chicago. Twenty years is about as long as a school should last. In that time its design becomes obsolete and in cities like Chicago, in which there are dramatic shifts in population, the rooms provided today will almost certainly be too many or too few for the population in a given district twenty years hence.

As something to look at and take pride in, a school built in the World's Fair fashion could easily be at least as satisfactory as the run of recent public school buildings in Chicago, which have little to recommend them to the eye though their cost is an extremely heavy charge against the taxpayers.

THIS LOVELINESS OF SPRING

THE WILD PLUM and shad bush have blossomed over the bluebells, violets, and trilliums. Spring has run quickly along and above the ground. In the south the shad is called sarvice and the name has an elusive beauty in itself for a northerner. It is meaningless until he learns that it is service and then it is still meaningless, although as sarvice it is beautiful in the southern tone. The shad bush is called for the run of shad and that will be something in the Chesapeake estuaries that it is not on the moraine of the west shore of Lake Michigan, where the shad blossoms open in a fingering touch upon east winds and drop in the first responsive whirl of passion. The march of the trillium grandiflorum across the land is the first grand triumph of the break out of the soil. Hepatica and bloodroot have preceded it, but the great trillium is the first to break through in force.

THE REED PIPE

THE GREEN of foliage leaps to the sky and orioles drop down. Not even the brown thrasher has the spring charm of the oriole's song. The thrasher compensates for the northern lack of the mocking bird. Possibly the south is given the mocking bird as a compensation for the lack of him. The wood thrush, the player on reed pipes, when the foliage is deep, sings of dead Greek creatures of the woods, of hidden beauty only sensed, of waterfalls not seen but almost heard, of wings and swift footsteps. But the oriole has the song of peach blossoms and blossoming wild crab, of hawthorn and cherries, of spring winds and rains.

THE HIGH HAT

HOW TO TAKE a high hand with the inferior peoples and get moral results: "The delegates of Serbia, Bulgaria, Greece, Montenegro, and Turkey, somewhat sheepish in their frock coats, were ranged one by one upon the carpet. Sir Edward Grey advanced toward them and fixed them with his eagle eye; he pointed towards them with an outstretched and imperative finger; he summoned to his assistance the total resources of his Wykhamist French. 'Ou signer,' he shouted at them, 'ou partir.'" (From the Portrait of a Diplomatist.)

The startled delegates came out of their sullen deadlock. Confronted with the alternative in Sir Edward's Winchester French to sign or get out, they signed and then got out. It was the moral supremacy of knowing how to wear a frock coat. First make them uncomfortable in clothes they do not know how to wear.

IF GANDHI had made the mistake of changing his loin cloth and shawl for a frock coat and striped trousers the course of India for several more generations might have been changed. So long as he couldn't be got out of his clothes nothing could be got out of him. If Mr. MacDonald could have been put in a loin cloth Gandhi might be president of India. We know that every time an American diplomat gets into breeches and buckles he is soon inquiring for the telephone number of a cooper.

SIR EDWARD'S "Wykhamist French" may send the American to the dictionary to learn that it is school boy French, particularly Winchester public school French. Winchester was a foundation of John of Wykham and the Winchester boys are Wykhamists. Grey evidently made it, such as it was, serve his public career. It's been proved that one can do very well in English.

THE DIVIDED federal Supreme court decisions indicate not a bench for an interpretation of law but a forum of speculative social philosophy.

THE JUDGES do not find in law a restriction of their individual opinions but in their position an authority and opportunity for a social consideration of what they think, in view of all reasonable prospects and probabilities, would be a providential course for the American people to pursue.

POSSIBLY DEMOCRACY is impossible of existence. It may create more authorities than it can destroy. It flies from one to the embrace of another and in its frightened search for its own safety it makes its own destroyers. Finally it may create itself as its own Mephistopheles. Faust, seeking a release from natural infirmities, finds only a mirror.

DEMOCRACIES have not been long lived. Americans have thought that they could survive, although all other republics have perished. They are now producing more Cleons than Platos. The intelligence of their old stock is disappearing. They are now throwing off a vast political fog in which what has been good in the past is forgotten and what might be good for the future is unknown.

FRUIT SENSITIZATION.

A FRIENDLY physician who lives in Florida writes me:

"I want to say from a large experience with tourists who come here and revel in oranges and grapefruit that many of them suffer from an urticarialike rash on the face, neck, or arms. One government official who consulted me for such a rash was eating two or three oranges and a grapefruit daily. Four days after he stopped eating fruit his rash was gone. I have seen many similar cases. It seems to be an idiosyncrasy and, strange to say, is noticed most often in blonds. It is customary now to give orange juice to babies. I have learned that an unripe orange is just as irritating to a young child's stomach and intestines as is a green apple, and unripe grapefruit is worse. When a baby is given fruit juice the parents must be certain it is from ripe fruit."

My friend wrote in protest against a reply that I have made to a question about fruit as the cause of a certain rash. I think he read into my answer a little more than I put there, but if he did so it is certain that many others had a similar interpretation, and all who did will be interested in the above quotations.

He makes two points. One is that some blonds are sensitized to oranges and grapefruit. Of course he is right. While the ability of strawberries to cause nettlerash due to sensitization is better known, there are those who have learned that oranges, grapefruit, or some other fruit is poison to them. Nobody knows just how or why these sensitizations occur, but many are aware that they do occur, and they are not permitted to forget. Furthermore, they know that the easiest way to escape trouble is to avoid the cause. Some know that sensitization can be proved by simple skin tests. Nor do we know why blonds are generally more subject to skin troubles.

The second point this physician makes is of another kind. It is that ripe fruit and their juices are likely to be wholesome, while the same fruit eaten green is harmful. In the great university of education through experience children learn that fact in the first grade. It is called the elementary, clinical course in stomachache caused by eating green apples. All pupils take this course. It is generally given in June and July. My friend's observation is that when the children who take this course become parents they forget what they learned in the grades, or else they don't know that what they learned about green apples applies also to oranges, grapefruit, and all other fruit. They also forget that whatever is true of the delicate digestive tract of older children applies with greater force to the more delicate digestive tracts of babies.

Ripening changes the starch of green fruit to the sugar of that which is ripe. It also changes the acids, ferments, and other ingredients of the fruit and its juice.

DON'T BLAME REYNOLDS.

M. E. G. writes: Is there such a disease as Reynolds' disease? If there is, what are the symptoms?

REPLY.

I know the Reynolds family and they are a prolific lot, but they have never begotten a disease. You have in mind Raynaud's disease, which affects the toes, fingers, nose, and ears and corresponds to a most severe frostbite, but without having freezing as a cause. The affected part turns pale, is cold and bloodless, and may develop dry gangrene.

LAXATIVES.

S. P. writes:

1. How do these proteins compare with each other, as far as being laxative or not is concerned: Beef, codfish, halibut, cottage cheese, creamed cottage cheese?

2. Are there any other easily digested proteins that you would recommend as being more laxative than these? (I find milk constipating.)

3. What could one take at the same meal that would have a laxative effect? (I eat vegetables and fruit with protein for the evening meal.)

4. How about flaxseed for its laxative effect?

REPLY.

1. Cottage cheese in considerable quantities is somewhat laxative because of the milk sugar it contains. None of the proteins are laxative.

2. Soured milk preparations, taken freely, are laxative for the reasons mentioned. Some people find buttermilk laxative.

3. Many people find molasses laxative. Oils and fats have this quality. A vegetable salad with oil has considerable laxative action.

4. It is fairly efficient.

NO DANGER.

B. E. writes:

1. If a man has had active tuberculosis, and is now back and considered an arrested case, after having been away for a period of time, would there be any danger in marrying him?

2. Do you think, if the necessary precautions are taken, and the man is in the hands of a capable physician, that the woman would be likely to contract tuberculosis?

REPLY.

1. None.
2. No.

STREET SWEEPINGS.

Chicago, May 6.—[Friend of the People.]—Our two flat building is located next to an alley. The sweeper from Chicago avenue hauls piles of sweepings and dumps them in the front of alley where the wind blows it in the house, causing frequent complaints. Also when flats are vacant it is hard to rent with dirt piles always near the front of the building. I hope something can be done about this. N. P.

REPLY.

Report is made that alley has been thoroughly cleaned and street sweeper instructed to find another location where there is no objection to the temporary storage of street sweepings.

MORE FACTS NEEDED.

Chicago, May 6.—[Legal Friend of the People.]—I am one of the heirs to a will left by an aunt. The last paragraph of the will reads: "Should not sufficient funds be realized to fulfill my bequests, then a like amount be deducted from each one's share, but should it exceed the amount in the bequests I have made, then a like amount shall be added to each one's portion." Please tell me what, in your opinion, the word "like" would mean as used in this sentence, whether an equal division of the surplus, or a percentage to each one's bequest.

F. M.

REPLY.

We cannot construe such ambiguous phraseology without having the wording of the will before us.

MORTGAGE FORECLOSURE.

Chicago, May 5.—[Legal Friend of the People.]—1. Can I foreclose on a first mortgage overdue when the single woman who is living in the mortgaged house is not mentally competent? 2. Does continuing to accept interest money indefinitely renew the terms of the mortgage again for five years? 3. Does second mortgage always remain a second in this same case? 4. Would it be good policy for me to buy up the second mortgage? 5. Should the second mortgage be forced to buy the first? E. Y.

REPLY.

1. If you mean that she is insane it would be necessary to appoint a conservator for her. In any event you should employ an attorney.

2. No, but it would prevent the statute of limitations from running.

3. Yes, unless the first mortgage is paid or canceled.

4. We see no reason for it on the bare facts that you state.

5. Ordinarily, it is necessary for the second mortgage holder to pay the first mortgage in order to enforce the second.

MARRIAGE LICENSE.

Chicago, May 5.—[Legal Friend of the People.]—If I secured a marriage license in Indiana and was married in Illinois, would I be legally married? I. D. B.

REPLY.

The license should be secured in the county in which the ceremony is to be celebrated. No official should celebrate a ceremony on a foreign license. If this does not cover your question, please state the facts on which your question arises.

NATIONAL CONVENTIONS

REPUBLICAN—1876.

CINCINNATI, June 16.—The Republican party has almost miraculously escaped political destruction. Rutherford B. Hayes of Ohio has been nominated for President and William A. Wheeler of New York for Vice President. It seemed for five days impossible to concentrate the anti-Blaine men on any candidate.

The convention was held in the Cincinnati Exposition building, erected in 1870, which has a seating capacity of 7,000.

Arkansas led off on the seventh and final ballot by changing her eleven Morton votes to Blaine. Alabama and Georgia increased their vote for Blaine, who had 308 votes on the sixth ballot. Indiana was called and cast 25 votes for Hayes and 5 for Bristow. The announcement was greeted with terrific applause.

The solid vote of Kentucky was announced for Hayes and the New York delegation retired for consultation. They returned and announced 61 for Hayes and 9 for Blaine. The remainder of the roll was called and the result announced that Gov. Hayes had received 384 votes; Blaine, 351 votes.

DEMOCRATIC—1876.

ST. LOUIS, June 28.—Samuel J. Tilden of New York is the Democratic nominee for President. He was chosen on the second ballot. The first ballot had shown this result: Tilden, 403½; Hendricks, 133½; Hancock, 95; Allen, 56; Bayard, 28; Parker, 18; Thurman, 3.

A move to adjourn was not entertained and the clerk proceeded to call the roll again. The announcement that Alabama cast her vote solid for Tilden was greeted with great applause. Colorado changed her vote from Hendricks to Tilden. Illinois cast 26 for Tilden and 16 for Hendricks.

Mr. Bell, the secretary, announced the vote: Thurman, 2; Hancock, 59; Bayard, 11; Parker, 18; Allen, 54; Hendricks, 60; Tilden, 534. [Tremendous applause.]

The convention was held in the Chamber of Commerce hall, with its 5,200 seats the most magnificent room for a public assembly in the United States.

16 YEARS AGO TODAY

MAY 15, 1916.

EL PASO, Tex.—Civilian guards and Mexicans exchanged more than fifty shots across the Rio Grande today within six miles of El Paso. The Mexicans started the shooting, twenty or thirty of them going to the river to open fire on the American guard. From Deming, N. M., came a report that the American border patrol was fired on last night by Mexicans operating in superior numbers south of the line at Antelope Wells and that the Americans were obliged to back up. Messages from Sierra Blanca said that reports had been received there that a force of Mexicans was marching on the town, which is about 100 miles east of El Paso.

CHICAGO.—A call will be issued today by William Mather Lewis, secretary of the Illinois Naval league, to business and professional men and officials of commercial organizations and civic associations to formulate plans for a monster demonstration in Chicago to emphasize to the nation the belief of the middle west in the necessity for adequate national defense and military and naval preparedness. June 10 is favored as the most suitable day for the parade and with proper organization it is believed 200,000 marchers will take part.

NANCY.—President Poincare in an address here responded to Germany's declaration regarding peace contained in the German reply to the American note. He said: "France does not want Germany to tender peace but wants her adversary to ask for peace."

WAR NEWS.—The Germans repulsed a French hand grenade attack on hill 304 near Verdun. French positions near Dead Man's hill on the Verdun front were bombarded violently but there was no infantry attack. A German thrust south of Royce was repulsed. Great Britain has modified the military rule in Dublin, being convinced that the spirit of revolt has ended.

GRAPE JUICE AND GOVERNMENT.

Mattawan, Mich., May 2.—In a letter to our congressman, Mr. J. C. Ketchum, I have said:

"It might interest you to know that if it were not for the United States government I would have a good job today, my home paid for, and money in some bank. I went to work in 1922 for Armour & Co. at their local grape juice plant and found the business interesting enough for my life's work. To learn the same I accepted low wages when I could have earned perhaps 40 per cent more in another industry. Times were good then.

"The government under the packers' consent decree tells Armour that because grape juice is not like beefsteak or mincemeat it will be necessary for them to get out of the business. You cannot sell a half million dollar plant in a few days, so Armour was permitted to operate their factory on a part time basis. Employés were paid accordingly. The farmer, instead of having a market for some 4,000 tons of grapes, had one for about 800 tons as an average.

"Five years of this and Armour sold the plant to the United Grape Products. Things were better now. This concern not only paid good wages but contracted for some 5,000 tons of grapes at not less than $40 per ton because they realized the grower could not grow them for less and stay in the business. Grapes on the market brought around $25 a ton.

"Two years later the government creates the farm board to help the farmer. Large sums were loaned farmers in New York state and California to go into the grape juice business. No private concern can compete with government enterprises for long, and therefore today some fifty men are looking for jobs and the grape growers of Van Buren county, Michigan, have lost a good cash market of $40 per ton for grapes. The price paid last year on the market for juice stock was less than $25 as an average.

"The Welch Grape Juice company in Michigan for the last three years also paid $40 a ton for grapes, but because of the competition set up by our government I understand that they are going to buy on the market this year, which will be a loss to the grower of from $15 to $18 a ton.

"What we want congress to do besides cutting of expenses is to get out of business and stay out. The farmer does not need help. For ten years we've heard this and the farmer has had ten years of depression. Leave him alone. Leave business alone. Let the government tend to its own business, and the rest of us will be able to bring back the good old times." R. G. HOLLIS.

CIVIL SERVICE.

Chicago, May 5.—I am 30 years of age, American born and a resident of Chicago since 1921, with absolutely no so-called political pull. I intend in the near future to take a civil service examination for a position with the board of education. Upon mentioning the fact to several friends I have had the same reply from all, that even should I pass the examination I need not expect an appointment unless I have some political pull. A Democratic precinct captain in a neighboring ward advised me to see my ward committeeman, saying that otherwise an appointment could not be expected.

In spite of these reports I intend to take the examination. However, I would appreciate hearing, through this column, what success others who have no political pull have had taking city civil service examinations. J. B.

UNFAIR COMPETITION!

Moline, Ill., May 6.—In your paper of this date I read a news article where the Y. M. C. A. is to launch a drive to raise $300,000 for its support, stating that contributions have fallen off and that unless money is obtained the association cannot run effectively.

As donations or contributions form the greater part of the Y income, just why is it right and proper for this same organization to enter into the commercial field as a direct competitor of local business men? Business houses, as a rule, are the first to be asked to donate to the upkeep of the Y. M. C. A. when the call is out for help and assistance. Here in this city the business men have helped in no small way for any drive put on by the Y. M. C. A.

We have a league baseball team here and the merchants and business men contribute no small amount to its support. In the past the ball team has been housed at one of our local hotels, but at the present the Y. M. C. A. has the contract, as it underbid the local hotels, and from what I am informed the hotel managers offered as low a rate as times would permit, they going much lower than they would under ordinary conditions, as they all wanted customers at this particular time.

I am not sure that the Y. M. C. A. pays taxes on its property here, but do know, as we all do, that the local hotel owners do and that they do not call on popular subscription or donations from the public to support their business. JAMES H. KIRKLAND.

BACK TO THE FARM.

Chicago, May 5.—After reading the letter, "Certain Failure," about going back to the farm, it gives me great pleasure to voice my opinion.

Who said anything about sending factory workers back to the farm? The very words, back to the farm, mean sending the farmers back to the farm.

The average city bred man who expects to get evaporated milk from contented cows without real farming and dairying knowledge will starve to death on a piece of land. And that isn't all. A lot of factory workers will do the same thing here if they cease to receive charitable aid. The writer was raised on a farm and today enjoys perfect health as the result of it. The land is the source of all wealth, and if there is any trouble in the city which would tend to tie up the food supply the farms will be the first place you'll strike out for in order to get food. And you'll have to start quick, as there is not sufficient food here to last one week if things go haywire.

Having lived in Chicago the last 14 years and earning during that period $20,000, I have left only my family and a 20 acre farm in northern Michigan. I'm going up there for good next month. I will be glad to tell all you agnostics how to keep from starving to death if you will write to me at Kalkaska, Mich.

WETS FOR FAIRNESS.

Chicago, May 4.—I notice in today's TRIBUNE on page 4, under the heading "Drys Protest Attack on Prohibition," that in the group was present W. A. Evans, who, I believe, is the same doctor who conducts "How to Keep Well" in every day's TRIBUNE on the editorial page.

Now, I wonder if the drys would be as fair if any of their staff would attend a wet meeting?

WALKER CASE IS TICKLISH TASK FOR ROOSEVELT

May Be Forced to Decide Before Convention.

New York, May 14.—Special.]—The probability that Gov. Franklin D. Roosevelt will face the necessity of deciding before the Democratic national convention whether or not he will remove Mayor James J. Walker has become imminent as recent developments in the Hofstadter committee's investigation have made it virtually certain that Samuel Seabury, its counsel, will prefer charges against the mayor within the next three weeks.

Gov. Roosevelt, it was learned today, is prepared to deal with the charges promptly. While no one is in a position to speak authoritatively for the governor and there is no indication that he wishes to prejudge the case there is reason to believe that the governor will remove the mayor if he believes that the evidence to be submitted should warrant such action.

Seabury to Quiz Walker.

Whatever may be the governor's decision, he will be put in an embarrassing position if the charges against the mayor are filed with him a few weeks before the national convention in Chicago next month. Mr. Seabury is expected to call Mr. Walker for public questioning next week and to file charges against him not more than a week later. Should Mr. Seabury follow this schedule Gov. Roosevelt will have time to summon the mayor for hearing before him and to make his decision on the removal charges before the convention convenes.

The embarrassment to the governor would be caused largely by the certainty that political motives will be imputed to his decision, no matter which way he may decide. Should he dismiss the charges there undoubtedly will be a repetition of the accusation that he seeks to protect Tammany. Should he remove the mayor, he will be accused of being inspired by a spirit of revenge for the failure of the mayor and Tammany to support his candidacy.

Recall Cleveland Victories.

It is the general opinion among Democratic leaders that the removal of Mayor Walker would help Gov. Roosevelt's candidacy throughout the country by giving tangible evidence that he does not seek to protect Tammany officials in alleged misdoing.

It was recalled that Grover Cleveland was twice nominated and twice elected—in 1884 and 1892—against the strongest sort of opposition from Tammany, and a prospective analogy in the New York state political situation in those years was seen with the present situation if Mayor Walker should be removed.

pected to be present. In addition suites are expected to be opened for Newton D. Baker of Ohio and Gov. George White of Ohio, regarded as a vice presidential possibility, and for Gov. A. Harry Moore of New Jersey, who is listed among the dark horses in the event of a deadlock. Others are still to be heard from.

Plan Traylor Headquarters.

The Traylor for President club, headquarters at Fort Worth, Tex., is expected to open a suite in the interests of Melvin A. Traylor, head of the First National bank of Chicago, who is being boomed as "another Abe Lincoln."

Another Democratic "dark horse" headquarters is expected to be opened in the interests of Owen D. Young, chairman of the board of the General Electric company.

Liquor Question Big Issue.

With the Republican conclave looking like a cut and dried affair, interest is concentrating on plank: regarding the prohibition issue and high cost of government and government in private business. Liberals on the national committee are predicting that the convention will adopt a plank favoring resubmission of the liquor question to the states. They maintain that the subject is more than likely to go to a fight on the floor of the convention.

Brown May Be Chairman.

Pre-convention gossip among the committeemen flitting through Chicago is that Postmaster General Walter F. Brown of Ohio is the White House choice for next chairman of the Republican national committee. Senator Simeon D. Fess of Ohio, present chairman, is rated as the dryest factor on the committee. Brown is for a resubmission plank. He is said to be favored because of his familiarity with political conditions. He has been the member of the cabinet who has been most active in matters of practical politics since the pre-convention campaign began to warm up. General conjectures are that Brown will be active director of the campaign, which is regarded as the hardest task a Republican chairman has faced since 1916.

REED IN RACE AGAIN FOR PRESIDENCY; HE WARNS AGAINST REDS

St. Louis, Mo., May 14.—(AP)—With a warning against a "present hour" danger of socialism and bolshevism, former Senator James A. Reed of Missouri tonight formally made his second bid for the Democratic presidential nomination.

The veteran Missouri legislator, who was a candidate for the nomination four years ago at Houston, was the guest of the Missouri delegation, which is pledged to his support at the Democratic national convention.

"I unhesitatingly say that the ills under which the world, including our country, now suffers," he declared, "are largely due to the mistakes of government."

Commenting on prohibition, Reed said the 18th amendment destroyed the sixth largest industry in the United States, rendered worthless properties worth from 12 to 15 billions of dollars, turned thousands of men out of employment and deprived farmers of a market for millions of bushels of grain.

BLOND FARE GIVES, THEN TAKES.

HIS HEAD HURT FOR A WEEK, SO WIFE IS JAILED

Norfolk, Va., May 14.—(AP)—Mrs. Nettie Harney, married Jan. 25 last, was convicted of beating her husband and sentenced to serve sixty days in jail and pay a fine of $20. She denied the charge.

"Did the blows hurt much?" Harney was asked when he appeared against her.

"My head didn't feel right for a week," he said.

"Is this your first venture on the sea of matrimony?"

"My first," Harney said, "and my last."

3 MONTHS LATER-HOME AGAIN
CAN IT REALLY BE YOU, MARGARET? YOU LOOK WONDERFUL
THANKS, I LOST 62 LBS AND AM FULL OF ENERGY AND STRENGTH - AM WORKING 18 HOURS A DAY - COME AND SEE ME AT MY FREE DEMONSTRATIONS
B.C.S.

SIXTY-TWO pounds of fat in three months was the welcome loss in weight I registered without taking any harmful drugs or salts—without violent exercising and without going hungry for a single minute.

One delicious cupful of Germania Herb Tea, obtainable at grocers and druggists, which I drank with each of my meals, I hold responsible for the loss of all my ugly fat and the return to me of a youthlike strength and energy I hadn't possessed in years.

Each cupful of Germania Herb Tea, authorities agree, supplies minerals which the body needs, and which are often lacking in ordinary diet. Made of herbs grown on the sunny slopes of hills and mountains in Germany. Germania Herb Tea is strictly a vegetable product containing no harmful drugs. It tastes just like ordinary Orange Pekoe Tea. It is made the same way and you can drink it, either hot or served as iced tea, with lemon, cream or sugar.

Delicious, I found it; and many women I know who drink it say the same. But getting rid of 62 pounds of fat cannot be accomplished by drinking any ordinary tea. Remember, you must drink Germania Herb Tea—and the remarkable thing about it is you lose weight without going on a freak starvation diet that runs you down and makes you weak and strengthless. I lost weight every day and each day I ate everything I wanted excepting much fatty meats and starches. The body simply must have plenty of good, wholesome food, and of the right kind, containing vitamines and other necessary substances to sustain life, build strength and energy.

Lost 3 lbs. a Week

Women by the thousands have written or told me of wonderful results obtained from drinking Germania Herb Tea. One friend in Pittsburgh writes: "I lost 18 pounds in six weeks with Germania Herb Tea and feel fine. I think it is great and I am recommending it to all my friends." And here is another typical letter that should be read by every fat man or woman who wants to lose health-destroying excess fat: "Please send me four packages of Germania Herb Tea. I have just finished my two months' supply and am very pleased with results. I am telling all my friends. I have lost 32 pounds and feel fine. You may use this letter to help others."

How It Works

Now you can easily and quickly get rid of excess unhealthy fat with utter safety and keep the face free from the wrinkles and haggard looks that freak dieting produces. Excess fat is usually caused by abnormal body conditions. Lose ugly fat without weakening your body, by normalizing your system the safe, delicious and inexpensive Germania Herb Tea way. Start today—regain youthlike strength and energy, feel better than you have in years and at the same time lose from 2 to 6 pounds of fat a week.

RUSSIA DEMANDS LATVIA MUZZLE NEWS FOR ABROAD

Says Correspondents Send False Reports.

BY DONALD DAY.
[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

RIGA, Latvia, May 14.—Threatening the Latvian government with economic reprisals for permitting foreign newspaper correspondents to send Russian news from Riga, the Moscow Pravda today published a violent attack on Latvia, alleging that the government officially sanctions anti-soviet news.

According to Pravda, correspondents of American, French and Polish newspapers here spend half their time spying on Russia and attempting to send spies and anti-communist literature into the soviet union, and the other half of their time fabricating news, such as alleged uprisings in Leningrad and Moscow, and reporting mythical meetings of the soviet people's commissars.

This lying information, continues Pravda, is spread throughout the world with the permission of the Latvian government. The paper says the workers of Russia demand an end to the provocative activities of these White guard bands and their supporters.

Authoritative News Center.

Since THE CHICAGO TRIBUNE opened its Riga bureau eleven years ago, Riga has become the authoritative center of Russian news in eastern Europe. Many of Europe's largest newspapers maintain correspondents here. Unhampered by soviet censorship, these newspapermen receive soviet newspapers a day after publication, and are able to cable news that correspondents in Moscow are not allowed to touch. They also obtain information from diplomats, engineers, business men and refugees from Russia.

Previous efforts of the soviet foreign office to have Latvia expel foreign correspondents have failed. The Latvian foreign minister informed Russia that this country permitted freedom of the press. When Latvia asked for concrete instances of correspondents dispatching faked Russian news, the soviets failed to reply.

At a recent meeting of the Latvian Press club, Dr. Alfred Bihlman, chief of the press department of the Latvian foreign office, in commenting on recent dispatches published in the German press regarding Latvia's quarrel with the minorities said he regretted that some inaccurate news from Riga had been published abroad. A local representative of Tass, official soviet telegraph agency, twisted his statements and quoted him as attacking American newspapers which publish Russian news from Riga.

Assails Soviet Press.

Dr. Bihlman in an official reply said that he had not mentioned American newspapers in his talk. He said that of all the correspondents stationed here and sending news abroad, the soviet newspapermen are the most unreliable. They habitually twist the news to suit the policy of the communist press, he said.

The campaign against Russian news from Riga was suddenly renewed because of Moscow's belief that this information is hurting the soviets' chances to achieve recognition by the United States, and also because it is impeding Russia's efforts to obtain commercial credits abroad, according to Pravda. The newspaper informs Latvia that Russia will not make concessions in a new trade treaty unless the Latvian press and foreign correspondents in Riga are muzzled.

Pravda is pleased with the energetic campaign of friends of the bolsheviks in the United States to force Washington to recognize Russia. The questionnaire of a pink New York weekly, which discovered that of 50 large American concerns 22 favored immediate and unconditional recognition of the Red régime by the United States, was prominently displayed in the entire soviet press.

COPS CATCH UP WITH A WINDOW WASHING GENT

William C. Macey, 44 years old, a Negro, was engaged early yesterday in washing the windows of the Ben Lasky pharmacy, which is next door to the police building at 1121 South State street.

Policemen Michael King, Sam Schiro, John Healy, and Sam Marotto paused to admire his work as they were returning to headquarters after searching for crime.

Later they heard the tinkle of broken glass and sauntered out to investigate. They found the drug store door broken and Macey stuffing cigarets into his water pail. He was taken to the detective bureau, where police found he had a long record as a burglar and robber.

PARIS MAY DROP POLES AS SECRET MILITARY ALLY

French Hesitate to Renew 10 Year "Pact."

BY EDMOND TAYLOR.
[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

PARIS, May 14.—The secret military alliance between France and Poland, which some neutral statesmen regard as one of the principal menaces to European peace, is facing revision and may even be denounced, according to a report current in diplomatic circles here today.

The alliance is based upon a so-called "general staff convention" signed by the general staffs of the two countries on June 27, 1922, and was valid for ten years. Hence, it must be renewed next month.

This convention is not a secret treaty, properly speaking, because it is not binding upon the two governments. It has never been ratified either by the French or Polish parliament and the league of nations officially ignores it. The French foreign office is not supposed to know about it either, but a copy of the document is believed to be in the files of the Quai d'Orsay.

Terms Are a Secret.

The exact terms of the convention have never been revealed, but neither has either party made a serious effort to deny that the convention exists. It is known in a general way that the convention specifies a mobilization of the Polish army to prevent Russia from supporting Germany in case the latter attacks France and the indirect support of the French army to guarantee Poland's western frontiers in case she becomes involved in war with neighbors to the east or north.

This seems a natural corollary to the open political treaties signed between the two countries, but it is often hinted that the convention also lays down specific reciprocal engagements regarding mobilization in case of a threat of war—the sort of secret engagements that paralyzed efforts of French, German, Russian, and other foreign ministries to avert war in 1914.

According to the information at hand official negotiations are now going on between representatives of the Polish and French general staffs for a renewal of this convention. These negotiations, it is rumored, are encountering unexpected difficulties—from the French side.

French Are Hesitant.

Ironically the principal reason for French hesitancy to renew the Polish entanglement is not the potential advent of a left government, although this factor is not without influence.

The principal opposition is said to be coming from the French general staff, which feels—possibly owing to alleged unsettled conditions in Poland—that the Poles, as prospective allies, are not in position to give the French army their strategic money's worth for the increased responsibilities implied in the convention.

A Quai d'Orsay spokesman, when questioned today, professed complete ignorance about the whole business and avoided giving an official denial.

You look all in, Bill
what's the matter?

"Don't know what's wrong with me, Joe. Got up feeling flat, as usual. Can't eat...feel terrible all the time. Haven't been anywhere in weeks. Now here it is only noon, and I'm half dead already. S'pose I'll feel like a rag tonight."

"Pshaw! You've got ASTHENIA—that's all."

"As-the-ni-a?...what the deuce is that?"

"Oh, nothing to worry about. You've let yourself run down. Was that way myself a few weeks ago. Got so a cup of coffee was all I'd take in the morning; then I'd mope around all day because I felt so punk.

"Began coming down late...feeling just as tired as I did when I went to bed. Finally the old man noticed it.

"'You've been slippin' lately,' he said, 'what's the trouble?' Told him... and he laughed!

"'Why, there's only one thing troublin' you, Joe, you've got Asthenia!

"'Tell you what you do. You know, I've been goin' to French Lick Springs for years...ten days there and I'd come back like a new man. But—in a few months I'd slip and have to do it all over. On my last trip I found out why.

"'Doctor there told me it was easy to get rid of Asthenia...the important thing was to keep it out! And that's exactly what I am doing. I take Pluto Water every Sunday morning. Nothing bothers me now. Smoke eight or ten cigars a day...never go to bed before midnight...get up fresh as a daisy in the morning and eat like a horse. Haven't missed a day in months.

"'Buy a bottle of Pluto Water. You get it at any drug store. Take a fifth of a glass of Pluto Water with four-fifths of a glass of hot water the first thing when you get up, and stick to it every morning before breakfast for ten days. That'll take Asthenia clean out of you. Then...remember...take it every Sunday morning, and you'll forget you ever had Asthenia.'

"Well, it worked to perfection, Bill...never felt better in my life. Get a bottle and try it yourself. Keep it up for ten days—after that every Sunday morning. It will make a new man of you!"

It's ASTHENIA that's pulling you down. (The want or loss of strength; debility; diminution of the vital forces...often due to intestinal micro-organisms.)

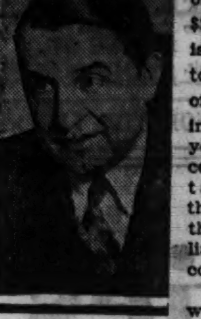
HOW BANK STOCK OWNERS ESCAPE 35 MILLION DEBT

Failure to Pay Liability Brings Many Excuses.

Holders of stock in closed banks in Cook county have a liability of approximately $35,000,000, more than one-third of the $98,600,000 which is still due depositors and creditors of the banks. An inquiry was made yesterday of receivers to ascertain why less than 1 per cent of this stockholders' liability has been collected thus far.



JUDGE STANLEY KLARKOWSKI.

Varied excuses were given by the receivers and their lawyers. They blamed the crowded condition of the courts and the dilatory tactics of attorneys representing the stockholders. Judges have been lax in hearing liability suits, they declared, and masters in chancery have not been too hasty in hearing evidence.

One Authority Explains.

However, one bank authority who is not a receiver, made the following statement:

"In certain cases, the suits filed against stockholders by creditors and depositors appear to be of a 'friendly' nature. That is, they appear to have been instigated by the stockholders themselves for the purpose of arriving at an advantageous compromise."

That the receivers in liability proceedings have substantial excuses for non-collection from the stockholders was evident in some cases. The Citizens Trust and Savings bank case was one in point. This bank closed Aug. 5, 1930. Capital stock of $200,000 was outstanding but only $200, handed in voluntarily, has thus far been paid by the stockholders.

Receiver Is Appointed.

The Chicago Title and Trust company, receiver in the case, was appointed March 17, 1931, after a stockholders' liability suit had been filed by Attorney Milton Mallin. Attorney Mallin yesterday undertook to explain the difficulties encountered in striving to get judgments against stockholders.

"Suit was filed in the autumn of 1930," he said. "There were several hundred defendants and it took some time to get service on all. Then, a number of the defendants filed a demurrer.

"The hearing was originally before Judge William V. Brothers. He was transferred to the law courts and the case was put on the call of Judge Stanley Klarkowski. Arguments were heard in November, 1931, after a number of delays but the judge would not render a decision because a test case was then pending in the Appellate court.

Gives Favorable Decision.

"The Appellate court handed down a decision favorable to the complainants in our case last January and we immediately asked for a ruling from Judge Klarkowski. The judge refused because the Appellate court decision was to be appealed to the state Supreme court. We insisted that the Supreme court had already ruled on all points in the case and he finally set the case again on his contested motion calendar, where it still awaits a hearing."

Depositors of the Citizens Trust and Savings bank have been paid a 25 per cent dividend and still have $750,000 due them.

The Roosevelt Bankers State bank closed Aug. 2, 1930. Capital stock issued was $200,000, but only $765 has been collected from stockholders, an average of $1 per stockholder, as there are just 765 stockholders.

Audit Not Completed.

A representative of the Chicago Title and Trust company, receiver, said that an audit had not yet been completed because two sets of books, involving the merger of two banks, must be examined. Nothing has yet been paid to depositors of this bank, who lost $1,228,856 when it failed.

The Union Bank of Chicago was appointed receiver for the Laramie State bank, which closed Aug. 16, 1930. Only $1,640 has been collected thus far from stockholders. A representative of the bank declared:

"We first sent letters to the stockholders asking them to pay their liabilities. The letters did not produce very good results. It was then up to us to get judgments against the stockholders. The suit was before Judge Michael Feinberg, who was engaged in a campaign for state's attorney and who also had transferred his call to Judge Klarkowski while he heard 'hidden assets' cases.

Trying to Get Action.

"We've been trying for months to get action on the suit. I'm sure we will get a hearing in the near future."

No dividends have been paid to the depositors in the Laramie State bank, who have $340,000 coming to them.

Will H. Wade is receiver for the Builders and Merchants Bank and Trust company, closed April 13, 1931. There is a $580,000 stock liability but only $11,280 has been collected. Mr. Wade blamed attorneys for stockholders for the difficulty in collecting on stockholders' liabilities.

"There are many attorneys around town telling stockholders that they can beat the liability claims," he said. "It is a receiver's duty first to demand payment from the stockholders. Then, he must have an audit made. When suit is filed, each stockholder must be served with notice at a cost of $4 each.

Takes Year to Get Decree.

"Then, the suit is usually referred to a master in chancery who also gets his fees. Getting a decree, which virtually amounts to a judgment, takes from one year to 18 months. The case of this bank is still pending before the master in chancery."

Mr. Wade said that $300,000 has already been paid depositors of this bank and another $300,000 will be paid within a few days, making a 20 per cent total dividend.

The Chicago Title and Trust company is receiver for the City State Bank which closed Nov. 8, 1929. Capital stock was $400,000 and only $65,000 has been collected from stockholders after two and one-half years. The excuse given by a representative of the trust company was that a great amount of the stock was held by the Coöperative Society of America, a bankrupt concern.

Pays 60 Per Cent Dividend.

The trust company is also receiver for the Progressive State Bank, closed Dec. 27, 1929. The capital was $200,000 and $31,000 has been collected from the stockholders. A 60 per cent dividend has been paid the depositors and a spokesman for the trust company said that installments on stockholders' liabilities are being collected. The depositors still have $145,000 coming.

Perhaps the largest collections on stockholders' liabilities have been made in the case of the Northwestern Trust and Savings bank. The total collections have been $188,250, but this was accomplished by a compromise settlement of $181,500 with the Foreman interests who held 4,537 shares of stock, par value $100. The compromise was on a basis of 40 per cent. The remaining small payments by stockholders were voluntary.

One-Fourth Goes For Fees.

Out of this $188,250, Receiver Raymond J. Hurley received $10,000 as a fee on order of Judge Ross C. Hall. The court also granted Attorney Louis J. Behan, representing Hurley, $5,000; gave $18,150 to several law firms representing petitioners in the proceedings; and allowed other expenses for a total of $46,680, or almost one-fourth of the money collected from the stockholders.

The receivers in these liability proceedings were appointed by judges, it was pointed out. State Auditor Oscar Nelson appoints the regular bank receivers. In some instances, the receiver appointed by the auditor is also appointed by the courts, but often a different one is selected.

BANK WILL PAY OFF DEPOSITORS, QUIT BUSINESS

Midway State Acts When Deposits Drop.

Another Chicago bank has decided to pay off its depositors in full and go out of business. It is the Midway State bank, 6236 Cottage Grove avenue, of which Percy E. Wagner is vice president in charge. The reasons for liquidating the bank are explained in a letter sent out to depositors yesterday afternoon.

PERCY E. WAGNER.

"A bank cannot be run without depositors and deposits," the letter says. "It is not fair to stockholders to allow them to keep their money invested when there is no possible chance to provide a fair return for their investment.

"A short time ago the Midway State bank had deposits of over a million dollars. On that basis the bank was operated profitably. Today deposits have shrunk to less than one hundred and fifty thousand dollars. A sum twice this amount is represented by the capital structure of the bank. It is a physical impossibility to even make expenses on this basis.

Ask Depositors to Take Money.

"The bank's board of directors has therefore decided to bring an end to this steady seepage of deposits. Instead of allowing depositors to come in a few at a time and withdraw portions of their balances, thereby necessitating the sacrificing of sound securities in order to provide the cash to meet their demands, the board of directors have agreed to liquidate deposits in their entirety. The Midway State bank will therefore pay all of its depositors the full amount of their balance now in cash.

"We ask that you come in promptly and accept the full amount you have on deposit in this institution.

"To those depositors who have remained with us—you and 3,000 others—we voice our sincere appreciation for the loyalty, confidence, and patronage shown to us through the years that have followed the founding of this bank. The officers and directors of the bank still believe that there exists a real need for an institution of strength in this immediate neighborhood to take care of the needs of our loyal friends.

Urge Faith in Banks.

"In deciding on this unusual means of meeting the existing conditions the officers and directors of the Midway State bank are showing the same loyalty to you that you and other remaining depositors have shown in us. Sound Chicago banks are worthy of the same faith you have shown in this bank."

The Midway State bank has capital stock of $300,000. The directors are Augustus E. Olsson, Charles F. Axelson, Dr. R. K. Packard, Percy E. Wagner, Jacob Siegel, A. S. Irvine, John H. Bishop, Louis J. Victor, and Harry Bollman.

MICHIGAN CIVIL WAR VET AND PREACHER BURIED

Albion, Mich., May 14.—[Special.]—One of Michigan's best known civil war veterans was buried here this morning. He was the Rev. Isaac H. Riddick, who was chaplain of the state department of the G. A. R., the father of a former Montana congressman, and a member of the practicing ministry of the Methodist church for 61 years.

When 17 he enlisted in Company A, 133d Regiment Volunteer infantry of Indiana, for service in the civil war.

As a graduate of Albion college he dedicated the "Stone pile" which has since become a tradition on the Methodist campus and at the time of his death he was the only survivor of the class of 1870. He had been president of the Albion College Alumni association and was president of the Albion Three-quarters Century club. He had served many Methodist pastorates in Michigan and Minnesota.

He was also a member of the Albion Masonic lodge and an honorary member of the Parma Masonic lodge.

He was the father of Valentine Thomson, French writer, who is now aboard the steamer Paris on her way home from the United States.

Wilhelm Kahl, Author of German Penal Code, Dies

BERLIN, May 14.—(AP)—Wilhelm Kahl, chairman of the reichstag judicial committee, died today at 82. He campaigned for years for penal reform and was the author of Germany's new penal code. For a long time he was a defender of capital punishment but in recent years his attitude on that matter seemed to have changed.

MRS. HOOVER RECEIVES AN HONORARY DEGREE FROM OHIO COLLEGE

Wooster, O., May 14.—(AP)—Mrs. Herbert Hoover today donned a black academic robe and a gold tasseled mortar board to receive the honorary degree of doctor of letters of humanity.

The degree was conferred upon her by Wooster college as a "typical American wife and mother" in a ceremony held as part of Wooster's celebration of the 125th anniversary of its origin.

Despite the solemn dress and formality of the occasion, Mrs. Hoover was as elated and pleased as a college girl. Dr. Charles F. Wishart, president of Wooster college, conferred the degree, and Mrs. Hoover signed the official graduate roster. It was the seventh honorary degree the nation's first lady has received.

The visit brought Mrs. Hoover to the city her great grandfather, William Henry, helped lay out 125 years ago. The first surveying of Wooster, then known as the "new purchase," was among the scenes depicted in a spectacular pageant this afternoon in which 1,000 persons participated. Mrs. Hoover also placed a wreath on the grave of her great grandfather and his son, William Henry, both of whom are buried here.

SEEKS TO FREE MAN WHO TRIED TO MURDER HER

Los Angeles, Cal., May 14.—[U.P.]—Lois Wade, 17 year old victim of an assault which was likened to the plot of Theodore Dreiser's "An American Tragedy," pledged her life today to win freedom for the youth convicted of attempting to kill her.

Frank Newland, who continued to see Miss Wade after he had married Ione Vickery, and who was convicted of having beaten her with a piece of railroad tie and of having thrown her in a well to drown when she told him she was to become a mother, was sentenced to serve from one to 14 years in prison. On another charge of a statutory offense he was sentenced to a year in jail, to be served when released from prison.

"O, I'm so sorry," Newland said as Miss Wade embraced him following imposition of sentence. Only a few minutes before he had been embraced by his wife.

"It almost killed me to testify against Frank," Miss Wade said. "I was to blame as much as he was. If I had known I could have avoided testifying by leaving the state I would have done so.

"I shall go before the parole board and tell my whole story, doing all I can to gain his freedom."

ABANDON HOPE OF REOPENING WAUKEGAN BANK

State's Attorney A. V. Smith of Lake county was informed yesterday by a committee of depositors of the closed Waukegan State bank, that there is no further hope of reorganizing the institution's affairs and reopening it under another name.

Mr. Smith then said that the trial of William H. Miller, former director, charged with conspiracy as a result of the handling of the bank's affairs shortly before the closing, would go ahead in the Circuit court at Waukegan tomorrow.

Norman O. Geyer, once president of the Waukegan State bank, and George Woodruff, former vice chairman of the National Bank of the Republic in Chicago were indicted with Miller, but obtained separate trials.

The executive committee of the depositors' association yesterday petitioned Circuit Judge Edward D. Shurtleff to reconsider his removal of Fred Brown Whitney as receiver. The member asserted they have full confidence in Whitney and that he had been removed without being given a chance to face those who alleged he was not making progress in winding up the institution's affairs. Judge Shurtleff will pass on the petition later.

ESCAPES FROM SING SING PRISON IN A TRASH CAN

Ossining, N. Y., May 14.—(AP)—A bottomless trash can, fitted into the top of another can, carried Michael Miller, 31, through the guarded gates of Sing Sing to freedom yesterday.

The method of his escape was learned today when prison officials checked a truckload of trash cans sent to a New Jersey plant to be galvanized. They found among them two extras, one without a bottom.

In the tube made by fitting together the cans, each 3½ feet deep and 3 feet in diameter, Miller had stood concealed from the guards as the truck rolled on to the highway outside the prison yesterday morning.

A few miles from the prison, officials learned, a laborer saw him leap from the truck and flee.

CANADA CLOSES BLACKEST PAGE OF HER HISTORY

Senator's Resignation Ends Scandal.

BY GEORGE SMITH.

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

OTTAWA, Ont., May 14.—With the resignation of Senator Wilfrid Laurier McDougald of Montreal and government intimation that the health of Senator Andrew Haydon of Ottawa alone prevented his impeachment, Canada has just closed one of the blackest chapters of her political history.

Known as the "Beauharnois scandal," the revelations of McDougald's private Beauharnois profiteering and distribution by the Beauharnois Power corporation of almost one million dollars in political campaign funds on the eve of the last federal election, have wracked Canada for the last two years, and have caused more political bitterness than any other episode since the famous "Pacific scandals" which defeated the Canadian idol, Sir John A. Macdonald, half a century ago.

McDougald a Millionaire.

Senator McDougald, Liberal, whose resignation was precipitated by the unfolding of Beauharnois facts before commons and senate special probe committees, is one of Canada's best known men. A doctor by profession, he early abandoned his medical career for the field of finance, and his promotion ventures and investments quickly made him a millionaire. He was also chairman of the Montreal Harbor board and member of Canada's national advisory committee which reported favorably on Canadian participation in a Canadian-American seaways. He was one of the best dressed men on Parliament hill.

The "breach of trust" of which Senator McDougald was adjudged guilty by the senate committee, and subsequently by the senate itself when it adopted the committee report, was that of selling to the Beauharnois Power corporation for $300,000 and "interests," the rights held by his Sterling Industrial corporation, whose power rights applications to the governments were embarrassing to the more pretentious Beauharnois plan for St. Lawrence power development.

Covering Up Tracks.

It was strongly held against McDougald that during the early controversies and rumors he had made the statement to parliament that he was not interested "in Beauharnois." Yet he was interested in Sterling, which Beauharnois bought out admittedly for its "nuisance value." And, in connection with some odd maneuvers in share holdings to cancel the identity of the real controller, Senate Leader Arthur Meighen, in senate debate, asked, "Why was he [McDougald] constantly covering up his tracks? His actions showed that Senator McDougald knew his conduct to be unworthy of a public man."

Senator Haydon, also a Liberal, who, Senator Meighen announced, was saved by ill health from the stigma of an expulsion motion, was dominion Liberal party organizer and treasurer at the time of the 1930 federal election when the Beauharnois campaign fund distribution took place. The biggest chunk of the Beauharnois campaign fund handout to the Liberal party went through his hands. Besides, his law firm profited considerably from Beauharnois corporation retainers. In addition—and for this he would never be forgiven by his Conservative opponents—he alleged in probe testimony that Beauharnois President Robert O. Sweezey had told him in private conversation that the then Conservative premier of Ontario, G. Howard Ferguson, now Canadian high commissioner in London, had demanded $200,000 before he would sign Ontario's huge power contract with the Beauharnois corporation. Ferguson subsequently denied the implication on oath.

Meighen as Executioner.

Haydon's Ottawa law firm, said Senator Arthur Meighen—who, Liberal senators charge, was recently appointed senator by Premier Bennett to act as "executioner" of the Liberal senators involved—had got $95,000 from Beauharnois, $50,000 of which was a retainer contingent upon the corporation securing from the dominion government water power concessions worth millions.

"Can any lawyer who is a member of the senate or commons take a retainer conditional upon the success of an appeal to the administration for a concession?" demanded Senator Meighen in his four hour speech to the senate. "The legal work Haydon did was the cheapest kind of legal work. . . It is an affront to the common sense of parliament to suggest that Senator Hayden did legal work worth $95,000. . . The government's approval of the Beauharnois application was the very breath of the Beauharnois corporation's life. Is any senator justified in taking campaign funds from such a source? All he is doing is selling the assets of the country for the benefit of a political party."

MARCOUX WILL UPHELD; DOCTOR, 89, WINS $55,000

55 Year Old Document Written in Pencil.

A tattered slip of paper, yellow with age and on which a single sentence was scrawled in pencil, yesterday was admitted to probate as the will of Mrs. Ida Marcoux, who died at the age of 68 years in June, 1928.

DR. EDMUND J. BOLIO.

Probate Judge Ray Sesler of Pontiac, acting for Judge Horner, held the will authentic and awarded Mrs. Marcoux's $55,000 estate to Dr. Edmund J. Bolio, 89 years old, of Detroit.

The ruling closed one phase of a court struggle for the estate which was begun two years ago when Assistant State's Attorney Edgar B. Elder charged the will was a forgery and attempted to have the property awarded to the state. Prosecutor Elder announced yesterday that he will appeal the ruling to the Circuit court.

Will Drawn in 1877.

Dr. Bolio presented evidence that Mrs. Marcoux's will was made in 1877, after he had befriended her in Detroit when she was a girl in her twenties. He said that the document which read: "I bequeath to Edmund J. Bolio all my belongings after my death, he being the only true friend who stood by me in all my recent and continued trouble when the whole world seemed to be against me," was written shortly before Mrs. Marcoux left for Chicago.

He summoned Thomas J. Noyes, 69 years old, a captain in the Detroit fire department, as a witness. Noyes said he remembered the will was drawn up by a street car conductor and signed in a drug store. Both the witnesses to the will, Dr. Bolio said, were dead.

During a recent hearing Prosecutor Elder charged that the aged physician had entered into a conspiracy with 14 other persons to obtain Mrs. Marcoux's estate. He produced Frank X. Sullivan, an investigator for the public administrator, and William B. Lee, an operative for the state's attorney's office to support the charge.

Doctor Expert with Inks.

Both men asserted that Dr. Bolio had informed them that he was an expert with inks and could easily forge an old will. They said he had urged them to join him in an attempt to gain the estate.

The claim of Frederick A. Matthews, who said he was the common law husband of Mrs. Marcoux, and was living with her at the time of her death, was allowed by Judge Horner a year ago. It later was reversed by the Appellate court and this ruling was sustained by the Supreme court. Matthews died recently.

"Funeral by Hursen"
Of Course

Hursen Chapels are today recognized as the finest institutions of the kind in this country. The North Side Chapel, particularly, is a masterpiece of beauty, massiveness, facilities and arrangements. It has recently been remodeled. The South Side and West Side Chapels are palaces, convenient for the smaller or the largest funerals.

All Hursen automobile equipment, the finest things on wheels, was built for Hursen along Hursen special designs. Yet the charge is no greater than for equipment far less desirable.

There is no charge for the use of any of the three Hursen Chapels, each equipped with organs of unmatchable tone and size. The charges for Hursen funerals are less than the charges usually made elsewhere. So, call Hursen, of course!

FRANCE FLOATS BOND ISSUE TO PROP TREASURY

BY EDMOND TAYLOR.

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

PARIS, May 14.—Prosperity officially came to an end in France today. That is the significance which French journalists place on new issues of $120,000,000 worth of treasury bonds announced by the government.

Le Temps tonight in commenting on the revolution in French finance marked by the new bond issue points out that it is the first time the treasury has been obliged to borrow money from the people of France since Raymond Poincare restored the country's finances.

The object of the bond issue is to fill the hole in the treasury made by constantly dropping tax collections. It is not, however, an extraordinary measure, as the government is authorized by law to issue up to $200,000,000 in treasury bonds.

Reserve Dwindles Away.

The real story back of this news is the steady trickling away of $760,000,000 that Poincare stored up in the treasury against a rainy day. All of that original reserve is exhausted, in addition to most of the $125,000,000 advanced by the Bank of France.

Financial circles, while recognizing that the bond issue is an official admission that hard times and unruly budgets are upon France, regard the act itself as beneficial and that it will counteract the exaggerated deflation prevailing here.

Jobless Total Drops.

PARIS, May 14.—(AP)—At the end of the first two weeks of May there were only 276,125 men out of work in France. In the last week the decrease in the number of jobless has been 5,888.

Since the middle of March unemployment has been on the decline, principally because of improved conditions in the textile regions of the north, the east and in Alsace. Pierre Laval, former premier and now minister of labor, is keeping a close check on the statistics, but his official totals of the unemployed include only those who receive government assistance.

In the latter part of April Laval's chart showed that business was picking up in 43 provinces of France, was holding its own in 16 others, and in 20 provinces not one man was receiving government aid. In the remaining 11 provinces conditions were somewhat worse than they had been the month before.

Sees Employment Increasing.

Laval said he expected employment to increase until about the middle of July. From that time until fall there will be no change either way, he expects, but no one can say now how things will turn after that.

The government aid amounts to 28 cents a day for each person who receives it, plus 20 cents a day for the wife of each married recipient, and 20 cents additional for each child under 16.

NINE COUNTIES GIVEN $75,325 FOR POOR RELIEF

Funds totaling $75,325 have been allocated to nine counties that have not previously received state aid from the Illinois Emergency Relief commission, Edward J. Ryerson Jr., chairman of the commission, announced yesterday. The nine counties are Adams, De Witt, Edgar, Edwards, Knox, Lawrence, McDonough, Peoria, and Putnam. The allocations cover relief work in May and June.

Additional funds totaling $1,518,708.50 have been allocated to Cook, Franklin, Kane, La Salle, Rock Island, St. Clair, and Will counties to carry on relief work, Mr. Ryerson said. The new allocations for Cook, Franklin, Kane, and St. Clair counties were for periods not covered by previous funds, while the funds advanced to the other three counties are to enable the extension of relief work to areas not covered in previous allocations.

MRS. PACKER'S SUIT IS TALE OF LOST LUXURY

From an expensive Sheridan road apartment with every appointment her husband moved her to a third floor flat without modern plumbing and without a bathtub, Mrs. Anna Packer, 4458 Oakenwald avenue, charged yesterday as grounds for separate maintenance.

Her bill against David Packer, head of the Packer Shoe company, was filed in the Circuit court by Attorney Benjamin H. Erlich. It also charged that the building which the husband owned at 2173 North Lincoln street was in such poor repair that it was dangerous to live in it, and when Mrs. Packer refused to follow her husband to their new home he refused to give her any money.

SLUMP CAUSES TO BE STUDIED BY NEW METHOD

Cowles Commission to Use "Econometrics."

Causes of business depression and fluctuations in security prices are to be studied under new methods by the Cowles commission for research in economics, whose formation has just been announced by Alfred Cowles III.

This not-for-profit research organization will apply the newly developed technique of "econometrics," which is a combination of higher mathematics and economics, in a large scale statistical study of the factors which have caused the collapse in business, and of security prices on the New York Stock exchange. Mr. Cowles is the son of Alfred Cowles, 1130 Lake Shore drive, director of the Continental Illinois Bank and Trust company, CHICAGO TRIBUNE, and the American Radiator company, and was formerly a resident of this city.

Authorities on Council.

The commission's advisory council consists of Irving Fisher of Yale university, Wesley C. Mitchell of Columbia university, A. L. Bowley of the London School of Economics, Ragnar Frisch of the University of Oslo, Norway, and Carl Snyder of the New York federal reserve bank, all of whom have been elected to the council by vote of members of the International Econometric society. The research director is Alfred Cowles III., who in 1925 joined with other members of his family in establishing the Alfred Cowles foundation for the study of government at Yale. The commission is to be housed in the library building being erected at Colorado college, Colorado Springs, Colo.

"Econometrics is, briefly, the application of higher mathematics to economics," said Mr. Cowles. "In the past it has been possible to analyse statistics in only relatively simple ways, but recently mathematicians have increasingly turned their attention to the interpretation of economic data and have devised more penetrating mathematical methods of analysing the factors and combinations of factors which affect our economic life. It is our belief that by applying these methods of analysis to varied classes of statistical information, covering changes in business and industry, and showing the relations between them, we shall be able to establish some means of interpreting and, consequently, of stabilizing the swings of the business cycle, with its alternating periods of prosperity and depression.

Machines Do Calculating.

"Even if we are unable to accomplish this particular task, we know that we shall bring to light much new economic truth which will serve either to fortify or to revise current economic theories. Our first study of the causes of the business cycle will occupy three years, and will consist of mathematical analysis of the significance of some hundred factors.

"This will be the most comprehensive study of the kind ever undertaken, so far as we know, and, indeed, it would not have been possible a few years ago, for the mathematical computations involved are so extensive that they could hardly be carried on without the aid of certain remarkable new high speed calculating machines.

"The application of econometrics to the interpretation of economic statistics, as planned by the Cowles commission, has tremendous possibilities, for the mass of accurate statistics available is enormous."

Crew of 27 Saved as Ship Is Dashed to Pieces on Rocks

SASSARI, Sardinia, May 14.—(AP)—The Greek freighter Hadjs di Pateros, bound from Marseilles to Le Ros, went on the rocks off the Sardinian coast today and sank in heavy seas five miles southwest of Point Vignole. Her crew of 27 was taken off by the Italian steamer Domano and the Danish steamer Freja just before the freighter was dashed to pieces.

MACHADO NAMED IN SLAYING OF CUBAN STUDENT

MEXICO CITY, May 14.—(AP)—Rafael Iturriga, former secretary of the interior and navy in Cuba, testified on a witness stand here last night that President Machado of Cuba sent gunmen to Mexico to slay Julio Antonio Mella in 1929. The testimony was given in the Second District court, where Jose Lopez Valinas is on trial for the slaying.

Iturriaga, who once served in President Machado's cabinet, said he had definite knowledge that Machado ordered Mella's murder because Mella, a university student exiled from Cuba, had taken up his residence in Mexico and was writing criticism against Machado for the Cuban press.

Iturriaga said Machado, at one cabinet meeting, became so enraged at an article in which Mello called Machado "a donkey with claws," that he dismissed his cabinet after saying, "I will silence that tongue, even though he go to Russia."

BENEATH THIS HOOD you will find the time-proved and reliable Chevrolet motor, which combines unequalled economy with smoothness, speed, quietness and flexibility

Raise that big, impressive Chevrolet hood. Look at that fine, modern, six-cylinder engine underneath. Right there lies one of the chief reasons why Chevrolet continues to be America's largest-selling automobile!

For that engine is a six—and only a six, as Chevrolet builds it, combines both the smoothness you want and the economy you want. With anything more than six cylinders, you sacrifice Chevrolet's famous low cost of operation—the lowest of any car you can buy. With anything less than six cylinders, you sacrifice the inherent smoothness that makes driving enjoyable.

That engine is mechanically sound—Over three and a half years of continuous improving, refining, and testing have gone into its development. The result: It's as nearly 100% perfect as the motor of a quality low-priced car can be!

That engine is thoroughly proved—Its basic design and construction have been tested and proved by billions of miles of service, in the hands of millions of owners. And today, over a hundred thousand of these engines are in daily service on the roads of America.

That engine is up-to-date in every respect—Due to many mechanical advancements, it develops 60 horsepower—delivers a top speed of from 65 to 70 miles an hour—accelerates from a standstill to 35 miles an hour in less than 7 seconds. Combined with Free Wheeling and Syncro-Mesh shifting, it delivers performance thrills no other low-priced car can equal.

Its advantages are yours for as little as $445—Due to new reduced prices, the new Chevrolet Six now sells for one of the very lowest prices in the motor car market. And all 14 big, high-quality models are available for immediate delivery.

TEN MILLION TONS OF FREIGHT WAIT FOR WATERWAY

Saving Will Be More than $10,000,000.

St. Louis, Mo., May 14.—[Special.]—A grand total of 10,501,791 tons of freight a year will be available for shipment through the Illinois waterway, which, when completed in October, will connect Chicago with St. Louis and New Orleans.

This is the estimate of Theodore Brent of New Orleans, a nationally recognized traffic authority, based upon freight now being carried by barge lines on the Mississippi river system. The estimated saving in transportation costs through use of the waterway is $10,630,104 a year.

Coal and Wheat Biggest Items.

Northbound the annual tonnages of principal commodities will be: Sugar, 124,800 tons; lumber, 874,500 tons; canned goods, 69,239 tons; cement, 45,736 tons; iron and steel, 556,700 tons; sisal, 25,000 tons; coal, 4,855,000 tons, and miscellaneous merchandise, 201,839 tons.

Southbound the estimated tonnages will be: Iron ore, 800,000 tons; wheat, 1,072,500 tons; coarse grain, 1,362,000 tons; flour, 400,000 tons, and miscellaneous merchandise, 114,071 tons.

Barge lines have by common conception been associated with the carrying of bulky and heavy raw products, ore, and building materials, but they also carry a wide assortment of manufactured articles, a form of traffic that will increase, the shippers say, when the important manufacturing center of Chicago is connected with St. Louis and the gulf.

Will Aid Fertilizer Industry.

Some of the packet freight now being carried on the Mississippi are medicines and toilet preparations, matches, glassware, beverages, motor vehicles, soap, canned goods, malt syrup, baking powder, and starch.

The heavy northbound commodities also will include cotton and other farm products from the south and coffee from South America. The manufacture of fertilizer is a growing industry that is expected to benefit from the opening of the waterway, and this will mean large shipments of phosphate rock from the south.

The Inland Waterways corporation, now operating barge lines on the Mississippi, plans to extend its service to Chicago when the waterway is completed, and it is known that at least one group of private business men plan to establish a fast packet boat service between St. Louis and Chicago.

Develop Lake-River Vessel.

The waterway is expected to stimulate manufacturing in St. Louis and Chicago and to foster new industries, with resultant benefits to both rail and river transportation, and other barge and packet services will be required to handle the traffic, according to the shippers. Recent experiments in packet boat construction have resulted in a boat capable of navigating on the great lakes as well as the inland waterways, and this will make it possible to eliminate transfer costs on goods shipped through Chicago.

Modern river packet boats carry approximately 3,000 tons of deadweight cargo, 2,000 tons below deck and 1,000 tons above. They can move down stream at fifteen miles an hour and upstream at six. It is estimated that they will make seventh morning deliveries from Chicago to New Orleans.

100 Million Ton Miles in Month.

While definite figures on the tonnage of freight to be carried through the Illinois waterway are not available, comparatively accurate estimates are made from the reports of the barge lines now in operation and which will extend their service to Chicago. The statement of one of these lines for March, 1932, showed that from St. Louis to New Orleans alone 112,744 tons of freight was carried, amounting to 100,377,162 ton miles.

This tremendous volume of freight included 75 different commodities. The barges, during the month, transported 3,922 tons of canned goods, 229 tons of tractors, 54 tons of furniture, 420 tons of glass bottles and jelly glasses, 106 tons of baking powder and starch, 158 tons of matches, 509 tons of medicines and toilet preparations, 552 tons of iron and steel products, 457 tons of malt sirup, 242 tons of metalware, and 308 tons of beverages.

On the return trips the barges brought 1,870 tons of canned goods, 22,123 tons of sugar, 3,089 tons of coffee, 2,715 tons of sisal, 5,167 tons of sulphur, 1,611 tons of cast iron pipe, 2,203 tons of bags and burlap, 2,153 tons of wood pulp, and 886 tons of miscellaneous merchandise.

Some idea of the value to the waterway will be to Chicago is given by the figures on the barge traffic to and from St. Louis for 1931. St. Louis firms shipped 300,040 tons of freight by barge lines and received 209,864 during a year in which the shipment of both raw and manufactured materials fell to low levels.

Joins Circus

ELIZABETH COBB BRODY.

New York, May 14.—(AP)—Under the "big top" of a circus on tour, Elizabeth Cobb Chapman Brody, only daughter of Irvin S. Cobb, hopes to gather the "local color" she needs for her latest book.

For several weeks, she will live and travel with professional circus performers, appearing herself as a costumed rider in the parade opening the performance.

"I am not going to perform," she said today, "mostly because I can't do stunts on horses even though I have ridden them most of my life."

Mrs. Brody, known as "Buff" to her novelist father, will make her first appearance with the circus at Washington Monday.

Mrs. Brody, whose first husband was Frank Michler Chapman Jr., of Englewood, N. H., is 28. Her first book was published in 1927.

FITTING NURSES TO JOBS IS TOPIC OF CONFERENCE

Methods of bringing nurses to the jobs to which they are best suited were under discussion yesterday at the Palmer house, where representatives of the midwest division of the American Nursing association met. Michigan, Indiana, Iowa, Wisconsin, and Illinois were represented at the conference. Miss M. H. McMillan, head of nurses at the Presbyterian hospital, presided.

In the eight months since these activities have been under way, Miss McMillan said, the training and ability of each nurse has been considered in sending her to any particular position and nurses have been encouraged to prepare themselves for specific posts by special courses or by experience.

Elderly Man Picks Park Island to Kill Himself

After scribbling a note and seating himself on a slab of rock on the northerly island in Grant park an elderly man shot and killed himself yesterday afternoon. The note read: "I am 68 years old. My wife died and I have no home, no money and no work." He was neatly dressed in a dark suit and brownish topcoat. Two anchors were tatooed on his right forearm, and hand and a star on his left hand. A watch and 3 cents were found in his pockets.

MAYOR CHARGES THAT GOV. LESLIE BREAKS DRY LAW

Accuser Facing Trial on Liquor Charge.

Muncie, Ind., May 14.—[Special.]—Mayor George R. Dale, who, with his chief of police, a police commissioner, and other police officers and bootleggers, will go on trial Monday in the United States District court at Indianapolis on charges of conspiracy to violate the prohibition laws, today in his paper, the Weekly Opinion, charged Gov. Harry G. Leslie of Indiana with being a violator of the prohibition laws. Leslie has nothing to do with the prosecution of Dale, but Dale declares the prosecution of himself is a Republican "frameup" against a Democrat. In his paper Dale says:

"I hope to change the rule that now prevails of prosecuting Democratic mayors in Indiana and overlooking drunkfests thrown by the Republican Hoosier governors, such as the one sponsored by Gov. Leslie when he entertained 38 governors at French Lick last summer."

"Pickled to the Gills."

Dale says some of the guests at that party were "pickled to the gills." He adds: "I was invited to enter the governor's bar at French Lick Springs hotel by a member of Gov. Leslie's legislative budget committee.

"I was introduced to a famous governor who was surrounded by newspaper men. I had to shake that governor's left hand because he had a Scotch highball firmly grasped in his right."

Dale adds that next year, if they get in Indiana a new attorney general and a new district attorney, he is going to demand an investigation of that French Lick bar."

Nine of Ten Convicted.

Indianapolis, Ind., May 14.—[Special.]—Nine of the ten defendants in the Anderson liquor conspiracy case were found guilty in a verdict returned in federal court here late today. The jury deliberated 4 hours and 45 minutes.

Those convicted are:

Police Chauffeur Freed.

The jury acquitted Louis Lavell, police chauffeur, whom the government charged with delivering a gallon of alcohol from police headquarters to a friend of the Anderson mayor, Jesse H. Mellett. Mayor Mellett, also a defendant, was excused from immediate trial because of illness.

Judge Robert C. Baltzell set May 23 as the date for imposing sentence. He permitted all except two of the defendants to retain their liberty under their existing bonds.

SALE OF SOAP COMPANY BRINGS A $300,000 SUIT

The Continental Illinois Bank and Trust company, the Continental Illinois company, its investment affiliate, and Howard O. Morehouse, vice president of the company, were named codefendants yesterday in a $300,000 damage suit filed in the Circuit court by John W. R. Bradford, a Cleveland broker, and Daniel E. Knowles, a promoter.

The declaration charged that the representatives of the bank and the investment company and Whitehouse had acted as agents of James S. Kirk & Co., soap manufacturers. The plaintiffs, the declaration charged, submitted the name of the Procter & Gamble Soap company to the agents as a prospective buyer of the Kirk company. This was done, it was charged, with the understanding that if the sale was carried through, they would pay Bradford and Knowles the usual "finding fee" amounting to 5 per cent of the total sales price.

The first negotiations occurred in June, 1929, the declaration charged, and the sale was completed for a price of $6,000,000 in April, 1930. The finding fees have not yet been paid, the bill charged.

ARMY RESERVE OFFICERS LEAVE FOR CAMP TODAY

Reserve officers from Illinois, Wisconsin and Michigan will entrain today for Camp Custer, near Battle Creek, Mich., for a week of classroom training before engaging in a command post maneuver to be conducted by Maj. Gen. Frank Parker, commander of the Sixth corps area, from May 28 to 27. The maneuver will be held on the countryside west of Camp Custer.

More than 400 regular army, national guard and reserve officers will participate. Actual command posts will be set up for two infantry corps of six divisions, and a cavalry corps of two divisions. For four days and nights the officers will command theoretical units against a theoretical invader. But there theory ends, as wartime conditions will be simulated as closely as possible in order to test thoroughly the abilities of the high ranking officers involved.

After the maneuver Maj. Gen. Parker will hold a critique on May 28, to be attended by all the officers involved in the exercises.

Mr. Straus said he has passed through many periods of depression and great buying opportunity, but considers the purchasing power of the consumer's dollar greater now than at any time in the last half century.

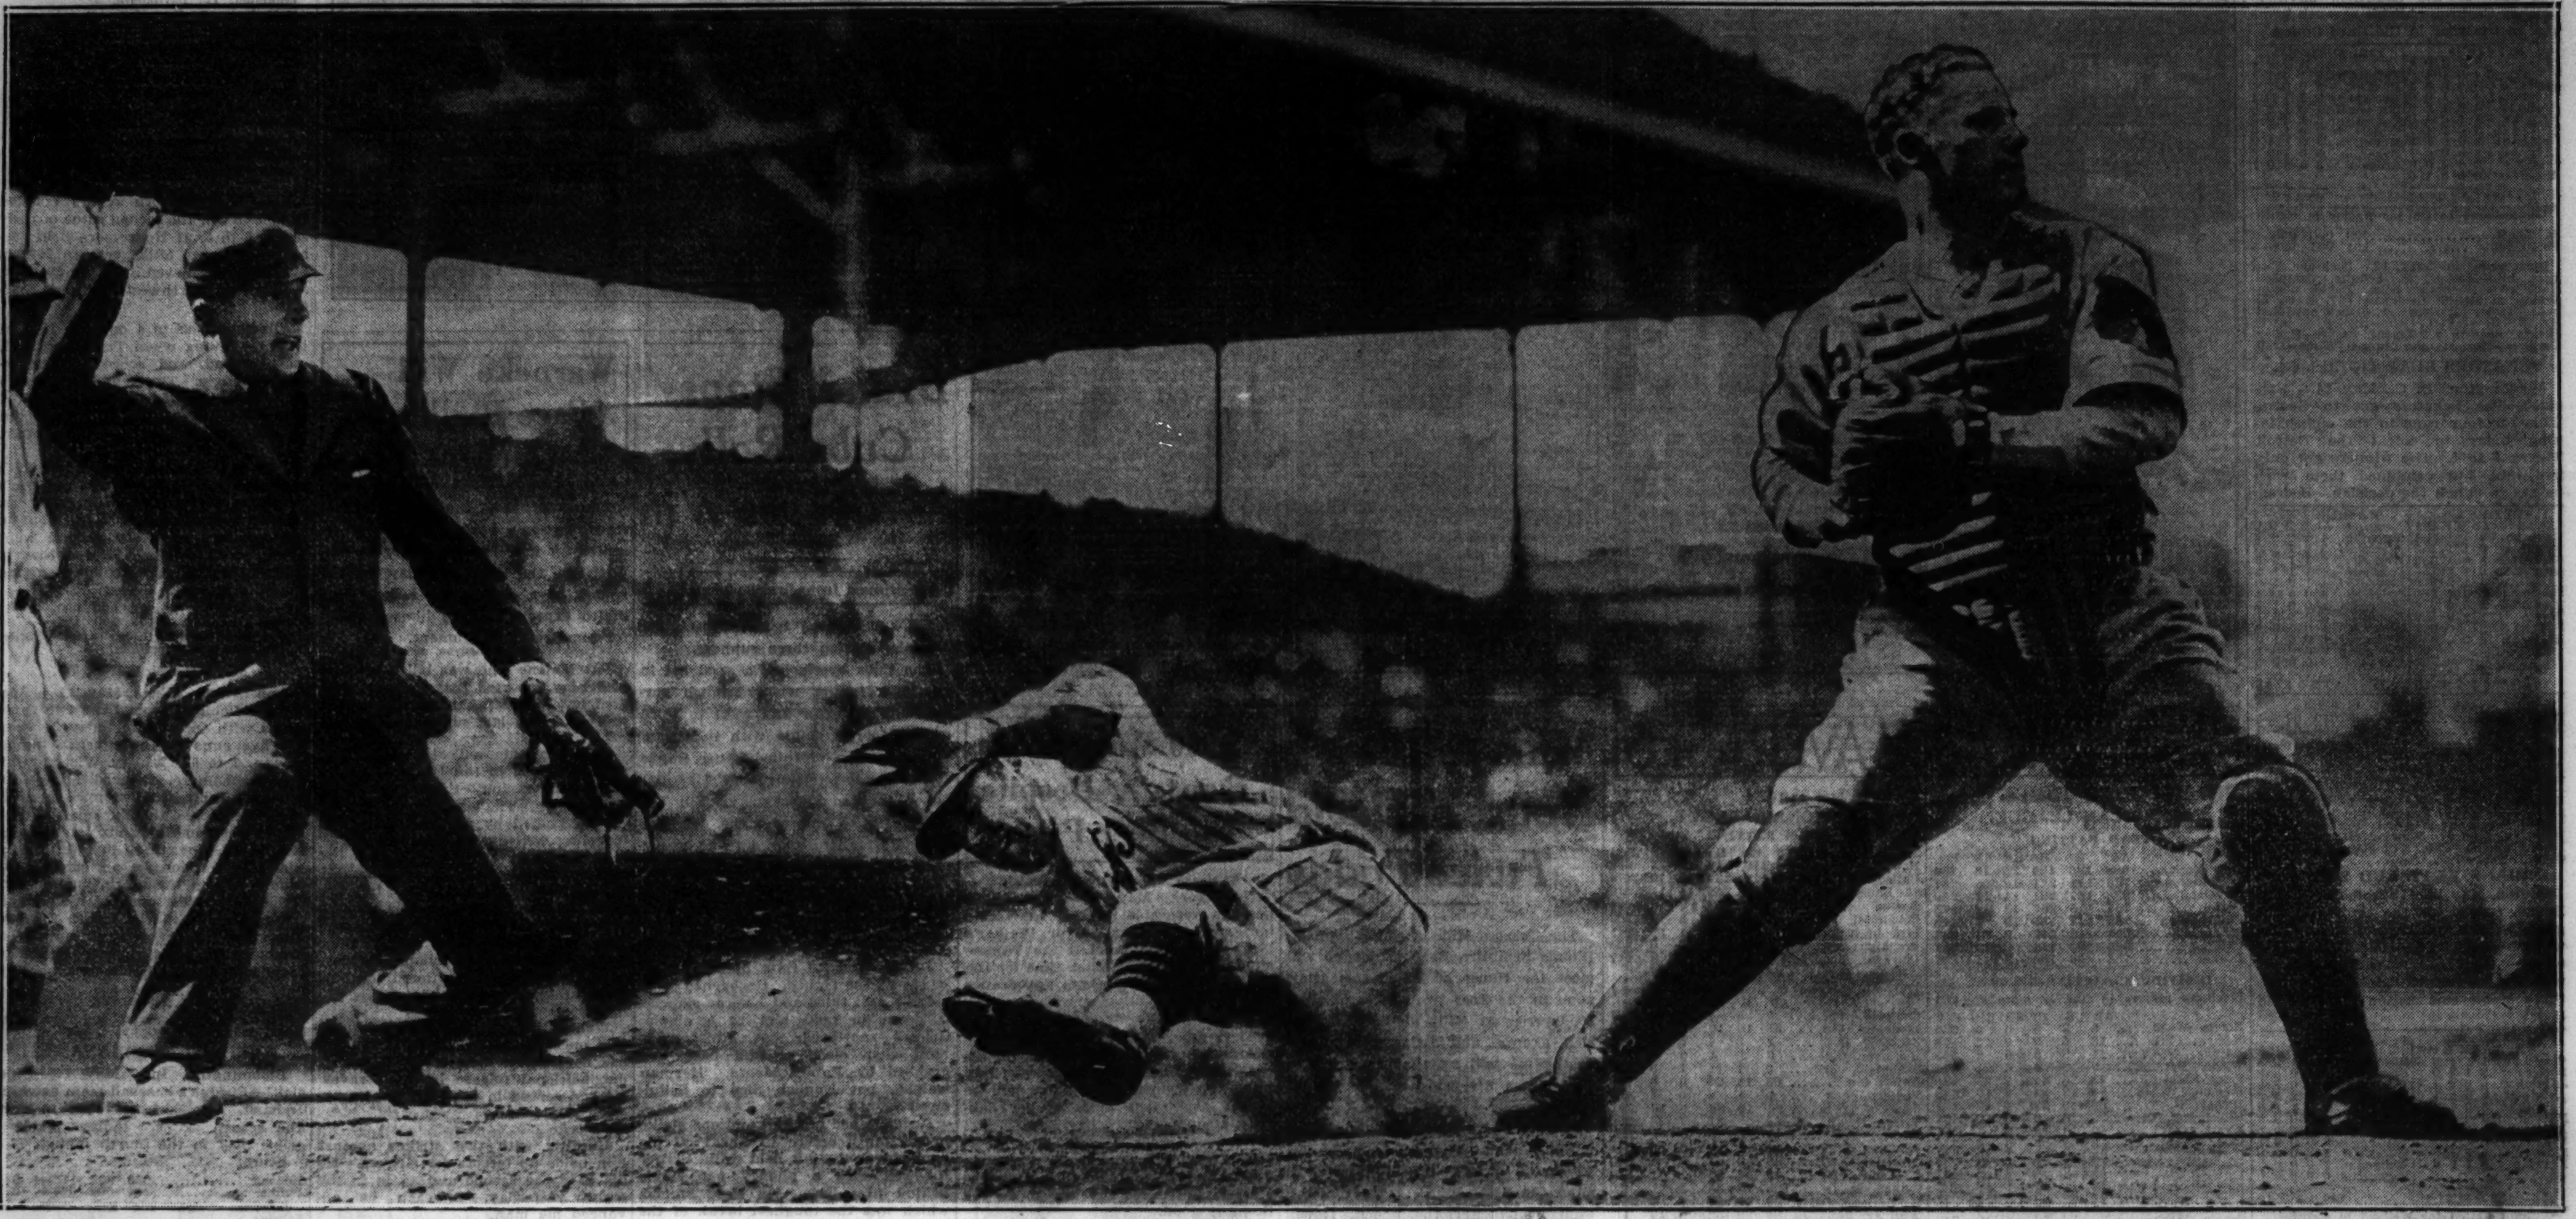
BURGOO KING WINS, TICK ON 2D IN PREAKNESS

BRAVES' 2 RUN RALLY IN 9TH WHIPS CUBS, 7-6; DECIDES SERIES

OUT AT THE PLATE! HOW THAT RUN WOULD HAVE HELPED LATER ON!



Bill Jurges slides across the plate to the tune of "Yer out," rendered by Umpire Stark. Catcher Red Hargrave of the Braves, having made a forceout at the home plate, is preparing to snap a throw to first base in an effort to execute a double play. The setting for this action in the second inning was built up when Jurges walked, went to second while Grimes was reaching first on an error and to third on a pass to Richbourg. Billy Herman then tapped to Urbanski at shortstop, whose throw to Hargrave beat Jurges to the plate. English followed with a single, scoring two runs, but the Cubs could have used more, for they lost, 7 to 6.

Those second place Braves are just a bit tougher than they look. The Cubs caught them twice and passed them once yesterday, but even this did not discourage the easterners. They simply laid back until the ninth, tendered a reception to Rescuer Charley Root and scored two runs which assured them a 7 to 6 triumph despite a serious fuss kicked up by the league leaders in their final stand. The Boston troop also won the series, 2 to 1, and that's the first time this season this has happened to the Chicagoans.

Root entered the struggle because it was necessary at the end of the eight innings to remove a tired old fellow named Burleigh Grimes. A bad first inning and another series of untoward incidents in the fourth had caused no end of wear on the veteran's arm. But because the first two of a quintet of Brave hurlers had insisted on being charitable before 20,000 the Cubs could not avoid going into the ninth with a 5 to 5 tie.

Root to Rescue [?].

Root at least was kind enough to relieve the suspension as soon as he started. The first man to face him was Bill Urbanski, who boomed one over the wall. A scrawny hit was the cause of another run. Then the Cubs started to assert themselves. They had been handed three runs at the start by the wildness of 20 year old Bob Brown and Fred Frankhouse. In the sixth they actually earned a couple by clubbing Huck Betts. And in the ninth they hammered Socks Seibold hard enough to get one man home, but Dutch Brandt promptly introduced a strikeout ball which broke up the show.

Grimes' bad first inning began when with one out Urbanski fanned on a wild pitch and arrived at first. Berger scratched a single to Grimm and Worthington whistled a safety through short, Urbanski scoring. Schulmerich filled the bases on a tantalizing roller to Jurges. Randy Moore ripped off a healthy fly to his namesake in center, and Berger hiked home after the catch. Maranville's hopper to Herman ended the agony.

After getting the first two men in the Cubs' half, young Brown walked English and J. Moore. These two pulled a double steal, whereupon Brown walked Stephenson. He started to walk Hartnett, but after two wide pitches, Frankhouse was called in to complete the pass, forcing in English. The three runners expired when Grimm grounded to Maranville.

Braves Charitable.

Frankhouse walked Jurges to open the second inning and then did a few other things which assisted the Cubs to two runs. Grimes bunted to R. Moore and Frankhouse dashed over to cover first but dropped the ball. The bases were filled when Richbourg walked. On Herman's tap to short, Jurges was nailed at the plate but English immediately slapped a single into left to score Grimes and Richbourg. This was where Betts stepped in to put the Cubs in their place.

Merely a matter of inches kept the Cubs from staving off the three runs that put the Braves in front, 5 to 3, in the fourth inning. Maranville led off with a single. Hargrave walked and Betts flied to Stevie. English kicked Knothe's grounder, filling the bases. Grimes struck out Urbanski. Berger then flied to left and the ball hit the bricks just above Stevie's

The University of Wisconsin track and field team, which will defend its Western conference championship next Saturday at Northwestern, yesterday defeated Chicago and Northwestern in a triangular meet at Stagg field. Wisconsin scored in all sixteen events, finishing with 88 points. Chicago was second with 66, while Northwestern, shut out in five events and scoring only one second place, trailed with 20 points.

Wisconsin and Chicago divided all first places, each winning eight. John Brooks, Chicago's Negro star, who earlier this spring broke the broad jump record at the Drake relays, was responsible for four first places and 20 points. Brooks' performances made him the high point man of the meet.

Gets Little Competition.

Brooks won both sprints, the 220 yard low hurdles and the broad jump, his specialty. None of his marks was impressive, but only in the hurdles was he offered any serious competition. Brooks ran the 100 yards in 10 seconds, the 220 yards in 22 seconds, winning by four yards. He raced stride by stride with Roden of Wisconsin in the low hurdles and sprinted in the last 20 yards to win in the slow time of 24 210 seconds. Then Brooks finished his afternoon with a first place leap of 23 feet 8⅝ inches in the broad jump, a foot less than his best record.

New York, May 14.—The weather man today insisted the White Sox take one licking from the Yankees before attacking Boston. And the Sox responded in a great big way by suffering a 6 to 0 shutout on a diet of four singles, two of which were knocked by Funk and Selph after two were out in the ninth.

The contest, which gave the Chicagoans their 17th defeat in their last 19 starts, was a pretty nice duel between Sam Jones and George Pipgras, who was pitching his second consecutive shutout, until the Yankee seventh. In the first inning Earl Combs made a homer to start the Yankee offensive and a 1 to 0 tabulation prevailed for six innings, with brilliant throwing plays in the infield keeping each side from altering the standing.

In the seventh things went to pieces and the New Yorkers rushed four runs across before the first putout could be accomplished.

Sam Stops Old Jinx.

The only solace Jones got was the fact that he stopped two old arch enemies, Babe Ruth and Lou Gehrig. Neither contributed a thing to the nine hit total piled up by the Yanks and they were the gents who supplied the second and third putouts which pulled down the balloon in the seventh.

The Sox offensive was right timid, as you may have gathered from the knowledge that their total batting consisted of four singles. The Sox now have gone 23 innings without scoring a run. Selph and Seeds singled successively in the fourth and Funk and Selph singled successively in the ninth. In the ninth Seeds followed the two hits with a walk to fill the bases, but Kress flied out to end the game.

Selph Gets First Hit.

Selph won the distinction of being the first Chicagoan to reach first when he singled to right with one down in the fourth inning. Seeds followed with a single to right, which put Selph on third, but when Seeds tried to get to second on Ruth's throw toward third Lary cut off the throw and his shot to Gehrig had Seeds trapped. Selph then edged off third and Gehrig diverted the play to Crosetti, who tagged Selph as Carey tried to slide back.

In the sixth the Sox appeared to have a chance, but again Yankee throwing was faster than Sox running. Grube walked and Jones sacrificed. Dickey's throw to first hit Jones in the back, but when Grube tried to reach third on the error Lazzeri recovered the ball and threw to Crosetti in time to catch him sliding. Funk forced Jones and was out himself when he sought to steal a few seconds later.

The Yanks Go to Bat.

And now here's the detail of the big disturbance in the Yankee seventh: Chapman walked and Dickey singled to center, Chapman reaching third and Dickey getting to second when Funk threw to the wrong base. Lazzeri was walked intentionally, filling the bases, after which Crosetti singled to center, scoring Chapman and Dickey. The bases again were full when Pipgras slipped a bunt past Jones. Combs singled to center, scoring Lazzeri and Crosetti. Lary's bunt forced Pipgras at third, Ruth flied to Fothergill and Appling threw out Gehrig.

Dickey's third hit, a stolen base by Lazzeri and a single by Pipgras in the eighth gave the Yanks their sixth and last run.

15,000 See Dr. Freeland in Aurora Win

Old Dr. Freeland took some pride in the Preakness victory he scored in 1929 and gave 15,000 at the Aurora track a great thrill yesterday when he won the Century of Progress handicap.

Maybe it was just natural that the old Doctor should be in a running mood on Preakness day. Anyway, he was, and he fairly made a show of his rivals as he flew around the six furlong course in 1:12 to win by four lengths.

Tannery, the aged flyer from Kentucky, was running gallantly when the finish came and took down second money, but he was four lengths back of the easy moving Dr. Freeland. Burning Up, which threatened to become the spring champion at Aurora, was thoroughly beaten but was third.

Back of the three flying leaders came Scimitar, Sherab, Fortunate Youth, and Butterbeans, all of them so soundly beaten they didn't have a challenge to offer coming down the home stretch.

Old Doc Has 'Em Dizzy.

The old Doctor had 'em dizzy. He ran the half in :48, which wasn't so fast, but from there on he added plenty of steam and was going easier

Derby Victor Comes from Behind in Stretch.

Baltimore, Md., May 14.—[Special.]—E. R. Bradley's Kentucky Derby winner, Burgoo King, strengthened his claim to the three year old championship today by winning the $50,000 added Preakness at Pimlico before one the of the most distinguished gatherings ever to see a horse race. In a neck and neck battle down the stretch the son of Bubbling Over won by a head from Mrs. L. C. Kaufman's Tick On, which was a nose before Walter M. Jefford's Boatswain.

Vice President Charles Curtis, Gov. Albert C. Ritchie, Mayor Howard Jackson of Baltimore, senators and congressmen from Washington, and society folk from the Atlantic seaboard saw the finish—one of the closest and most thrilling in the 59 years' history of the Preakness. It was estimated by Mathias I. Daiger, secretary of the Maryland Jockey club, that 40,000 persons, a record for the course, saw the race.

He Looks Like a Champ.

Burgoo King earned $50,375 and finished the mile and three-sixteenths in 1:59 4-5 over a track that was considered fast, but which had been dulled by recent rains. The gross value of the race was $60,375 with $5,000 to second, $3,000 to third, and $2,000 to the fourth. Mad Pursuit, the Mereworth stud colorbearer, was fourth.

The result was vindication of Burgoo King's victory in the Derby. Strangely enough, he was not the favorite. Extraordinary support for Tick On, which ran coupled in the betting with M. L. Schwartz's Gusto, made that entry the public choice. Officials announced $182,001 had been bet on the race in the mutuels.

Burgoo King returned $8.50, $5.00, and $4.00. Tick On paid $3.80 for second, and $3.00 to show. Boatswain, a colt which did not start at all as a two year old, returned $6.80 to run third.

Plenty Close, That Finish.

The race was truly run in every particular, no one of the nine starters having an excuse or an alibi. As a consequence Burgoo King has been accepted as a colt of class and one that will be a formidable contender in future three year old classics. He pulled up smoothly with Eugene James, his rider in the Derby, patting him on the neck.

So close was the finish that many were in doubt until the numbers were posted. Back of the first four the order of finish was War Hero, Gusto, Daisaburo, Curacao and Lucky Tom.

The fractional times were: 0:23 3-5, 0:48, 1:13 2-5, 1:39 2-5, and 1:59 4-5. The start, which was made after only a short delay at the barrier, was good.

Boatswain at once sprang into the lead, closely attended by Tick On, with Burgoo King about the middle of the pack.

Swinging for the paddock turn, Boatswain had a comfortable lead of two lengths. Buddy Hanford was holding him snug. Tick On was well rated back of him.

The Winner Moves.

James took Burgoo King to the outside as the field turned into the back stretch and evidently was wary of being crowded into the rail. Hanford took Boatswain wide to avoid any poor footing close to the fence.

At the far turn James evidently felt it was time to go. He challenged by sharply rousing the son of Bubbling Over.

In a moment Boatswain's lead was menaced. Robertson, sensing the move by James, also sent Tick On along, but Burgoo King moved past him and soon was head and head with Boat-

Burgoo King Is 3d Horse to Win Both Derby, Preakness

Baltimore, Md., May 14.—[Special.]—Burgoo King's victory today places the E. R. Bradley colt alongside of Sir Barton and Gallant Fox as the only horses which have triumphed in both the Kentucky Derby and the Preakness.

In 1919 Sir Barton won the Preakness, then went to Churchill Downs to defeat a crack field in the historic Blue Grass classic.

Eleven years later, in 1930, Earl Sande, one of racing's most famous jockeys, rode Gallant Fox to victory at Pimlico and then piloted him roughshod over the Kentucky Derby field.

Burgoo King's victory today marked the first time in history that a Kentucky Derby winner has repeated in the Preakness, since prior to this year the Pimlico fixture usually has been run in advance of the Derby.

25,000 Watch Sox Beaten, Despite Big Beer Parade

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

New York, May 14.—Some 25,000 persons were able to elude the traffic blockade caused by Mayor Walker's beer parade and reached the Yankee stadium well before game time for the White Sox's only Gotham appearance of the trip.

The Sox left at midnight for Boston where they hope to do better than heretofore. Pat Caraway may pitch the opener. The game will be played at Brabes field, as per Sabbath custom.

The sun was shining all afternoon until the eighth inning, then a shower started, but much too late to do the Sox any good.

Four postponements out of six scheduled encounters with the A's and Yanks was doing pretty well, however.

Brandt Stops Cubs' Rally; Braves Win

reach. The drive bounded back for a triple, scoring three runners.

The Cubs overlooked a good bet in the fifth inning when English survived on an error and went to third on J. Moore's single with none out. Nothing came of this because Stevie flied to short center and Hartnett poked into a double play. But the sixth saw an improvement. Grimes singled after two were out and scored on Richbourg's triple against the right field screen. Herman plunked one into center to score Richbourg with the tying run.

Then Came the Ninth.

Jurges tried to cook up more Cub scores in the eighth. He opened with a drive past third and Knothe slapped it down to hold him to a single. Grimes sacrificed, but Richbourg's hard slam close to first base was grabbed by Randy Moore. Herman walked, but English flied to Schulmerich.

Root pitched one ball and one strike in the ninth before Urbanski hit his homer over the left field wall. Berger followed with a phoney pop single behind first base. He stole second, which was the toughest break of the inning. He went to third on Worthington's sacrifice and scored on Schulmerich's fly, which J. Moore chased almost to the center field wall.

Then the Cubs came through with their dying gasp. Moore slashed a double to right and a single by Stephenson scored him. Seibold was promptly yanked and Brandt made short work of the remainder of the inning. Hartnett forced Stevie and barely escaped a double play. Then Brandt fanned both Grimm and Jurges.

Minneapolis, Minn., May 14.—[Special.]—Minnesota broke even in its two game baseball series here today with Chicago, by trimming the Maroons, 13 to 3.

The Gophers hopped on the offerings of Young Pat Page for eight runs in the second inning, and he made way for Lefty Henshaw, who had tamed Minnesota yesterday. The southpaw yielded five more runs before the contest was over. Joe Temple, playing first base for the Chicagoans, slammed out three hits, to lead his team's attack.

BADGERS OUTWIT IOWA, 2-1.

Madison, Wis., May 14.—[Special.]—Wisconsin defeated Iowa here today, 2 to 1, and in as wild a ninth inning finish as has been staged in the Big Ten in years.

Trailing 1 to 0 in the last half of the ninth, Plankey was out, but Olson singled to center. He went to second on a wild pitch by Riecke and to third on a passed ball by Schmidt. Smilgoff hit an easy roller to Shortstop Kenny, who trapped Olson between third and home. Olson finally made a wild dash for the plate and was safe when Riecke dropped the ball. In the meantime Smilgoff continued running unnoticed around the bases and finally dived into five Iowa players standing about the plate to score the winning run.

Warneke Will Face Phillies in Opener Today

Lon Warneke, the Cub phenom whose season's work to date is represented by five straight victories, will pitch to the Phillies today in the opener of a four game series. Bob Smith expects to have himself ready for tomorrow's assignment.

Pat Malone who was billed to start yesterday reported that he was bothered by an infected tooth. The molar was extracted last night.

Burt Whitman, a Boston scribe, has so much faith in the Braves that he is accompanying them on their present trip. The last time the Braves were dignified by the presence of a traveling writer was in 1921.

Bob Newsome, a big right handed rookie who couldn't report to the Cubs for training because his leg was broken by a mule kick, was in uniform yesterday. He is still limping as the result of the mishap. Employment probably will be found for him at Reading, Pa., soon.

Wee Willie Sherdel, the southpaw who once started with the Cardinals, has been given his ten day notice of unconditional release by the Braves He had served in the National league since 1918.

Bunting with two strikes against him holds no terrors for Grimes. He did it in the second and again in the eighth yesterday. On each he advanced his man.

Illinois got off to a one run lead in the first inning when Tryban walked, stole second, and scored on Steurnagel's single. The Wildcats got two runs in their half after Smith walked three men in a row and Auguston singled, scoring Remus and Potter. Mills then relieved Smith.

Illinois tied the score in the fourth when a walk, a single and Auguston's wild throw permitted Wahl to score. Tryban singled after two were out in the seventh, stole second and went home on Auguston's bad throw to first on Steurnagel's grounder, giving the Illini a lead. Score:

MICHIGAN WINS, 7-5.

Ann Arbor, Mich., May 14.—[Special.]—Michigan evened the two game series with Ohio State today by scoring five runs in the seventh inning to win, 7 to 5. Whitey Wistert, Chicago sophomore, relieved McKay in the third inning and stopped an Ohio rally. He limited the Buckeyes to four hits in the remaining six innings and struck out nine, three in the ninth.

HOME WORK SETS TRACK RECORD TO DEFEAT JUSTINA

Captures Handicap Stake at Sportsman's.

BY CHARLES BARTLETT.

When the Chicago Heights handicap, the feature race at Sportsman's Park, came around yesterday the bettors in the crowd of 12,000 couldn't seem to make up their minds about which horse in the field of five they should make favorite. At that it was quite a problem for each of the entry had won its last start. When the field did get to the post, however, it was George Collins' mare Justina who finally was the betting choice by a slight margin over Home Work.

Home Work must have felt slighted about this, for he held the track record for the distance, six and one half furlongs. Just to prove he should have been the favorite, he won the race like an odds on choice and chopped a fifth of a second off his own time for the distance, turning it in 1:21 3-5. Justina, which was a bit tardy in getting under way, took the place from Wild Child, the early leader and winner of the Inaugural race. King Cherokee and Jessie Carey wound up fourth and fifth, respectively. Home Work paid $8.08.

Martha D. Is Victor.

It was the talented Johnny McLaren, leading jockey of the meeting, who had the mount on Home Work when the son of Broomstick set his record, and he began practicing for it as early as the third when he brought Martha O. down in front by five lengths to break another track record. She ran the distance of approximately five furlongs in 59 3-5 seconds, two-fifth better than the mark hung up by Justina on opening day. Nick D. was second and Nardo third.

The daily double players who have been trying to push the price on the combination over $100 finally succeeded yesterday, when they bracketed La Golondrina in the second and Martha D in the third. The pair paid $189.18. The total pool for the double was $11,534, or 5,767 tickets. Fifty-seven betters held the winning combination.

Big Star Pays $54.44.

La Golondrina, ridden by Jockey R. Cheatham, who has been riding in Kentucky, won from two other long shots, Southland Belle and Sorry, and paid $22.34 in the two dollar mutuels. Martha D's mutuel price in the third was $8.18.

La Golondrina was the second long shot of the day, for Mickey Harrison had kicked home another one in Big Star, which had been so far overlooked in the betting that he paid $54.44. Spanish Flirt was second and That's All third.

Kelso, another long priced winner, scored in the fourth under a good ride by L. Dye, who took him to the front early and held him there, despite a strong challenge by Harry Hiover, the favorite, in the stretch. Kelso, which hadn't been home first since way back in January at Jefferson Park, paid $22.64.

Diaquiri, the speedy filly which has been trying to run a bit too far her last few races, finally went back to her old distance of about five furlongs in the Burnham purse, sixth race on the program. After taking the lead away from Miss Peggy shortly after the field got away, she set the pace all the way around. She paid $5.94 to win. Miss Peggy held on for second, with Estin third.

Top Flight Wins Belmont Acorn Stakes

New York, May 14.—[Special.]—Top Flight, Cornelius Vanderbilt Whitney's 3 year old filly by Dis Donc-Flyatit, captured the second running of the Acorn stakes at Belmont Park today before a crowd of 15,000.

By making a runaway race of the mile dash for 3 year old fillies, Top Flight redeemed herself in the eyes of race followers for her sad showing in the Wood Memorial stakes at Jamaica. Top Flight was the favorite at 9 to 10.

Workman Rides Four Winners.

The famous light blue silks and brown cap of the Whitney stable were in evidence all afternoon, three firsts and a third falling to the Whitney horses, which earned a total of $21,150 for the day.

Sonny Workman, the stable jockey, had a great day, riding all the Whitney horses and in addition piloting W. R. Coe's Osculator to victory in the Fair Play handicap, giving him four winners and a third place.

Caterwaul Comes Home.

In addition to the Acorn stakes, which were worth $12,850 to the winner, Workman rode Mr. Whitney's Caterwaul to win the twentieth running of the $7,500 Keene Memorial stakes for two year olds. Workman was up on Three Daggers, which won the Linden purse for two year old maidens and gained $700, and added another $100 by placing the Whitney gelding Marplot third in the opening race at a mile and a sixteenth.

NOAH'S PRIDE was off rather slowly and was in close quarters the early running, but came to the outside of the leaders in the stretch run to wear them down and win going away. ANDORA raced to a contending position early and, taking a short lead near the end, held on fairly well. TANTALIZING had early speed and raced gamely, despite being a trifle crowded in the stretch.

QUORUM went to the front at once and, racing well, was never headed, although forced to do his best at the end to withstand the challenge of HALLIARD. Latter was close to the best at all times and, finishing gamely under hard riding, was gaining. ALBAZANO broke slowly, but raced into contention on the inside in the early stages and was a factor thereafter.

DUNES took a short lead entering the back stretch and held on well after being passed by the winner. MOONPHASE raced well from the start and was going gamely at the end.

MOZART, running in greatly improved form with a change in riders, came strongly in the last quarter to wear down RED CROSS SISTER and won going away. RED CROSS SISTER had the most early speed and opened up a long lead, but was not good enough to resist the winner. PLAY BIRD made up some ground in the stretch, but never threatened the leaders.

DR. FREELAND, close to the pace in the early stages, took command when ready and, racing well, held sway to the end to win in hand. TANNERY showed improvement and was always well up. BURNING UP lost much ground by racing wide all the way, but closed with courage.

at the end than at any stage of the journey.

It was Aurora's biggest racing day. The crowd packed its way into the little out in the country track, and it was by far the heaviest betting day of the season. Unofficial figures were that the betting was more than $200,000.

Dr. Freeland wasn't the favorite by any means despite some very nice workouts since he arrived from California a few weeks ago. But he was making his first start at Aurora and the plungers don't seem to want to go for those first time starters here.

Doubles Return $19.72.

Little Toots was the third straight favorite to triumph. She won handily by three lengths from the big band of platers she meet in the mile and a sixteenth third race. Dunes challenged gamely in the stretch, but could get only second money, while Moon Phase, a field horse, with King in the saddle, ran third.

Four hundred and twenty-eight persons coupled them up in the betting. They got $19.72 for each ticket. It was the biggest daily double pool of the meeting and it had a net value of $8,448, there having been about 4,500 tickets sold. In the betting Little Toots paid $7.30.

It was Jockey King's sensational ride which made it possible for Mozart to get up in the last strides and beat Stuyvesant Peabody's Red Cross Sister by a length in the fourth race. Playbird, heavily backed, was third. King brought Mozart almost from out of the skies to make up a dozen lengths and win going away. King had won on Quorum and when he got Mozart home it was his 17th win of the Aurora season. Mozart had many backers because King was riding him. It put King far out in front in the race for the Aurora riding championship.

BRADLEY TRACK TEAM DEFEATS ARMOUR TECH

Peoria, Ill., May 14.—[Special.]—Armour Tech's track and field squad of Chicago was defeated, 90 to 36, in a dual meet with Bradley today. The winners swept four events, the 100 yard dash, pole vault, discus and high jump.

Lambert Redd broke the all time Bradley record in the broad jump with a leap of 24 feet 4¼ inches, and tied another in the high hurdles at 15.4 seconds. He was high point man with 27 points, scoring other firsts in the 100 yard dash and low hurdles, tying for firsts in the pole vault and high jump and taking third in the javelin.

Bradley's ch. c., 3, by Bubbling Over-Minawand. Trained by H. J. Thompson. Went to post at 4:40½. Off at 4:42. Start good from stall gate. Won driving; place same. Scratched: Marmion, Portam, Barcelona Pete.

BURGOO KING, bumped by MAD PURSUIT when the start came, was sent up on the outside to avoid interference going to the first turn. Upon recovering he gained a contending position midway of the back stretch and came with excellent speed for the final drive and was up in the last sixteenth. BOATSWAIN, quick to begin and displaying brilliant early speed, saved all possible ground while racing under slight reserve early and fought it out desperately when put to a severe drive. TICK ON, a forward factor and racing kindly, fell back slightly midway of the second turn, was placed to punishment and, finishing resolutely when coming again, was racing fastest at the end. MAD PURSUIT worked his way up gamely in the final half mile, but could not threaten the first three. WAR HERO was bothered slightly when CURACAO fell back suddenly. He closed with good courage when clear. GUSTO lacked early speed and was held safe. DAISABURO went wide throughout. CURACAO stopped suddenly.

2,000 TO RACE AT WASHINGTON PARK MEETING

American Derby Heads Program; Opens May 23

Stake Events

DATES for the renewal of the series of stake events during the Washington Park season, which opens May 23, are as follows:

Monday, May 23—Washington Park handicap, six furlongs, for 3 year olds and up, $5,000 added.

Saturday, May 28—Robert M. Sweitzer handicap, mile and one-eighth, for 3 year olds and up, $5,000 added.

Monday, May 30—Debutante stakes, 5½ furlongs, for 2 year old fillies, $5,000 added.

Saturday, June 4—Illinois Oaks, mile and one-eighth, for 3 year old fillies, $10,000 added.

Saturday, June 11—Thomas Curran Memorial, 5½ furlongs, for 2 year old colts and geldings, $5,000 added.

Saturday, June 18—American Derby, mile and one-quarter, for 3 year olds, $50,000 added.

Saturday, June 25—Francis S. Peabody Memorial handicap, mile and one-quarter, for 3 year olds and up, $10,000 added.

The metropolitan racing season in Chicago will start May 23, week from tomorrow when the gates swing wide open on the early summer season at Washington Park, which will bring a renewal of the famous old American Derby.

There will be about 2,000 horses—good horses, mind you—for the Washington Park season with about 1,200 of them stabled on the grounds at Washington Park and the other 800 at the Lincoln Fields course.

The American Derby, which many believe will attract a greater crowd this year than did the Kentucky Derby, is to be run on the afternoon of June 18. It will carry $50,000 in added money and has attracted all the starters in the Kentucky Derby along with numerous other stars.

Evening to Race Here.

Among those which did not start in the Derby but which will strive for the American Derby prize is the filly Evening, owned by George D. Widener. Evening won the Florida Derby and only a couple of weeks ago was first in the Chesapeake Stakes in Maryland. Behind her trailed most of the colts of her age which finished back of Burgoo King in the Kentucky Derby.

Most of the horses which will compete for Washington Park's prizes will come from Churchill Downs where the Kentucky spring season winds up this week and from Maryland, where the spring season ended at Pimlico yesterday. There will be a special train in from Pimlico tomorrow bringing many of the eastern headliners. The special horse trains from Kentucky will begin arriving on Thursday.

Numerous Chicago owners will ship their charges over to Washington Park late this week, and quite a number of the topnotchers that have been running at Aurora also will race there.

Seven Stake Events.

The seven stake races which top the Washington Park season are fashioned for all sorts of horses. The Washington handicap will bring all the good sprinters into action on the opening day of the season. It is at 6 furlongs and will be worth $5,000. Gallant Knight, which shattered the Pimlico track record when he won the Dixie handicap a week ago, is already at Washington Park and is being pointed for this race by the veteran horseman, Kay Spence.

Then, a week later, will follow the Robert M. Sweitzer handicap at a mile and an eighth for 3 year olds and upward, the Debutante takes for 2 year old fillies, and the Illinois Oaks for 3 year old fillies, in which the sensational Evening may also be a starter. A week later will come the Curran Memorial for 2 year old colts and geldings, and on the following Saturday the traditional American Derby will be revived.

The closing day stake on June 25 will be the $10,000 added Francis S. Peabody Memorial handicap at a mile and a quarter. In this race the American Derby winner, the Kentucky Derby winner, the Preakness winner, and the best of the older horses may clash.

Chicago Racing Center.

Col. M. J. Winn, head of the American Turf association, which controls Washington Park, believes Chicago will be the center of all the important racing in America this year. He thinks most of the championships will be decided at the big tracks here.

In the WAKE of the NEWS

RACING UNCERTAINTIES.

THERE is no sport which compares to horse racing in its romance, human interests, comedies, tragedies, ups and downs, uncertainties. Perhaps those factors constitute the lure — unquestionably there is a lure, to those who follow the turf for their livelihood.

In any other business uncertainties would be regarded as a menace to soundness. Even with the large amounts of money won or lost, either in stake money or wagers, by absolutely unavoidable circumstances, often seemingly trivial, such hazards are accepted with a philosophy which sooner or later converts every turfman into a philosopher.

Take events immediately preceding the Kentucky Derby run a week ago at Louisville. On the Saturday before Top Flight was future book favorite, on which large sums had been wagered. In future books bettors lose unless the horse starts, the condition being technically known as "play or pay."

Top Flight was the best 2 year old of 1931, unbeaten in seven starts and fully extended to win only once. She earned $219,000 for her owner, the highest amount ever recorded by a horse of her sex.

Top Flight started in the Wood Memorial stake as a final prep for the Derby. She was an odds-on choice in the speculation. She finished fourth, or outside the money, to three colts around which she would have run rings last year. Either this speedy miss was not ready or she had not retained her 2 year old supremacy. The reason remains to be proved later, but Top Flight was withdrawn from the Derby. All monies wagered on her in advance were lost.

On the same Saturday that Top Flight failed in her first test of the year, Burning Blaze, one of the best 2 year olds of 1931, started in a purse race at Louisville as the final tightening up for the severe test a week later.

Before that race, Burning Blaze was the pride and hope of the Nash brothers, wealthy Chicago contractors. Probably none could have named a price for the colt which would have tempted his owners to part with him. No doubt he would have brought more than $50,000 in a forced sale over night. He was worth every bit of $100,000, just as a speculative proposition, with $250,000 worth of stake engagements ahead. Yet competing for a $1,000 purse—not for the money, but to finish his training—Burning Blaze was stepped on in the race, finished winner through gameness, but with a cut tendon which threw him out of training for the year. Whether he ever will race again, and what is his value now, are problematical.

Then on the following Wednesday, Universe, which had beaten Top Flight and thus become a prominent contender, sprained a tendon in a training gallop and was out. Within five days, three of the four most fancied to win by experts, were thrown out of the race.

That was the final stage. In the weeks preceding, dozens of others either had met training mishaps or failed to measure up to the caliber demanded for so important a race.

Then came the Derby itself. Tick On, then favorite, ruined whatever chance he may have had by fractiousness at the post and ultimate getaway to a poor start. The Whitney pair had bad racing luck and were in several jams among the unwieldly field of twenty. Liberty Limited, for which $35,000 was paid as a yearling, broke down in the race, the strain proving too much for legs which had been under suspicion in his training.

When the last quarter mile came, at least four of those finishing well up were in unfavorable positions where they could not get through the pack until too late. The Wake does not think this affected the result so far as the winner was concerned, but some of their owners and trainers do.

Consider then, the uncertainties of training, the mishaps in trials, the luck of the race itself—the start, crowding, judgment or lack of judgment on the part of riders mostly under 20 years old—and you understand why turfmen must become philosophers, accepting smiles or frowns from the fickle Goddess of Chance.

HEAR THAT SONG? MAY BIRDS ARE IN CHICAGOLAND

Warblers, Orioles Make It Gayest Month of Year.

BY BOB BECKER.

(Pictures in Colorato Section.)

The March robin brings forth a big crowd of admirers every spring and the first notes of the bluebird, an early spring arrival, draws comment from many bird fans, but the month of May represents high tide for the spring migration of birds through Chicagoland. Wave after wave of feathered travelers flood us with gay songs and thrill us with the beauty of their plumage. Some of these migrants stay with us during the summer. Others move on northward with the regularity of arrival and departure of mechanical means of transportation.

The field sparrow, marked by its bright rufous color and the absence of spots on its breast, has been flooding the countryside with its clear, plaintive whistle for some time. Bird fans eagerly await the beautiful song of this favorite, which consists of the syllables cher-wee, cher-wee, de-de-de-de-de, with the last few notes blended in a trill.

These syllables give no idea of the rare tone of the field sparrow's song. One must get into the country and hear it during the hush that precedes sundown to appreciate the field sparrow's contribution to the joy of May.

Warblers Exquisitely Colored.

The month of May brings the brilliant warblers, a large family of birds of which about fifty species visit America. Exquisitely colored as the daintiest of tropical humming birds, appearing as if by magic out of the southland, the warblers offer the supreme thrill of spring to the bird fans. They migrate by night and are the chief victims of lighthouses and electric light towers, frequently losing their lives in dashing themselves against these brilliant, beckoning obstructions.

The black throated blue warbler is one of the most attractive of these small migrants, with his gray-blue plumage and his black throat and face. He winters south of Key West and nests northward into Canada. But the Blackburnian warbler, of brilliant orange and black plumage, is the one that brings the tropics to our woods in the month of May.

This bird, more than any other warbler, seems like some bright plumaged bird from the Amazon that has made a mistake and strayed into northern climes. His unusual beauty can be seen for only a short time in Chicagoland, as he moves on to his summer home in the upper tier of states and the Canadian provinces. This little warbler covers thousands of miles to spend a few short months in North America, as he winters from Colombia southward into Peru.

Don't Forget Our Oriole.

The Baltimore oriole is another bird which brings us a striking splash of color. With his reddish-orange and black plumage, the oriole appears out of place among our more soberly clad summer residents. We have seen and collected many species of orioles in South America, where there are many varieties, all vividly dressed in orange, yellow, and black, but none is more beautiful than our own Baltimore, which lets his mate build the pendant nest.

Audubon gave the name "ruff necked" to one of the western humming birds. But today this little fellow is known as the rufous humming bird. He will have none of Chicagoland, preferring California and the western slopes to the central states, where his place is taken by the ruby throated variety.

University of Chicago's varsity and freshmen football teams concluded spring practice yesterday afternoon with a scoreless tie in their exhibition game at the Midway. Four hundred saw the game, and the approximate receipts of $100 will be turned over to the American Olympic fund.

The varsity made six first downs and the freshmen two. Storey, the 190 pound freshman fullback, carried the brunt of the offense for his eleven, while his teammate, E. Smith, an end, averaged nearly 60 yards on his kicks.

Coach A. A. Stagg, Nels Norgren, and the assistant coaches expressed confidence that the Maroon eleven this fall would be superior to any team in recent years. Lineup:

IS BATTALINO ON SKIDS? FRIDAY BRINGS ANSWER

Petrolle Bout at Stadium Decides Bat's Future.

BY WILFRID SMITH.

This is a pertinent question, and if you are one of the thousands who have cheered for Bat as he blazed away at Kid Chocolate, Fidel La Barba, and Earl Mastro in defense of his featherweight title, you will seek information Friday night at the Chicago Stadium. Billy Petrolle, veteran of 112 fights, may give you the answer. Less than two months ago Petrolle mauled Battalino to helplessness, and if he does it again write it down that curly haired Bat has started a hike down the long path from which they never come back.

Champion as Amateur, Too.

Man and boy, this Battalino has been places since 1927. National amateur champion in that year, Christopher, then 19 years of age, joined the professionals. And it happened just as it does in books. Within three years the faltering old gent, Andre Routis, was lured to Hartford, Conn., and Battalino pounded him for ten rounds to win the world's featherweight title. Battalino stepped in and took the crown in the face of fighters whom the world called better.

But before Battalino quit his division because of a weight handicap, retiring undefeated you might say, although shorn of his honors twice by official edict, he had successfully defended his crown four times. He whipped Chocolate, La Barba, Mastro, not to mention Freddie Miller.

For the Mastro fight in Chicago last November Battalino weighed 125½ pounds. That night, when he led with his chin at Mastro and laughed off the punches, was his finale as champion. Perhaps he knew it. At any rate, shortly afterward Bat attempted to pass the title along to Lew Feldman by failing to make weight. Battalino weighed 135½ pounds on the official scales the afternoon of the championship bout. Accordingly the New York commission snatched the title toga, but Feldman didn't catch it as it fell.

N. B. A. Takes Away Title.

Into N. B. A. territory came Battalino and Freddie Miller, another earnest young man whom Bat previously had slapped down. The act was put on at Cincinnati. But this time the Cincinnati commission not only lifted the title officially for the National Boxing association, but ordered that the fight go on. Bat failed to live up to expectations and the bout was declared no contest and a fine of $5,000 levied against the misguided ex-champion.

Then Battalino started anew in the next higher weight class. He knocked out an unknown, Billy Shaw, and then slipped into New York, where the N. B. A. suspension didn't take, to outpoint Eddie Ran, a Polish welterweight from Latvia. And along came Petrolle. Billy stopped Battalino in 12 rounds, the only time Bat had been unable to finish any of his 53 professional fights.

Wins 14 Bouts by K. O.

Which brings us back to the question, "Is Battalino through?"

Of Battalino's 53 fights he has won 14 by knockouts, and 23 by decision. He has lost 12 by decision including one by foul, fought two draws, engaged in one declared no contest, and was technically knocked out in fight No. 53.

Opposing him Friday night is Petrolle, veteran of 112 fights in eight years. Petrolle has knocked out 43 opponents, won 14 bouts by decision, engaged in 34 no decision contests, fought nine draws and lost nine decisions. Petrolle has been knocked out twice and one match was declared no contest.

Folowing are the records of Battalino since he won the title in 1930 and of Petrolle since Jan. 1, 1930:

Soccer Teams to Watch Their Watches Today

BY OFFSIDE.

The semi-final Peel cup game between Sparta and the Swedes, played two weeks ago and won by the Swedes, will be replayed this afternoon at Sparta stadium, 21st street and Kostner avenue, with probably one of the largest crowds of the season and a dozen or more timekeepers in attendance.

Sparta, several days after it had been eliminated from further play for the trophy, discovered that one of the periods of the game was not played in regulation time. Officials appealed to the National association and after an investigation it was decided to have the game replayed.

Mrnka Is Suspended.

One of the players in the last contest, Mrnka, star full back of the Sparta squad, will be missing from the lineup today. Mrnka has been suspended and will be replaced by Rezek. Several other players who suffered minor injuries have recovered and will take their places in the Sparta lineup.

The Olympia players who for two weeks have been waiting for an opponent to face in the finals of the Peel cup competition, will not be on the sidelines. They will meet the Bricklayers in a National Professional league game at Kuppenheimer stadium, 19th street and Kilpatrick avenue.

Maccabees vs. Ravenswood.

The Maccabee All-Stars, winners of the Joseph Triner trophy last Sunday, with two new players in their lineup, will meet the Ravenswood squad of the International league in an exhibition game at Kuppenheimer stadium. Sun Flower and the Gary Germans of Gary, Ind., will clash in the only Major league game scheduled at Ogden park. Four games will be played in the first division of the International league, one in the second division, two in the third, and three in the fourth division.

The former won, with an 86 against Thursby's 90. Jackie Fields, world's welterweight boxing champion, who was a guest of P. S. Mann, shot a 92. EVERETT HOLDS 25 POUND EDGE IN KILBOURNE BOUT

Buck Everett, 1930 Golden Gloves light heavyweight champion, will have an edge of 25 pounds over Jack Kilbourne, South Chicago middleweight, when they meet in the ten round windup bout at White City tomorrow night. Everett weighed 185 pounds when he finished boxing yesterday at the Arcade gymnasium. Kilbourn scaled 160.

Everett has not boxed a middleweight since he whipped Tait Littman of Milwaukee at Janesville, Wis., a year ago. At that time Buck weighed about 175 pounds. He knocked Tait down three times in the sixth round of their ten round engagement. In his most recent appearances at White City Buck whipped Jack Roper and Al Friedman. He defeated Joe Doktor on the west side last summer.

Kilbourne Wins Four.

Kilbourne, claimant of the championship of Australia, has had five bouts in Chicago. He beat Roy Williams and Harry Fuller. Then he knocked out Haakon Hansen and Ray Tramblie. Dave Shade was awarded a decision over Kilbourne in his most recent encounter. Although Jack will be outweighed, he is as tall as Everett and has a long reach. Kilbourne claims to have defeated several prominent heavyweights in Australia.

Phil Ross, South Chicago middleweight, and Al Engel of Muskegon, Mich., have been matched for the eight round semi-final bout. Ross will be making his first start since he whipped Clyde Hull on the south side several months ago. Engel is a stablemate of King Levinsky.

Solly Dukelsky will seek his third victory in three professional encounters in a four round contest with Joe Barlow. Solly won from Jack Ripp and Hamburg Wiskany.

Pantaleo Meets Kearns.

Pete Pantaleo, Philadelphia junior lightweight, and Buddy Kearns of Chicago will clash in another four round match. Pantaleo will be fighting in Chicago for the first time. He is a cousin of Paul Pantaleo, Chicago heavyweight. He has won his twenty-one professional bouts. Other contests are: Bob Groshek vs. Fred Langford and Virgil Bemi vs. Johnny Reha.

3 NEW MATMEN WILL APPEAR ON FRONTON CARD

Three wrestlers who have never before appeared in the ring in Chicago will be on the program tomorrow night at Promoter Joe Coffey's wrestling show at the Rainbo Fronton, Clark street and Lawrence avenue. The newcomers are Steve Sznosny, New York Pole, who will clash with Rudy Dusek of Omaha in the main bout; Roland Kirschmeyer, former football star at Oklahoma A. & M. college, and Joe Cox of Cleveland.

Dusek is well known to Chicago mat fans and has long been a headliner on wrestling cards. He has vanquished nearly all of the first ranking grapplers in his Chicago bouts and last winter met Jim Londos, unsuccessfully, of course, in a match for that particular share of the world's heavyweight championship which Londos holds. Sznonsy has made a brilliant record in his matches in the east.

Kirschmeyer will meet Hans Bauer, Chicagoan. Kirschmeyer was a teammate of Earl McCready at Oklahoma A. & M., which has been noted for years for its wrestling teams which have won several intercollegiate championships.

Cox, the third of the newcomers, takes on George Tragos, veteran Greek, and Wee Willie Davis meets Hans Steinke, a German. The semifinal match is between Hans Kampfer, another unsuccessful aspirant for Londos' crown, and Gino Garibaldi of Italy. Both have wrestled many times in Chicago.

ANNOUNCING THE

SUPERCHARGED AIR-COOLED

Twelve Cylinder

FRANKLIN

For four years Franklin engineers have studied, experimented, tested, proved—and now present the Supercharged, Air-cooled, Twelve Cylinder Franklin. For the first time in a motor car, this new Air-cooled Twelve incorporates the one thing that has given aviation its greatest impetus—the high-powered, multi-cylinder, air-cooled engine.

To see the car is to feel instantly the freshness and brilliance that Le Baron has styled into the Franklin Twelve—the year's pattern of beauty and luxury. And when you drive this responsive, amply proportioned car of 144-inch wheelbase, that feeling is immediately transformed into thrilling admiration for the sensational performance which carries you to new luxury in travel.

The Supercharged 150 horsepower air-cooled engine is extremely simple in operation, requiring 100 less parts than comparable water-cooled engines. So accessible is the engine and so free of complication that low maintenance becomes an important feature. The Supercharger achieves flowing, turbine-like power, smoothness and acceleration by forcing a full charge of perfect mixture into every cylinder equally. Actual tests show gas consumption is appreciably lower. And engine life is much greater, for even at high touring speeds the engine is purring effortlessly. Pressure air-cooling adds greatly to the economical efficiency of the engine and allows you to drive all day at high speed without over-heating or loss of power. In Franklin there is no water to boil, freeze or leak.

You are invited to examine and drive the new Supercharged Twelve as an example of the really modern motor car. Franklin also offers the new Supercharged Airman, with 132-inch wheelbase and 100 H. P. airplane engine.

BY ELMER DUBB.

Well, I started my postgraduate work in golf at Glen Oak yesterday, and by the time Harry Cooper got through with me I had learned at least one thing, and that is you can't stay away from this game for a couple of weeks and come back to it expecting to set the world on fire.

I hadn't played since commencement, or the day Harry awarded me my diploma at the end of the regular course of instruction, and I went out yesterday with every intention of proving to him that I was a pretty good kind of pupil. I was certain that I hadn't forgotten any of the points he had tried to get across during the regular series of lessons, but I found out different when I attempted to show him what I had learned, and at the end of the day Harry pointed out that no matter how much you know about the game it won't do you any good unless you put it into practice often.

Tries Out the Irons.

When I arrived at Glen Oak yesterday Teacher Cooper didn't know where to begin this extra course, but he gave me a break by taking me over to the practice tee and letting me work with the irons, with which I had showed more aptitude in our first lesson than any others. If we had tried the woods yesterday I'm afraid it would have been just too bad, since I wasn't so hot with them originally, and it took me quite a while to get going once more with the irons as it was.

Harry went through the irons, from the No. 5 down to the No. 1, and as usual I found that the 3 and 4 were my favorites, at least from the practice tee. After about twenty minutes Harry broke down and admitted that my swing was better than at any time during the first series of lessons. He needn't have told me, because the ball was going right down the middle every time, but it was good to hear him say so anyway.

"Hey, Elmer, Watcher Head!"

During these practice socks with the irons, Harry kept pounding on the fundamentals, leading off with "Keep your head down!" That's the one that still has me pretty much stopped, but I'm catching onto it now, for I've learned that if you do keep the head anchored on the ball, it will go a lot straighter and farther than if you're too anxious about seeing where it's going.

While we were on the irons, Harry also stressed another point, that of the method of bringing the clubhead away from the ball on the backswing. I was taking it away too quickly and wasn't keeping it close enough to the ground, and the ball was going in every direction but down the center.

"Bring it back a little more slowly and keep it parallel with the ground until the left arm has about straightened out," Cooper advised. "In that way the clubhead will meet the ball squarely at the finish of the downswing."

I tried a few practice swings after this manner and then went to work on a ball. Harry was right again, and there was more satisfaction in the solid sound it produced when it struck the ball.

He Becomes a Trapshooter.

Harry decided that we'd had enough of the irons for the day, but I suggested that he hadn't given me much work on trap shots. He took me up on that one and we went over to the trap at the eighteenth green. He gave me a sand wedge, or dynamiter, and told me to try to put the ball on the green.

I must have looked pretty funny on that first one, for I didn't even get it out of the trap.

"First of all," Harry said, "you can't allow your club to touch the sand on the address or the backswing. It will cost you a penalty stroke in a regular game. Next, don't be afraid to hit the ball nor of taking up sand. Draw an imaginary line about an inch or two back of the ball and follow right through."

That Left Hand Again!

I tried to follow instructions, but still didn't get it out. The ball trickled only about a yard forward within the trap.

"You're forgetting that old one about letting the left hand lead," Cooper explained. "Just use the right as a guide as you did with the other clubs and don't stop the club as soon as it meets the ball. Let it go right through as it would in any other swing."

I finally achieved some success with this, getting most of the practice balls in the trap onto the green at least.

We called it a day there, but I'm going out a couple of times this week, so that I won't be rusty when my next lesson comes around next Saturday.

Who's Who in Women's Golf

By Betty Eckersall

JEAN ARMSTRONG.

If you want to improve your golf game take a trip to Europe. That's the advice of Jean Armstrong, Indian Hill Country club champion. Jean won the club title in 1928 and 1930, as well as in 1931, but she believes that this year will be her best in golf competition.

"I have just completed a seven months' tour of Europe, during which I played no golf," she said yesterday. "Now I find, upon returning to the game, that I have lost the slice which bothered me in competition last year. Another factor which I believe will be important in improving my game is the new ball. The ball holds a truer course in the wind than the old one and seems more accurate for putting."

JEAN ARMSTRONG.

Jean has been a competitor in western and Chicago woman's district golf tournaments for the last eight years. Last year she lost to Virginia Van Wie in the second round of the western tournament at Exmoor and was eliminated in the first round of the national meet at Buffalo by Glenna Collett Vare.

These defeats are two reasons for Jean's determination to perfect her game.

"I hope I am fortunate enough to meet Miss Van Wie and Mrs. Vare again," she said. "In the meantime I intend to get in a great deal of practice, for I have been invited to be a member of the team which will represent the United States in the international match at Winnipeg, Canada, June 22, 23, and 24."

Burgoo King Beats Tick On in Preakness

swain. That Tick On was not finished, but merely a little slow to respond to Robertson, was shown in the next second when he joined the pair in front.

The spectators, who jammed every available foot of space, rose as the three in front swung into the stretch. Once straightened away, it was whip and heel on all three.

Boatswain Swerves.

The run through the last three sixteenths will live long in the memory of every observer. Boatswain held to his slender advantage and raced straight down to the judges with never a swerve. Burgoo King forced and forced on the outside and Tick On lunged along the rail until both were at Boatswain's throat. Yet neither seemed able to push on.

At the sixteenth pole Boatswain faltered. The Man o' War colt fought it out desperately to the end, but that tiny shortening of stride had cost him the victory. Tick On and Burgoo King crossed the finish almost on a line, with James booting away, head down and heels flying. The judges saw Burgoo King first, and Tick On second, with Boatswain third.

LAPORTE NINE WINS.

La Porte, Ind., May 14.—[Special.]—La Porte High school's baseball team scored its second victory of the season over Valparaiso here today, 8 to 7.

throw, won this event with a toss of 137 feet. Kabat also won the shot put with a mark of 45 feet 6 inches. Ralph Lovshin, pole vaulter, and George Wright, conference two mile champion, did not compete for Wisconsin because of injuries and illness.

More noteworthy in the list of Wisconsin's victories was Novotny's javelin throw of 183 feet 4½ inches. Ted Shaw and Barton Smith of the Badger team, divided the high jump honors when they tied at 6 feet 1 inch.

Jontry Stars in Relay.

Jerome Jontry of Chicago won the quarter mile from Norman Heyne of Northwestern in 50 3-10 seconds. Jontry also was anchor man on the Chicago one mile relay team. Starting four yards back of the leader, he passed Heyne in the stretch to score Chicago's eighth first place. The time for the relay was 3 minutes 24 4-10 seconds. Summaries:

ILLINOIS WINS

Champaign, Ill., May 14.—[Special.]—Illinois defeated Indiana and Purdue in a triangular track meet today, scoring 76 points to 71 for Indiana and 26 for Purdue.

Huddie Hellmich, Illinois sophomore, won both dashes. Brocksmith, Indiana's star distance runner, won the mile in 4:16.4, the fastest mile ever run on the stadium track. In the two mile Brocksmith and his team mate, Watson, jogged in for a tie.

Capt. Frank Purma, in his last home appearance, set an Illinois record of 157 feet 9¾ inches in the discus.

NOTRE DAME BEATS PITT

Pittsburgh, Pa., May 14.—[U. P.]—Notre Dame defeated Pittsburgh in a dual track meet today, 73 to 53. Notre Dame won 10 first places to Pitt's four. No records were broken.

Joe Tormey of Pitt bettered Christman's mark of 159 feet 9 inches in the javelin throw, but stepped over the line and the event went to the Notre Dame athlete. Marshall Lewis of Pitt tripped over the final hurdle in the 120 yard high hurdles and lost to Poredon of Notre Dame.

Capt. Alex Wilson of Notre Dame won the 440 yard run in the fast time of 48.6 seconds.

OHIO BEATS MICHIGAN

Columbus, O., May 14.—[Special.]—Ohio State's track team defeated Michigan today, 74 1-3 to 60 2-3. It was the first time that the Buckeyes had beaten the Wolverines.

Three Ohio State records were broken, Smith tossing the javelin 186 feet 11½ inches, Russell of Michigan set a new mark of 48.7 on winning the 440, and Turner taking the 880 in 1:55.

Keller's performance in the 220 yard low hurdles likely will result in university officials making application for a new world's record, although it is not likely to be recognized because he had the wind at his back. His time of 22.9 seconds in the event marked the second time in history that the event has been run in less than 23 seconds. Rockaway of Ohio State was credited with a performance of 22.8 seconds at the national collegiate meet in 1929. Rockaway used starting blocks. The recognized world record is held by Charles Brookins of Iowa at 23 seconds. He did not use blocks.

Berry and Grube, Grid Teammates, Reunited on Sox

Philipsburg, N. J., May 14.—[Special.]—When Charley Berry of Philipsburg was recently traded to the Chicago White Sox by the Red Sox, it brought together for the first time in major league baseball two catchers who costarred during undergraduate days in college. The transfer brought together Charley and Frank Grube, White Sox catcher, a teammate of his on the baseball and football teams while the two were students at Lafayette college, which is located in Easton, Pa., just across the river from here.

FRANK GRUBE.

During his college days at Lafayette, Berry was an outstanding football player. He played as a regular end for four seasons and was chosen on Walter Camp's All American team in 1924. He captained the Lafayette eleven that season.

Berry was also a regular on the Lafayette nine for four seasons, holding down the catching assignment. He was graduated from Lafayette in June, 1925, and then he joined the Philadelphia Athletics, with whom he played until relegated to the minors. He played in the Pacific Coast league and Texas league before being purchased by Boston in 1928.

Grube entered Lafayette in 1923, Berry's junior year. During the 1924 season Grube, also an end, played at the opposite wing on the Lafayette eleven. His teammate at the other end was Berry, captain and star of the outfit.

CHARLES BERRY.

During the baseball season of 1925 Grube played third base regularly while Berry caught. Following Berry's departure that year, Grube was regularly Lafayette catcher in 1926 and 1927. He was one of the ends on Lafayette's undefeated and untied football team of 1926. After his graduation in June of 1927, Grube entered pro ball and worked his way up to the majors, his last stay before the White Sox being with Buffalo.

Berry, whose home is in Philipsburg, was outstanding during his high school days as an athlete, and one of his rivals was Grube, who lives in Easton. Berry and Grube have been teammates and rivals so many times that they don't know when to consider either a friend or foe.

Rubber Tired Coach Seen as Boon to R. R.

The automobile industry, after developing highway transportation until it has seriously hurt the railroad business, has turned some of its ingenuity and progressiveness to the improvement of the rail carriers. The main result to date is a railway coach with pneumatic rubber tires and powered by a Diesel engine capable of 100 miles an hour.

A demonstration car is touring the country, acquainting railroad executives with the advantages of a fast, light and quiet single unit carrier over the conventional trains with infrequent departures. The car is the product of Edward G. Budd, autobody and wheel manufacturer of Philadelphia, and J. Hauvette Micheline, French tire maker.

See Era of Rubber Wheels.

These designers believe the noise and shock of steel on steel will soon be a thing of the past and that all travelers and commuters of the future will ride in pneumatic tired coaches, gliding over America's network of rails rapidly, silently and comfortably.

The Reading company has placed an order for the first car, thus taking this newest thing on rails out of the laboratory and into the salesroom. Other roads are negotiating. A stream-line model is ready for exportation to France.

Mr. Budd is confident the new car will mean "the salvation and recapitalization of the branch lines and a new lease of life to what has always been and always will be the leading industry of the country—the railroads."

While a few rubber tired cars have been operating for about a year in France, it is a contribution of the Budd research department which has opened the way for expansion. This is "shot welding," which has made the highly efficient and noncorrosive stainless steel, a chrome and nickel alloy, available for heavy duty.

Electrically Welded.

The entire frame and body covering and even the truck frames of the new rail cars are fabricated of this material, 1-100th to 4-100ths of an inch in thickness and having a tensile strength of from 180,000 to 200,000 pounds per square inch.

The weld is made with a pair of copper pincers through which a low voltage, high amperage current is allowed to pass for only 1-200th to 1-500th part of a second—the time being automatically controlled. The welds are made in spots, an eighth of an inch in diameter, the two pieces of metal being firmly bound together by a series of spot welds, which give the appearance of shotgun marks on soft metal. The advantage of the method is in avoiding a weakening of the thin metal around the weld, a thing not possible by ordinary welding.

Two years of research have thus culminated in a method which reduces the weight of the new car to less than a sixth that of the standard railway coach.

Car Weighs Seven Tons.

The Budd-Micheline car of a capacity of 40 passengers and 1,500 pounds of hand baggage, weighs but 13,538 pounds empty, including its 85 horsepower Diesel engine, as against the 65 to 120 tons of the ordinary rail car. Its operating cost, including replacement of tires—which give 25,000 miles of wear—is figured at 12 cents a mile, from a third to a fourth that of running the conventional rail cars.

The tire, of extra heavy construction, has an air chamber, the cross section of which resembles a dumbbell, with a shank ⅝ of an inch thick. Thus, if the tire is suddenly deflated while running, the wheel sinks but ⅝ of an inch, the thick center part of the casing supporting the weight. While the present capacity of the tire is 1,800 pounds of car weight per wheel, Goodyear engineers in Akron are conducting researches by which they hope to attain 3,000 or 4,000 pounds to the wheel.

"A great deal has been said lately," said Mr. Budd, "about the buses and automobiles superseding the facilities of the railway. But if the railroads of the United States had no asset whatever except their rails and rights of way they would still have a paramount position in the work of transporting passengers and goods.

"Stainless steel, combined with new methods of fabrication, make a vehicle so light that it can safely be carried on pneumatic tires—a combination which holds out to the railroads a field of usefulness beyond anything that could have been dreamed of a few years ago."

"Such luxury in travel has not been arrived at before in any vehicle operated by a public utility," Mr. Budd asserted.

NEWS AND VIEWS

While the sale of automobiles is lagging far behind the 1931 records, a few manufacturers were able to issue optimistic reports last week. Chevrolet was continuing to lead in volume with Plymouth second, according to dispatches from Detroit. There was still a question of when Ford will start quantity production of his V-eight.

Hudson and Essex reported a sharp upturn in retail deliveries. Graham and Reo are bettering their records of last year. Rockne, a newcomer, has stepped up production 20 per cent. De Vaux, another new born, is confident of a 1,200 unit month.

For the first time in a decade stock car manufacturers will be represented officially in the entrants in the 500 mile Memorial day race at the Indianapolis speedway. Among the factory participants will be several Studebakers, a team of Hudson Specials, and a Hupmobile.

With the advent of spring weather several new convertible models made their first appearance last week. Nash introduced four custom type convertible sedans and four changeable roadsters. The eight cylinder Lincoln has four open and convertible bodies, a seven passenger sport touring, a roadster, a convertible roadster, and a sport phaeton with tonneau cowl. Rockne is offering a new convertible roadster.

Hudson and Essex are now offering selective automatic clutch control as optional equipment at slight additional charge. The new unit is combined with the standard equipment of selective free wheeling, synchromesh and silent second gear.

Here's good news for motorists: The 1932 edition of the famous Chicagoland map is now ready. Many new features have been added this year, among them a greatly enlarged inset of Chicago which shows the locations of all the World's Fair buildings, completed or under construction. This inset will be of particular value to motorists coming to Chicago. Get your Chicagoland map today. Copies are on sale at all Chicago Tribune Public Service Offices—1 South Dearborn street, Tribune Tower Lobby, and 1101 East 63rd street. Price: 25 cents, or 30 cents by mail.

VOICE OF THE TRAFFIC

TOUR ATTRACTIONS.

Chicago, May 8.—I had the pleasure along with my wife of taking the trip described by you in today's TRIBUNE one year ago Memorial day. Permit me to add something of interest to this trip.

Leaving Springfield, we followed Illinois 10 through Decatur to Champaign. At Decatur we found one of the few large lakes in central Illinois, the highway passing directly across the center. Farther on we passed the monument erected on the spot of a Lincoln-Douglas debate.

Of course at Urbana the University of Illinois needs no introduction. From here we followed U. S. 45 to route 4. Passing along this highway, Rantoul, the government flying field, Kankakee and the Palos hills are the chief attractions. This can all be had for an additional forty miles of travel and without once leaving the main highway.

UNLIGHTED POLICE CAR.

Chicago, May 3.—I was driving south on Racine avenue and when I came to Roosevelt road, I stopped for the signal lights. When it changed to green, I started to turn to the right when all of a sudden, a sedan, going west, at a high rate of speed and without lights, almost crashed into me. I threw my car into high and tried to catch the car to warn the driver about his lights. Imagine my embarrassment when I saw it was police squad car No. 115.

CHARLES SIMON.

COMPULSORY INSURANCE.

Chicago, May 6.—It is with great interest that I read in your paper of Tursday, May 5, on the front page, the story, "Auto owners' jury convicts traffic slayer."

I really believe that a paper such as yours could create enough publicity and could demand a law to be passed on compulsory insurance, that every automobile owner, on the purchase of a car, before he is allowed to drive it, must carry liability and property damage. I have discussed this problem on numerous occasions and have received very favorable comments. I think most of the accidents and in fact believe that 75 per cent of the accidents are caused by motorists that carry no liability or property damage.

I believe quite a good deal of publicity could be created by the continued educational feature created by compulsory insurance on the demand of the motorist purchasing liability and property damage. For instance, the first item could be written up on second hand dealers of automobiles who should not be allowed to sell a car to any purchaser or deliver the car to them, unless the insurance company has insured the car for liability and property damage.

I think the pedestrian is safer trying to get to his destination being surrounded by hoodlums who carry guns in their pockets, than being surrounded in his home and immediate vicinity by automobiles that ought to be in the junk heap, which carry no insurance of any kind and are the first ones to run away from an accident.

Secondly, no second hand automobile dealer should be allowed even to sell a car unless the car had a certified guarantee that the brakes are absolutely perfect. What are the brakes of an automobile—the most important part—the heart of the machine. Without brakes it is an impossibility to run the machine in safety. Safety first means, see that your brakes are right and then you can start and stop at the proper time.

In reference to automobiles, I am very happy to state that in 1901 and 1902 when the single cylinder and two cylinder cars were first on our highways here in Chicago, I had the pleasure in riding in them and also working on them, and I have on numerous occasions tried to advocate that somebody of authority and prominence would get up a law on this compulsory insurance of liability and property damage.

D. M. RAPPORT.

A NEW RACKET.

Chicago, April 22.—Who invented this latest racket, "No Parking—City Council," that is being imposed upon the residents of the near north side? In the past month all parking has been prohibited on Delaware street between Seneca place and Fairbanks court. Any time of the day or night one may find at least one police officer stationed on this street, not to protect property or preserve law and order, but to issue court summonses to residents of the several apartment hotels located on the street. Now, the writer finds that he, too, must dispose of his automobile, park it about two blocks from his residence, or employ the services of a garage every time he steps inside his home, for Chestnut street and Seneca place have also become a part of the no parking zone.

"Cockeyed" Mulligan and his tribe were unable to force the council to pass a no parking ordinance in the interests of the garages, but evidently have been successful in putting one over on the people living north of Chicago avenue and east of Michigan avenue. If some action isn't taken befor this racket gets a firm hold, there is no telling how far it may be extended.

BEG YOUR PARDON.

Prophetstown, Ill., May 8. — Gents: Why in hell don't you instruct your reporters to tell the truth? Hal Foust says Len Small put Illinois route "24" on the map for political purposes. Hal better read up on Illinois instead rotten ideas about politics. Frank Lowden, governor of Illinois, put "24" on the map and built most of it before he went out of office. Illinois people are about "fed up" on your misstatements about the Hon. Len Small, the next governor of the great state of Illinois.

1930 LICENSE.

Chicago, May 12.—Believe it or not, but it is true. I met a car bearing the good old black and white license plates of 1930. I had to look twice to make sure I was right. That fellow drove his T model flivver along Elston avenue as though there were no cops in Chicago. Maybe he had his ticket already but doesn't it take lots of nerve to use a 1930 license in almost the middle of 1932? The license number was 1-187-948.

HISTORIC SCENES MAKE THIS TRIP A SUNDAY TREAT

BY HAL FOUST.

The modern automobile, with its fast, safe and reliable performance, has brought the historic and scenic valleys of the Rock and Mississippi rivers within an easy day's drive of Chicago.

This year, the trip has special significance since it was just a century ago that the defeat of Black Hawk ended the last Indian war in Illinois. And at this time of the year, the scenery is especially attractive as the woods, meadows and farms are adorned with the fresh leaves and blossoms of a new growing season.

THE TRIBUNE road car made a westward swing last week, visiting main points of interest along a 368 mile course in eleven hours, never reaching a speed inconsistent with the condition of traffic and the pavement. The time is mentioned not as an example of fast driving but as an example of the ground that can be covered easily by a modern automobile in good condition.

Starts on Roosevelt Road.

Roosevelt road was taken to the Fox river valley in preference to North avenue, because North avenue is closed in Elmhurst for the construction of a grade separation at the intersection with the Lake street highway. Roosevelt was reached from THE TRIBUNE Tower via Washington boulevard and Harlem avenue.

The only appreciable hazard on the trip was in the first fifteen miles, to reach open country driving conditions west of Mannheim road. Riding westward with traffic at thirty-five miles an hour on Washington boulevard, heavy trucks occasionally slide from side streets, making the boulevard drivers burn rubber to avoid a collision.

Incidentally, a pretty Sunday usually finds a jam of automobiles at Mannheim and Roosevelt but the state has made little progress toward building a grade separation there, although such a structure is under construction at Glen Ellyn at the intersection with a new road, where cross-traffic will be comparatively light for many years.

Roosevelt road offers a four lane pavement through rolling farm country to Wheaton, again for a short distance west of the Du Page county seat and again on approaching Geneva. It is one of the routes widened following years of editorial campaigning by THE TRIBUNE against narrow highways, but the job has not been completed.

Cross River at Dixon.

Roosevelt road was followed on westward from Geneva, carrying the Ill. 6 and the U. S. 30 markers. Cattle, sheep and hogs were fattening near well painted barns.

The Rock river was crossed at Dixon, 104 miles from Chicago. It was there a hundred years ago that volunteers and regular troops were assembled to fight Chief Black Hawk and his Sauk followers. On the muster rolls of the log block house were the names of Col. Zachary Taylor, Private Abraham Lincoln, Lieut. Jefferson Davis, Albert Sidney Johnston, and Winfield Scott.

Sixteen miles north of Dixon is the White Pines park, a thousand acres of heavy woods, with cedars and white pines prodominating. THE TRIBUNE car turned southwest down the Rock river valley to leave U. S. 30 just west of Sterling, continuing near the river bank on Ill. 86 and Ill. 3 to the tri-cities of Moline, Rock Island and Davenport.

Modern Auto Proves Worth.

The concrete was rough in places and some of the turns were sharp but the rigid frame and adjusting shock absorbers of the modern automobile permitted rapid driving without risk. There's a reserve of power in engine and brakes of these new cars that also contributes materially to safety.

At Rock Island, where the Rock river joins the Mississippi, there's a replica of Fort Armstrong. The original fort was built in 1817 in an unsuccessful attempt to intimidate Black Hawk. On the island is the government's $400,000,000 arsenal, with a museum of weapons used in former wars and with factories and store houses where preparations are made for future emergencies.

Leaving Davenport on U. S. 55, formerly Ia. 99, a pavement swung below the bluffs of the river bank through Clinton, Ia., to cross the Mississippi again into Fulton, Ill.

And Back to Dixon.

East from Fulton, Ill., 6 markers were followed again, over rolling hills of woods and farmers, through Sterling and back to Dixon. From Dixon, THE TRIBUNE car went up the Rock river this time, winding through the tree and shrub covered bluffs on the west bank of the stream, through Oregon to Byron. Just north of Oregon, the heroic statue of Black Hawk by Lorado Taft gazed toward the setting sun from a hilltop on the east bank.

The Rock river was crossed at Byron and Ill. 72 followed eastward to its intersection with Ill. 5 and U. S. 20, the Lake street highway, for the return trip to Chicago through Elgin. Ill. 72 is a new road, affording fast travel, but with several bad gaps in the pavement for proposed grade separations with railroads, where care must be exercised.

ECONOMY CRY TO STRIKE EARS OF BIG PARTIES

City to Echo to Tax Protests.

BY PHILIP HAMPSON.

News dispatches and reports from all over the country indicate that the American taxpayers have turned. No longer are they passive in the face of demands by public servants for huge sums of cash to meet extravagant governmental expenditures and to pay the salaries of armies of bureaucrats.

Instead, taxpayers in cities and towns in every state are forming associations to demand reductions in governmental operating costs and lower taxes. Their demands apply to federal, state, county and municipal governments alike. The movement has reached the proportions of a veritable tax revolt.

Members of congress are being swamped with demands from their constituents to put measures of economy into effect immediately. And on the eve of the Republican and Democratic national conventions the eyes of the nation will be centered on Chicago which will be the scene of a national demonstration designed to impress the delegates with the thought that the taxpayers, with their millions of votes, mean business in their demands.

Will Remind Delegates.

About 1,100 organizations, including chambers of commerce, farm associations, business organizations and others, have been invited by George W. Rossetter, president of the Chicago Association of Commerce, to participate in the meeting which will be held June 2 and 3 at the La Salle hotel. Already several hundred have signified their intention of participating.

"The great army of prominent business leaders who will meet in Chicago with the hope that their massed declaration of continued increases in governmental cost may make some impression on Washington before congress convenes and before the Democratic and Republican platform builders meet here at their two presidential conventions, is truly representative of every class of American taxpayer," Mr. Rossetter said.

"Representatives have been pledged from Los Angeles, Scranton, Detroit, Mich.; Cairo, Ga.; Hattiesburg, Miss.; Meridian, Miss.; Lima, O.; Lincoln, Neb.; Salisbury, N. C.; Rapid City, S. D.; Kellogg, Idaho, and hundreds of other communities. In addition, we have received communications commending the National Tax conference movement from an equal number of cities whose business men because of economic conditions may be forced to forego actual representation here, but will act by proxy. Some of these cities are Laredo, Tex.; Tucson, Ariz.; Brookline, Mass.; Delta, Colo.; Cohoes, N. Y.; Bayonne, N. J.; Bremerton, Wash.; Tuscaloosa, Ala., and Rutland, Vt.

Corporations Join Warning.

"The attitude of our leading corporations to tax conditions is reflected in the action of Sears Roebuck & Co., which has just laid the mounting tax problem on the desks of more than 60,000 of its stockholders. The Crane company has issued similar warnings to thousands of employés, dealers and stockholders. John B. Berryman, president of the Crane company, in widely distributed protest, stated, 'It is estimated that last year 22 cents out of each income dollar went for taxes of one kind or another, and with the reduced earning power of the people at this time, it is probable that 35 to 40 cents out of each dollar will go the same way.

"'According to the estimate of the secretary of the treasury, the expenditures of the major departments and commissions of the national government will, for the fiscal year ending June 30, 1932, exceed by $1,231,100,000 those of 1927, when industrial activity was nearly at its peak and when prices of substantially all commodities and services were considerably above those of today. This is an increase of 63 per cent.

Huge Additional Taxes.

"'To finance these ever-increasing disbursements, congress is now planning huge additional taxes to be paid for out of the already shrunken income of prostrate industry and individuals.

"'We believe that the time has come when every corporation and every citizen must come out in the open and exert his utmost influence for a sweeping and continuing reduction in the expenses of government.'"

Those who are preparing the speakers' program for the national tax conference report that agriculture's voice against bureaucracy and tax increases will be raised by Thomas R. Cain of Jacksonville, Ill., president of the National Farm Grain Dealers' association. Others who have agreed to participate in the program include Silas H. Strawn, president of the Chamber of Commerce of the United States; D. F. Kelly, Fred W. Sargent, and Bernard W. Snow.

Factory Owners Join Fight.

Another aggressive foe of high taxes is the Midwest Manufacturers' association. Its president, Samuel M. Hastings, yesterday sent messages to the nine member state organizations urging them to call individual meetings of protest against high governmental expenditures. He stated that federal, state and local expenses now take more than 30 per cent of the national income as compared with 6.4 per cent in 1913. He added that one-seventh of the adult population and one-fifth of all persons profitably employed in the country are now wholly or partially supported by taxation.

"It is suggested," Mr. Hastings said in his message, "that you enlist especially the coöperation of trade associations in your state, for they are particularly distressed by the business de-

Huff's Travels in Wonderland of Farm Board

BY SCRUTATOR.

What is a "coöperative?"

The job of distinguishing between "coöperative" and "corporation" might be left to some youngster working for a doctor's degree in etymology were it not for the tempest stirred up by the Rev. Mr. Clarence Elmer Huff, president of the Farmers' National Grain corporation, farm board coöperative.

Mr. Huff has asked the secretary of agriculture to close the Chicago Board of Trade because the latter's clearing house refused to admit Mr. Huff's corporation to membership.

Mr. Huff says his organization is a coöperative and that the grain futures act admits coöperatives to the privilege of membership in contract markets.

For Responsibility Fixing.

The Board of Trade's clearing house says the Farmers' National is a corporation and as such it is automatically barred from membership by an old rule of the clearing house which excludes corporations because, in the event of failure, stockholders of corporations cannot be held fully liable as are the members of a simple partnership.

Why the Farmers' National should object to being called a corporation is a mystery. It calls itself a corporation. That word is part of its title.

Its general offices are in Chicago, but it is incorporated in Delaware and is listed in the Illinois secretary of state's records as a "foreign corporation."

It is capitalized for $20,000,000 and has stock outstanding on which it seeks to show earnings. It pays stock dividends.

It has a board of directors and the ordinary complement of officers elected through the machinery of stockholder balloting but, in reality, chosen by its bankers.

Controlled by Farm Board.

It is controlled by its bankers—the farm board. Its actions are subject to the approval of the farm board as long as the corporation owes the farm board money. The latest available report, in February, revealed that the corporation still had $16,000,000 of farm board money.

Its officers are simultaneously officers of another concern, the Grain Stabilization corporation, which has made futile but costly attempts to manipulate grain prices.

It uses some of the losses of the affiliated unit, Grain Stabilization corporation, to show a bookkeeping profit for itself and appease its stockholders. The Grain Stabilization corporation, siphoning money from the farm board's revolving fund, takes the losses and the Farmers' National takes the profits by chiseling commissions out of the stabilization corporation's losing transactions.

It seeks a monopoly.

It has the limited liability features of a corporation.

And it pays salaries as high as $50,000 a year.

These are the principal structural characteristics of the Farmers' National Grain corporation, the organization which says it's a coöperative, but calls itself a corporation.

So It Asks for More.

While this coöperative is trying to convince the public that tweedledee is tweedledum the farm board, having gone through most of the original $500,000,000, asks $100,000,000 more; the federal deficit approaches the three billion mark and the prices of wheat and cotton scrape the bottom.

The Farmers' National wants to close the Board of Trade and the interstate commerce commission wants to regulate the trucks and boats. This recalls the story told by A. B. Gilfillan, in his book "Sheep," of the newly employed sheepherder, who returned to the ranch house the second day to see the boss.

"Do you still want me to work for you?" he asked.

"Certainly," said his employer.

"Then you'd better give me a new herd of sheep," said the novice. "I lost those you gave me yesterday."

SELLING ERODES STOCK VALUES ON BOARD HERE

The short week-end trading session on the Chicago exchange yesterday saw a still further erosion of stock values. Under moderate selling stocks gave up from a fraction to a point or more with only a few isolated shares moving against the trend.

Comparative steadiness in the Swift issues was one of the noteworthy features of the day. The trading in these issues was the smallest since the heavy selling wave broke over the market ten days ago. The stubborn resistance these two stocks have shown under pressure is attributed by brokers to support given by the companies themselves.

Commonwealth Edison again lost ground yesterday, falling back to 63½ as Peoples Gas held fairly steady in New York around 60. Low priced stocks generally showed only small losses, but because of the low ebb of values the minor declines were sufficient to establish many record low quotations.

BANK OF ENGLAND BUYS GOLD WORTH OVER $10,000,000

LONDON, May 14.—The Bank of England sprung a big Whitsuntide surprise today with the announcement of its purchase of 2,012,665 pounds sterling—$10,063,325 at par—in gold bars from a source undisclosed.

The transaction was by far the largest since the gold standard was suspended and the market was completely at a loss to account for the deal. The last month's operations by the bank have been insignificant, the last big transaction being the sale of nearly $75,000,000 of bar gold in October in connection with the repayments of the Franco-American credits.

One suggestion was that the new purchase is connected with the exchange stabilization fund but no confirmation was forthcoming and the city is completely puzzled.

Peru Quits Gold Standard.

LIMA, Peru, May 14.—(AP)—Peru today abandoned the gold standard for what was described as a temporary period. For months Peru has made an effort to maintain the sol at its par value of 28 cents in United States gold, and less than three weeks ago drastic decrees were put into effect in an effort to stabilize the currency.

Service on Peru's foreign debts was suspended a year ago and the moratorium was extended for another six months on Jan. 24 of this year.

More Gold Goes Abroad.

New York, May 14.—(AP)—The outward flow of gold continued today with moderately large shipments to Switzerland and Holland reported. The former took $6,000,000 and Holland's takings amounted to $3,714,600. The net loss in the country's monetary stock of gold was less by $999,300 than the sum of exports, due to a decrease of that amount in earmark account.

Whitsuntide holidays abroad made foreign exchange fluctuations unimportant today. Leading European rates were steady to firm in very quiet dealings. Sterling fluctuated narrowly, cables closing up ⅛ at $3.65⅝. French francs were off a shade at the finish. Belgian, German, Dutch and Swiss currencies were unchanged. Scandinavians firmed, along with Canadian dollars and Japanese yen.

DIVIDEND TREND STILL ADVERSE, SURVEY SHOWS

New York, May 14.—(AP)—Unfavorable dividend changes last week numbered 47 contrasting with 45 in the previous week, according to a compilation by the Standard Statistics. There were six favorable changes as compared with nine in the week before.

Several important corporations will hold dividend meetings next week and Wall street is prepared for at least a few unfavorable announcements. Particular interest centers in the meeting of American Telephone and Telegraph directors, although the consensus in the financial district is that the regular quarterly disbursement of $2.25 will be ordered. This view is supported by indications that earnings, although under dividend requirements, are running at about the rate of the first quarter when they amounted to $2.07 a share.

Bank Failures Dwindle, Journal Survey Discloses

New York, May 14.—(AP)—There were twelve bank suspensions during the last week, compared with fourteen in the previous week, according to the "American Banker." Seven banks reopened during this period. Total suspensions for the year to date number 635, affecting deposit liabilities of approximately 280 million dollars, it is stated.

New York Banks Show Increase in Deposits

New York, May 14.—(AP)—The weekly statement of the New York clearing houses shows: Total net demand deposits [average] $5,874,000 [increase]; time deposits [average], $2,382,000 [increase]; clearings week ending today, $2,864,712,308; clearings week ending May 7, $3,868,426,108.

EXCHANGE ASKS THE HABITAT OF SHORT SELLERS

New York, May 14.—(AP)—The New York Stock exchange has again requested its members to submit information showing the geographical distribution of short sellers.

In an order to members today the exchange requested information as of the close of business May 16 showing the total number of short accounts in each state of the United States and in each foreign country. The reports are to be made not later than May 23.

No information was forthcoming from exchange officials as to the purpose of this information. This is the second such request in recent weeks and is in addition to the regular reports on the volume of short selling.

Brokerage quarters have been inclined to surmise that the exchange wished the information in connection with the senatorial investigation of exchange practices.

SOUTH SHORE RD. OMITS DIVIDEND ON PREFERRED

Directors of the Chicago, South Shore and South Bend railroad have voted to suspend payment of the dividend on the class A $6.50 cumulative preferred, the road announced yesterday. The dividend would have been due June 1.

Earnings of the railroad have been affected by the business and industrial depression to such an extent that it was thought best to conserve the company's resources, William A. Sauer, vice president, declared.

"Both passenger and freight business have fallen off materially as a direct result of the curtailment of industrial activity in the cities served by the railroad in northern Indiana," he added. "We have effected drastic economies in operation, including a reduction in the wages of employés, but have been unable to keep up with the loss of business."

FOREIGN ORDERS OF AM. RADIATOR HOLD UP WELL

New York, May 14.—(AP)—The European business of the American Radiator and Standard Sanitary company continues to hold up well in comparison with the company's domestic business, C. M. Woolley, president, said today in a letter to stockholders. The company is getting a moderate profit from its foreign business, which has declined by a much smaller percentage than that of the company's domestic subsidiaries.

The letter said that while residential construction in terms of floor space for the first four months of the current year has declined by 85 per cent as compared with the same period of 1931, there continues every indication that with improved economic conditions, the demand for new buildings, especially residential, will shortly assert itself.

April Business Defaults Fewer Than in March

New York, May 14.—(AP)—Business failures in April numbered 2,548 against 2,593 in March and 2,152 in April, 1931, according to Bradstreets. While the April total was smaller than a month ago the aggregate liabilities were somewhat larger, amounting to $124,364,000 as against $113,080,000. The April, 1931, liabilities amounted to $161,821,000.

Yield on New York Bank Stocks Near 10 Per Cent

New York, May 14.—(AP)—The decline in New York bank stocks during the last week raised the average dividend yield of sixteen representative issues to 9.91 per cent, a record level, so far as the statistics of recent years are concerned. The highest average yield reported last year was 9.84 per cent on Dec. 17.

GREAT NORTHERN RY. HEAD SEES IMPROVED BUSINESS THIS YEAR

New York, May 14.—(AP)—Improved crop conditions and the possibility of regulating motor truck traffic are seen by the Great Northern Railway company as indicating somewhat better business conditions for this carrier in 1932. In the road's annual pamphlet report for 1931, issued today, President W. P. Kenney points out that the declining revenues suffered by the road in 1931 were due in part to drought and adverse weather conditions that prevailed in the Northwest territory.

"So far as spring indications are of value," Mr. Kenney says, "it is pleasing to note that this section was favored with much moisture during the winter and has had bounteous rains during the spring months. There is every indication at this time that 1932 will be a good crop year for the territory traversed by the Great Northern. The Wenatchee valley is now promising the largest fruit crop in its history."

The company's net income for last year totaled $5,325,906, equivalent to $2.14 a share on the capital stock outstanding, compared with $18,036,748, or $7.25 in 1930. The road's operating revenues aggregated $77,087,454, a decrease of $27,908,621 from the previous year. Net operating revenue amounted to $12,669,420 compared with $21,912,508.

The company's total current assets on Dec. 31 last, were $66,761,170, including $31,163,667 cash. Current liabilities amounted to $28,350,680.

SABATH URGES FEDERAL LAW TO FIX PRICES

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

Washington, D. C., May 14.—Price fixing by the federal government as a way out of the depression was proposed to the house of representatives today in a resolution introduced by Representative Adolph J. Sabath [Dem., Ill.].

Under Mr. Sabath's proposal the speaker of the house would be authorized to appoint a committee of nine members, "two uncontrolled economists, two industrialists, two agriculturists, two representatives of organized labor, and one representative of the consumer class," to investigate the "feasibility and practicability of fixing the prices of outstanding commodities."

The committee would be instructed to report its findings, together with recommendations as to the prices to be set on each commodity, to the house for action.

In a statement issued in connection with his resolution, Mr. Sabath declared that none of the steps so far taken in an effort to relieve current distress have proved satisfactory in their results.

"Therefore," he said, "I have introduced this resolution asking that prices be fixed on the outstanding commodities to start the wheels of commerce going."

CHEAP MONEY HELPS BRITISH BOND ISSUES

Nation Borrows Now at Low Rates.

BY SIDNEY CAVE.

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

LONDON, May 14.—The cheap money boom is definitely on. Stimulated by this factor, British government securities are increasingly dominant in the markets, British government credit is standing on a basis of 4 per cent. Many leading economists optimistically forecast an improvement to a 3½ per cent basis in the near future with the belief that the monetary position will remain favorable for some time to come.

The flood of cheap money is producing striking results in the financial district of London. On Friday the treasury was able to borrow for less than 1 per cent, the actual rate being 19 shillings 6 pence per cent, the lowest rate at which the government has sold its weekly batch of bills. Only $150,000,000 of bills were allotted against offerings for $175,000,000.

Easy to Sell Britain's Bonds.

The search for securities giving adequate yields is turning large blocks of capital into the market for British government securities. A huge business is now taking place. Competent authorities conservatively estimate that for the week the daily average turnover of British government securities was between 150 and 200 million dollars. One firm alone traces deals averaging $125,000,000 daily.

The British treasury is taking every advantage of the cheap money. Last month approximately $575,000,000 of 4½ per cent treasury bonds were repaid in cash or by exchange for longer dated securities.

Notice has since been given that the outstanding amount of approximately $325,000,000 of 4 per cent treasury bonds will be repaid Aug. 15 next. The government is not obligated to redeem those bonds until April, 1933. With the object of further reducing the floating debt and providing requisite funds for the repayment of the later 4 per cent bonds, the government successfully launched last week a new issue of 3 per cent treasury bonds on a yield basis of less than 3½ per cent—the lowest rate of interest the British government has issued on a loan since the war.

These operations considerably enhance the prospects of an early scheme for the conversion of the 5 per cent war loan of 10 billion dollars.

Other Markets Affected.

The present strength of the gilt-edged market suggests that when the conversion schemes are launched reinvestment opportunities may be less favorable than at present. At the moment investors do not know what else to buy outside the British government securities—on "safety first" lines, although there are signs that overflow investment may be directed definitely into a wider field where higher yields are available, such as home corporation stocks and established equities.

Some Experts Urge Caution.

With the current unusual boom conditions in gilt edged issues, some experts are beginning to urge caution regarding the early outlook, suggesting that any unfavorable development will start a wave of profit taking, pointing out that several potentially disturbing political developments are drawing near, such as the Lausanne conference and the German situation.

They argue also that the government's financial retrenchment policy will safeguard the budgetary position, but under existing conditions may only react adversely on trade whose activity is ultimately the basis of government credit.

WEEK'S PARIS EVENTS

BY EDMOND TAYLOR.

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

PARIS, May 14.—The bourse was preoccupied with local influences almost exclusively throughout the week. The left victory in the elections was particularly unexpected and the gains of the Socialists who will be the second largest group in the new chamber of deputies unquestionably agitated the market at the beginning of the week. French government bonds sold heavily and even French industrial securities declined while international securities and gold mines were much sought.

The election of Albert Lebrun as president—an event seen as presaging "a concentration government" based on the most moderate groups of the old and new majorities—favorably impressed the bourse.

There was no sharp recovery, however, foreign issues merely succumbing to the weakness earlier manifested in native securities. Throughout the latter part of the week activity was close to absolute zero and the Paris bourse unquestionably showed itself the weakest of all the world markets.

London Buying Francs.

On the exchange side large purchases of francs by London for the exchange equalization fund were noted. The purpose of this operation was to prevent uneasiness over the left elections leading to a rise of sterling. Sterling remained buoyant despite these precautions, rising sharply Monday on the strength of President Paul Doumer's assassination. The dollar likewise was stronger.

Agitation for revalorization of silver continues to leave the French cold although the government is holder of important stocks of this metal which are now being minted for subsidiary coinage.

How Kreuger Ran Billion Dollar Group

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

New York, May 14.—The first formal meeting of the American bondholders who put $100,000,000 into Ivar Kreuger's International Match corporation was held today under the direction of Oscar W. Ehrhorn, federal referee in bankruptcy.

The Irving Trust company, as receiver, found that the total indebtedness of International Match was $105,000,000, consisting mainly of the bond issues. The bank also reported, that through a "series of fictitious transactions," Kreuger had transferred $90,000,000 from the International Match corporation to other units in his $1,000,000,000 structure of companies throughout the world. The bank says he "dominated" that industrial and financial structure.

Big Job for Receiver.

The reconstruction of these transactions and the recovery of this capital is one of the chief problems confronting the receiver.

The receiver also said, "The question will arise as to the liability of directors," and proceeded to describe the situation ready uncovered by the examination of those directors, who have testified.

"The bankrupt had from its inception both a board of directors and an executive committee," the Irving Trust reported. "The meetings of the board of directors were infrequent. The executive committee, consisting of Mr. Krueger and two of his associates, sat in Stockholm and from there directed the affairs of the bankrupt. Extremely broad powers were conferred upon the executive committee as well as on Mr. Krueger personally, both by the corporate by-laws and by specific corporate resolutions. Examination of the officers and directors of the bankrupt has not yet been completed as to the extent of their participation and supervision of corporate activities."

Trustees' Election Delayed.

The bondholders also were to consider the election of a trustee in bankruptcy to take over the receiver's work. But upon motion of Samuel Untermeyer, senior counsel for the independent bondholders, that election was postponed until June 1. The referee assented to the postponement on the ground that it was apparent that only about one-third of the bondholders among an estimated total of 38,000 had been notified and had time to deposit their bonds or proofs of claim with one of the committees.

Mr. Untermeyer indicated he would urge the election not only of a bank, such as the Irving Trust company, which was proposed, but also as co-trustee, some outstanding individual of international prestige, to deal more effectively with the recovery of assets and capital scattered through so many countries.

KREUGER ASSETS SMALL

STOCKHOLM, May 14.—Following the suspension soon of the Kreuger moratorium, a petition in bankruptcy for the Ivar Kreuger estate will be filed showing liabilities of between $100,000,000 and $200,000,000 and assets of about $1,000,000.

In this connection extensive claims, it is declared, will be made against Torsten Kreuger, the late Ivar Kreuger's brother, with whom he conducted extensive business transactions in the year preceding his death. It is alleged that Torsten received about $3,000,000 from his brother during the six months prior to the suicide.

Torsten denies the allegations, declaring that during the last ten years he had no debts due Ivar or his concern. On the contrary he insisted that he has extensive claims on his brother personally.

An organization has been formed by Swedish banks to protect blocks of shares given as security by Kreuger and his associates for gigantic loans, now frozen. These shares will be suspended in the stock exchange to prevent manipulation.

Drug, Inc., Seeks to Placate Owl Preferred Holders

Hinman, supported by the Owl Drug Company Preferred Stockholders' association, Drug, Inc. has made an offer of one share of its stock for each two and one-half shares of Owl Drug preferred, it was announced yesterday. The offer has been made through United Drug company and the Owl Drug preferred Stockholders' association.

Business Done by Checks Declines in Middle West

Debits to individual deposit account reported to the Chicago Federal Reserve bank for the week ended May 11, 1932, by 162 banks in 36 leading clearing house cities in the 7th federal reserve district aggregated $726,766,000, a decrease of 20.7 per cent compared with a week ago ($916,253,000). Compared with the corresponding week of last year ($1,071,630,000) a decrease of 32.2 per cent was shown.

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

New York, May 14.—Wall street's world looked as topsy turvy as ever today. A mite more so, maybe. Disgusted speculators were hawking more or less gilt edged shares of big industrial, utility and railroad corporations at newly marked down "bargain" prices and buyers were just as scarce and stiff necked as ever.

Between its enemies and indifferent friends, the market agonized somewhat. A whole pack of leading issues including American Telephone, Consolidated Gas, Woolworth, Union Pacific, Atchison, and American Tobacco B went to new lows. The day's losses averaged from a fraction to a point or so.

Business Slow During Day.

Business was slow throughout the two hour session. The turnover was not very much in excess of a half million shares. Selling was rather persistent in some directions during the first hour, but toward the last prices stiffened and here and there fractional parts of early declines were made up. At no time, however, was there any sign of revival of interest on the buying side.

Outside of the overnight announcement of the disappointing report of the Standard Oil Company of New Jersey showing only 34 cents a share earned last year, the news bag afforded scant pickings with a bearing on the market. The so-called "Washington situation" weighed as heavily as ever on the spirits of traders, but the early advices from the capital brought little additional information to either lighten or add to the uncertainties.

The New Jersey Standard's statement brought considerable selling, not only into that issue but into other issues of the group.

Standard of New Jersey Hit.

It was only a few days ago that Standard of New Jersey was strutting as a market leader on the upside. Today's upset cost it an even dollar a share and served to point it definitely toward lower levels with its fellows. Houston was about as weak and other shares of the department trailed after them.

Railroad shares continued in the forefront of the decline with New Haven, Illinois Central, and others sinking to lower levels—in addition to those already named.

A noteworthy feature of the early trading was the sharp break in Woolworth. The issue started at 30, off ⅝ and then dropped to 28 in the first half hour, a dip of more than 2½ points. It rallied fractionally toward the close, however. Selling was said to be liquidation.

Chicago bank stocks, with the exception of the First National, were traded at lower prices last week. First National earlier in the week was wanted at 154, improved to high of 159 and eased to 154 bid, 158 asked, unchanged at the close. Continental Illinois Bank and Trust on a light volume moved lower to a close of 83½ to 85; down 3 points for the week. Central Republic Bank and Trust was in demand at 59 with offerings at 61, unchanged for the week.

Northern Trust, after trading at 282 earlier in the week, eased to low and final quotations of 276 bid, 280 asked; down 4. Harris Trust and Savings at 238 bid, 245 asked, was unchanged. People's Trust and Savings continued easier with offerings in evidence at 50, but failing to attract buyers.

In the miscellaneous group final prices were mixed. Chicago Title and Trust was offered down to low and final quotations of 134 bid, 137 asked; off 6.

BOND MARKET'S RALLY FEEBLE AT WEEK'S END

Average for 60 Issues Hits New Low.

New York, May 14.—(AP)—Although the bond market attempted a feeble rally near the close of today's brief session ,the vitality was lacking and the average for 60 corporate loans again recorded a new low figure for the year. The United States government list, however, was comparatively steady after exhibiting early uncertainty. All of the Liberties closed fractionally higher, as did most of the treasuries.

Railroad bonds were still suffering from liquidation, although they were not quite as soft as recently. Losses of from 1 to 3 or more points were suffered by some liens of Atchison, Boston and Maine, Chesapeake Corporation, Burlington, St. Paul, Chicago and North Western, Rock Island, Great Northern, Illinois Central, New York Central, Northern Pacific, Pennsylvania, Southern, Union Pacific, and Wabash. Most of the Baltimore and Ohio and Missouri Pacific loans retained fair gains.

Other Issues Steady.

There were few important changes among the utilities and industrials. Columbia Gas loans were heavy, as were those of Western Union, Replogle Steel, National Radiator, Tobacco Products, and Postal Telegraph. National Dairy Products 5¼s lost 2 points and Paramount-Famous-Lasky and Paramount-Publix bonds were weak.

Foreign loans were mixed. The Australians were steady, as were the Colombians, British, and Italian. French 7½s eased and German government 5½s and 7s were off from ¾ to 1 point. The Austrians sagged on reports of a forthcoming moratorium.

The New York Curb market drifted to still lower levels today, but there was little urgent selling and price changes of the leaders were generally confined to fractions.

The utilities, as a whole, continued in the unpopular class. Electric Bond and Share held its loss to ⅜ of a point, although the 5 per cent preferred stock dropped 6½ on a single sale. Niagara Hudson Power and Cities Service held to their previous quotations. Commonwealth Edison was again somewhat heavy, showing a loss of 1½ points.

Oils Resist Selling.

The oils displayed considerable resistance, Standard of Indiana maintaining its yesterday's price. Gulf Oil was off ⅜; International Petroleum ⅛, and Standard of Kentucky, ¼. Holders of the oils were apparently hopeful of the meetings here of international petroleum leaders seeking to reach an agreement on world production and distribution.

There was considerable activity in Swift issues at one time. Swift & Co., however, finished with a net gain of ⅛ and Swift International lost only ⅛. Western Air Express lost 2 points and Woolworth Ltd. sagged ⅛.

LARGER SALES ARE REPORTED BY CHEVROLET

Detroit, Mich., May 14.—[U. P.]—President W. W. Knudsen of Chevrolet announced today that sales of dealers over the country for April were 85 per cent higher than March and 6,000 units more than factory output during that period. Total April sales were 61,309 units, compared with 33,125 in March. During the final 10 days dealers reported purchases of 24,176 units alone, Knudsen said. "The large increase indicates," Knudsen said, "that people able to afford a new car now are realizing that one of the biggest contributions they can make to national business recovery is to buy now."

FIGHTS PLAN OF COMMERCE BODY TO GAIN POWER

Beck Raps Bill Dealing with Rail Stocks.

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

Washington, D. C., May 14.—Ambition of the interstate commerce commission and of Commissioner Joseph B. Eastman for more power is back of the bill giving the commission authority to deal with ownership of railroad stocks in connection with consolidation of railroads, Representative Beck [Rep., Pa.], former solicitor general of the United States, charged before the house rules committee today. He opposed approval by that committee of a rule to bring the bill before the house.

Doubt as to the rules committee granting the request for a special rule was indicated when Representative Pou, [Dem., N. C.], chairman of the committee, said after an executive session that no action was taken on the request. Representative Rayburn [Dem., Tex.], chairman of the house committee on interstate and foreign commerce, however, still believed that provision would be made for consideration of the bill in the house at this session.

Commission's Power Increased.

The bill would increase the power of the commission in consolidation proceedings and place holdings of railroad stocks by holding companies and individuals under its jurisdiction, if the commission believed such holdings were contrary to the carrying out of the consolidation plan grouping the railroads into a limited number of systems; revise the rate making provisions of the transportation act, including repeal of the recapture of excess railroad earnings and revise the railroad valuation act to relieve the commission of the duty of keeping its valuations of the railroads current.

Representative Beck said the holding company provisions of the bill would empower the commission to decide who should own the railroads and questioned giving that power to the commission which he asserted was grabbing for more power. Passage of the bill, he declared, would bring government ownership of the railroads in everything but name.

Illinois Coal Rates Raised.

Increases in intrastate rates on bituminous coal from the Springfield, Fulton county and Peoria groups in Illinois, to Chicago, effective not later than July 10, were ordered today by the interstate commerce commission.

From each group the rates are to be increased 5 cents a ton of 2,000 pounds to bring them up to the level of the interstate rates. This action was taken in a supplemental proceeding to that in which the commission recently ordered a large block of Illinois coal rates raised 5 cents a ton.

From the Springfield group the rate is now $1.60 a ton; from the Fulton county group, $1.50 and from the Peoria group, $1.38. These rates will become $1.65, $1.55 and $1.43, respectively. To them, under the commission's order, may be added the increase of 6 cents a ton authorized in the 15 per cent case in which a special surcharge was permitted on account of the financial condition of the railroads, if similar additions are or have been made to the interstate rates from Indiana groups to Chicago.

The association has members in Illinois, Indiana, Kansas, Michigan, Missouri, Nebraska, Wisconsin, Iowa, Ohio and Oklahoma, representing a volume of production said to amount to more than 38 per cent of the manufactured output of the nation.,

Woman Gives Her Views.

In connection with the subject of tax protests, this department received an interesting letter from a woman reader, as follows:

"The idea occurred to me after reading THE TRIBUNE that many people would gladly write to their congressmen if they knew how and what. Particular emphasis was given to the idea when in response to a suggestion to a friend 'Let's do it now, and then pass along the idea to every one at the office tomorrow,' the reply was 'I don't know how or what to say, neither would they. You write the letter and I'll sign it.'

"It immediately occurred to me that 'THE TRIBUNE will do it' [so much better] that perhaps you might print a sort of coupon which readers could sign, cut out and mail. This, I understand, is not feasible; but could you not in some way suggest the how and what? Many would gladly avail themselves of the opportunity to express their revolt—on paper—it would be a healthy outlet for their pent up indignation."

Personal Letter Called Best.

Some of those interested in this national anti-high tax movement explained for the benefit of this reader that it has been found a simple, direct letter has a stronger affect on the recipient than a form letter. They advised a letter, not too long, expressing the views of the writer. Here is a letter given as an example:

"Dear Congressman So and So: We respectfully urge that you work for economy in government. Our incomes have been reduced but despite that taxes are being increased. The situation is fast reaching a point where it will be impossible for us to pay. We understand that there are many unnecessary departments and commissions. Abolish them now before they destroy the ability of the taxpayer to give anything."

Other model letters have been printed in this department. Here are some excerpts from a letter sent by the Ohio Chamber of Commerce to all members of congress last week:

"The Ohio Chamber of Commerce views with consternation the attitude of congress toward public expenditures at this grave crisis in the nation's history. Among our members are the largest employers of labor in Ohio—manufacturers, railroads, bankers, merchants, farmers, utilities, and professional men.

Idle Men Walk Streets.

"Idle men walk our streets. Unused cars rest upon the sidings. Incoming mails bring no orders. For a time there was evidence of returning confidence, but business is now paralyzed with fear.

"Ohio business has done its best to meet the situation. We have staggered employment. We have cut salaries and wages and passed dividends. We have introduced man-a-block campaigns for giving home work to the jobless. We have dug down in our pockets for community funds. We have privately helped our relatives and friends. We have paid extra taxes for local relief. We have drawn upon our dwindling reserves and exhausted our credit. We are reaching the end of the passage.

"In the meantime a balanced budget, which is the basis of the nation's credit, recedes from view like a mirage. Every one knows what the trouble is: Our servants have become our masters."

Cites Bureaucratic Growth.

The letter then quotes from the recent remarks of Congressman Lozier of Missouri, who declared America, in the last 100 years, has built up a bureaucratic system which has become so powerful that it now "arrogantly and contemptuously defies the government that created it." The congressman recalled a recent incident where government employés filled the spectators' gallery in the house and by their demonstrations dominated the action of the house. He likened this situation to that of ancient Rome when "office holders and the praetorian guard raised and deposed emperors at will, and put the royal purple and scepter on the block, and auctioned off the empire to the highest bidder."

Those activities cited are but a few of the indications of the energy with which the American taxpayer is turning toward redress.

GRAIN TRADERS VIEW FEDERAL AID AS BEARISH

Wheat Prices Fall Again in Chicago Pit.

BY CHARLES MICHAELS.

Uneasiness over the government's financial policy prevails in the grain trade following over two years of extremely unsatisfactory experience with federal efforts to help the farmer through the federal farm board. Grain traders are inclined to construe as bearish any measure designed to assist general business. Weakness in the stock market also was a factor in shaping sentiment yesterday which was decidedly pessimistic.

There was free selling of wheat futures early which pit observers felt might be for a leading local professional. It was sufficient to carry prices off 1⅛c from the finish of Friday and to a new low for the week with the close within a fraction of the bottom.

Net losses on wheat were ⅜@⅞c for the day with May closing at 53⅛c; old July, 55⅝c; old September, 57½@57⅝c, and December 60⅝c. The trade was without guidance from abroad at the opening as Liverpool and a majority of continental markets were closed for the Whitsuntide holidays and will not open until Tuesday morning. Winnipeg lost ⅝@¾c and closed with May 61⅝c in Canadian funds.

Crop News Not a Factor.

While there were numerous reports from at home and abroad of a character that might have induced considerable buying of wheat futures under normal conditions, the trade paid little attention to them yesterday. Spain was reported as trying to secure 26,000,000 bu wheat from Argentina in exchange for other commodities, but the deal was not expected to go through.

Cables to the department of agriculture indicated that seeding of spring wheat in Russia was now behind that of last year, which was extremely late. Hot winds have caused some damage in North Africa, although the new crop there is slightly larger than last year. China was said to need considerable foreign grain between now and the end of the current crop year.

Seeding is practically completed in Manitoba, according to the Winnipeg Free Press crop report, and has made excellent progress in the other two provinces. The forecast, however, suggested showers and cooler both sides of the international line over the week-end. Around 400,000 bu wheat was estimated to have been sold for export in all positions Saturday, including some hard winter. Buenos Aires was ½c lower for the day with July 49⅝c.

May Corn Firmer.

Buying of May corn credited to cash interests caused the nearby delivery to show independent strength and it finished ¼c higher at 29⅝c. Trade in the distant positions was relatively light with spreading and backspreading with wheat in evidence, and the close was ¼@½c lower. July finished at 32@32⅛c; September, 34⅝@34½c, and December, 34⅝c. No shipping sales of cash corn were reported by local handlers while the country sold only 5,000 bu to arrive. Owing to the excellent weather conditions planting has progressed rapidly in the past few days in the areas of largest production. Charters were made for 215,000 bu to Buffalo. Buenos Aires was off ⅛c for the day with July at 30⅝c.

Oats finished ⅝@½c lower due to scattered selling which found support lacking. May was 22¾c; July, 22¼c; September, 22⅛, and December, 23¾c at the last. Charters were made for 230,000 bu to Buffalo.

Traders paid little attention to reports of a moderate export business in rye and with wheat under pressure, rye futures declined and closed ⅝@1¼c lower with May leading. The latter was 36⅝c; July, 39¼c; September, 40½c, and December, 42⅞c at the last.

HIDE FUTURES

Prices on the New York Hide exchange declined almost steadily in moderate trading last week, and on Friday June sold at 4.05c per pound, thereby establishing a new low level for futures on the exchange. During the week ended May 13 the active positions registered declines of from 45 to 55 points, offsetting the gains of the previous two weeks. One of the outstanding features of the futures market last week was the extensive switching from June to the more distant months.

The weakness in hide futures prices was attributed largely to unsettled outside conditions. Spot hide prices showed little change, with trading in the domestic market practically at a standstill. In the Argentine market, however, fair size quantities of hides changed hands, showing further slight fractional declines to the lowest levels on record.

New low levels for futures on the exchange were again established Saturday, with net losses of 10@20 points. Sales aggregated 1,000,000 lbs. Closing bids, old contracts: June, 3.90c; September, 4.50c; December, 5.25c; March, 5.60c. New contracts: June, 3.95c; September, 4.50c; December, 5.25c; March, 5.60c.

SPAIN NEEDS WHEAT

Spain is reported as offering to barter for Argentine wheat in exchange for steel and iron manufactures. Spain needs 26,000,000 bu, but Argentina is indisposed to hasten into an exchange agreement with that country as cash sales are needed.

.CASH·GRAIN NEWS

A moderate foreign interest was shown in North American wheat, with sales of Manitobas, durums, and hard winter, but messages from the seaboard said it was doubtful if the aggregate business exceeded 400,000 bu. A little business was understood to have been put through in rye.

Chicago handlers sold 31,000 bu oats to the domestic trade, but there was little interest in wheat or corn, and only 5,000 bu corn were booked to arrive. Deliveries on May contracts aggregated 77,000 bu wheat, 114,000 bu corn, 62,000 bu oats, and 20,000 bu rye.

There was no change shown in the local cash wheat basis, with No. 2 red, yellow hard, and mixed quoted at 1¼@1½c over May, while No. 2 hard was 1½@2c over the future. Demand was slow.

Offerings of cash corn were the smallest in weeks, and with a fair demand the basis was steady to ½c higher. No. 2 mixed was ¼@½c under July and No. 2 yellow and white July price, while No. 3 mixed was ½@¾c under, and yellow and white ¼@½c under the future.

Demand for cash oats was not brisk and the basis was steady to ¼c lower. No. 2 white brought ⅝@1¼c over and No. 3 white ¾c under to ¼c over the May. No. 2 rye was nominally 1@2c over the future.

Official receipts of grain at Chicago Saturday: Wheat, 11 cars; corn, 32 cars; oats, 59 cars; rye, 1 car; barley, 4 cars.

CHINA'S WHEAT POSITION

"No purchases of foreign wheat were made by China in the last month on account of unfavorable exchange and the approaching new crop," says Agricultural Commissioner Dawson at Shanghai. "Wheat stocks in China are sufficient to keep mills operating until near the end of June. Flour stocks are accumulating."

Customer Lists.

The sales manager of a leading investment house tells us that the other day a man came in to sell him a list of investors. Glancing over the list the sales manager found names that were familiar to him. The longer he read the more familiar the names seemed. Checking up, he discovered that the list offered was a list of customers of his own firm.

The man who was offering this list had bought it from somebody else and hadn't been informed whose it was.

There are more customer lists being peddled around now than there have been for years. These lists make good ammunition for high pressure houses who pick them up for a song from discharged salesmen or clerks or salvage them out of the wreckage of investment houses and brokerage firms that go broke.

The customer list contains valuable information. It is more than a string of names chosen at random from the telephone directory. It often shows what securities each individual holds and how his investments have fared in the past.

This is just what the high pressure boys want. They know where to begin and what kind of talk will prove most effective. When they create their own lists by getting prospective victims to sign coupons on circulars their first step after getting an individual's name is to ask him to make out a list of his security holdings on the pretext that the house will "analyze" them. When they can buy a ready made list containing this information it saves them a lot of work and they can afford to pay well for it.

An empty stomach often weakens the scruples of unemployed ex-salesmen and many of them peddle the information that they have wherever it will bring the most money.

It is strange but nevertheless true that during the last few months many high pressure gyp houses have been making sales more readily than their more reputable contemporaries, and some of this business has been done with customers whose names were obtained from lists pilfered in one way or another from good houses.

The latter have made strenuous efforts to prevent the drain of confidential information about their customers, but the leaks cannot be effectively plugged up as long as employés are being dismissed.

The best protection for the customer is to warn him that he may be on one or more sucker lists that are being peddled about.

He should be particularly cautious about having dealings with salesmen who in some mysterious manner have acquired information about his investment holdings. He should, above all, make no commitments with a firm before he has investigated independently and found that the reputation of that firm merits his confidence.

ANOTHER LOW ON LARD

Renewed liquidation with poor support carried prices for lard down to new low levels. The close was at net losses of 10@15c, May reaching $3.70. Cash lard was $3.72½, loose $3.07½, and leaf $3.25. Dry salted ribs and clear bellies were $3.95, said to be the lowest since 1897. Weakness in grains and stock had a depressing influence. Hog prices were steady with good receipts expected the coming week. Liverpool lard was 3d to 1s lower. Export clearances from the seaboard were 325,360 lbs. Prices follow:

WORLD'S GRAIN MARKET NEWS

Indifference on the part of speculative leaders to enter the market to any extent is causing light general trade by all classes of operators, the narrowness of which is keeping price fluctuations from moving far in either direction. What the trade needs is some new stimulus, and it is the general belief that were the farm board to sell out its holdings the situation would be greatly clarified.

One of the closet analysts of market conditions says wheat appears to be a liquidating market with the financial surroundings the chief factors. "It is being cushioned on the way down by export buying and a fair amount of investment support," he says. "There is not enough leadership to bring about a bull market and southwestern damage reports have failed completely as a major factor and we look for an irregularly lower market."

Harvey Williams of Thomson & McKinnon says the world's wheat position is constantly strengthening. "Weather over most of the corn belt is favorable for planting operations which promise to be completed earlier than normal," he says.

"In 1929 the farm marketing act was passed by congress. Politicians said then that the wheat price was too low for the farmer and that he could not exist," says the Uhlmann Grain company. "This was based on the price prevailing toward the end of 1928 when futures in Chicago were selling around $1.20 bu. This meant about $1.00 to the Kansas farmer and based on the 1928 crop of 177,000,000 bu, the return to that state was about $175,000,000. The last government report estimated the Kansas crop this year at about 90,000,000 bu, and after three years of stabilization the price return was 40c to the farmer, which will bring him about $36,000,000, or about one-fifth of that of 1928."

Butter and egg futures declined on the Chicago Mercantile exchange yesterday, November butter losing ¼c and October eggs ⅜c. November butter moved up ⅛c at the opening, statistical reports early being bullish, but selling developed shortly and the market turned downward. The four markets reported an inward movement of stocks 45,000 lbs less than last year which did not improve support materially. Overnight egg storage news was somewhat bearish and the market opened ¼c lower, declining another ⅛c at the close when the four markets reported the inward movement of stocks to be 1,600 cases heavier than last year. BUILDING IN SUBURBS MAKES HEALTHY GAIN

Reaches Highest Point Since December.

BY AL CHASE.
[Real Estate Editor.]

WILLIAM BAUER.

For the first time since last December suburban building figures for April climbed up nearly to the three-quarters of a million bracket, registering a gain of 141 per cent over March. In other words, building permits in forty-eight suburbs, for the month of April, were $703,450, as compared with $291,611 in March, 1932, and $270,837 in January of this year, when a suburban low was established. This April total, therefore, is a most encouraging and significant sign in the local building situation.

In this connection it's interesting to look back a few months and see how unevenly the suburban building figures have run. In September, 1931 they totaled $1,123,000. In October they slid down to $939,000 and in November they dropped still farther, to $677,000. Then in December they took a jump upwards and hit the $1,117,000 mark.

That, unfortunately, was merely a leap that didn't land anywhere for on January of this year they crashed to a low of $270,000 and broke the hearts of all the forecasters who had based their predictions of building prosperity on the December gymnastics. In February, 1932, they climbed up a bit, to $397,000; in March slid back, but not quite to January's low, to $291,000. And now we have April's $703,450—which should bring a little cheer to our suburbs.

Not Encouraging.

Of course, a comparison with April of last year is not at all encouraging, but, it can't be overlooked. Last year April totaled $2,623,555, more than three times last month's figures In other words, April of this year shows a loss of 73 per cent over the same month last year. But even this isn't as bad as January of this year, for instance, when that month's $270,837 compared with $3,162,126 of the year before.

Following are the comparative figures in dollars for April, 1932 and April, 1931, also for March, 1932:

William Bauer, building commissioner of Maywood, makes the most optimistic of the suburban reports in the S. W. Straus & Co. suburban survey, turning in permits for April amounting to $143,572, a gain of 6,769 per cent over March. Of this amount $130,000 is represented by the new Maywood postoffice.

"For some months I've been negotiating with Chicago interests for the erection of a large industrial plant in Maywood," he said. "It will employ from 600 to 1,000 persons. I've also been working on several other projects for Maywood which will be announced later."

The figures of another suburban city are helped materially by the beginning of construction on a postoffice. Frank C. Norton, city clerk of Harvey, reports permits of $68,196, of which $63,000 is for the new postoffice.

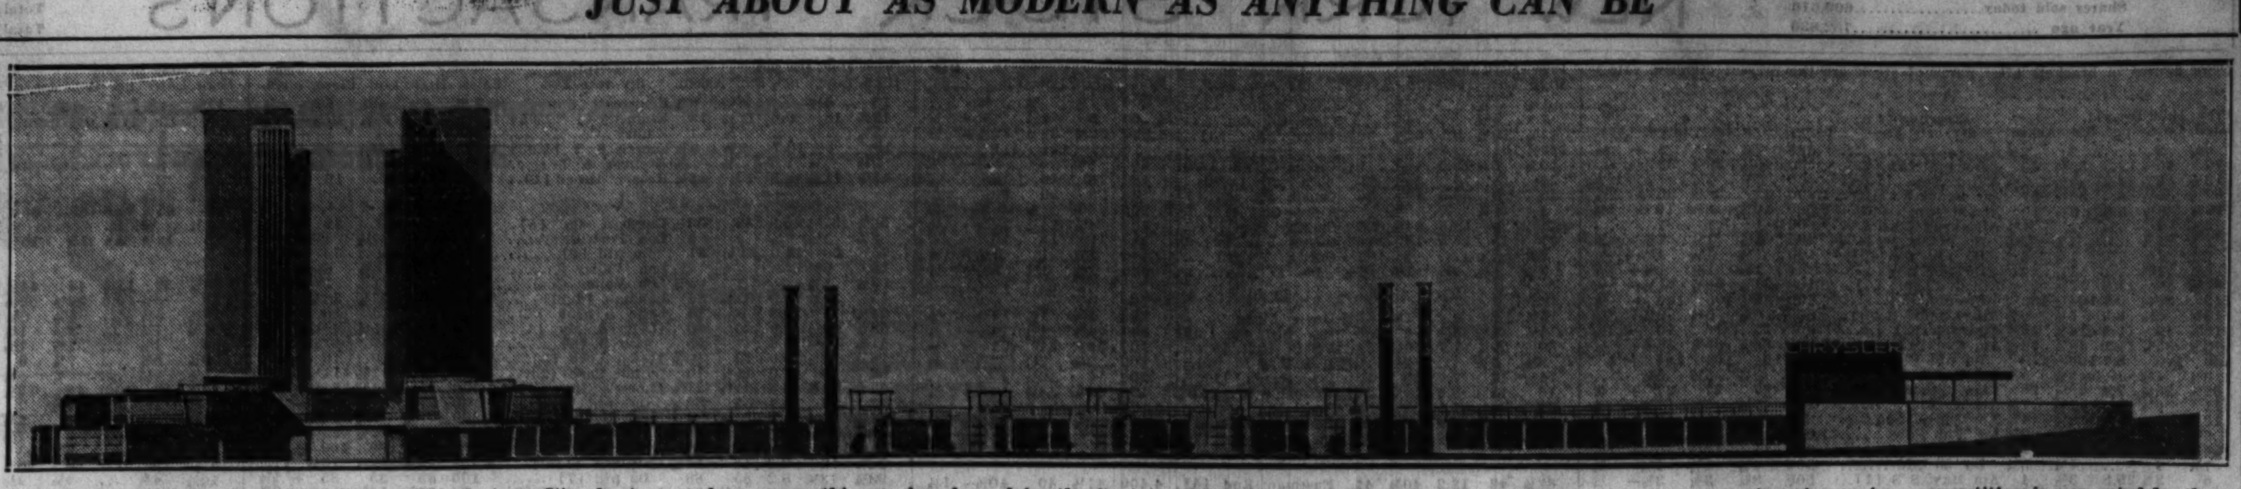
U. S. Not Only Factor.

However, Uncle Sam is not furnishing all of the new building in the suburban region, for F. J. Grommes, building inspector of Aurora, reports a total of $32,934, a 123 per cent increase; A. J. Nichol, building inspector of Elgin, $25,383, a 762 per cent gain; and Paul H. Rieger, superintendent of building construction of Elmhurst, submits a total of $31,800.

L. G. Dunham, building commissioner of Glen Ellyn, reports $23,690, a gain of 811 per cent; E. W. Hann, building recorder of Oak Park, $26,125, a 62 per cent gain; Fred H. Nemitz, building commissioner of Waukegan, $35,750, a 1,092 per cent increase; C. E. Hogeboom, building inspector of Wheaton, reports a total of $53,000 in new permits, a gain of 3,018 per cent over March; and Mr. Richard Davis, building commissioner of East Chicago, reports $34,535, a gain of 1,179 percent.

E. M. Goodman, building commissioner of Evanston, records a volume deserving of special comment, although this amount, $74,500, is not an increase over March. Mr. Goodman states that this substantial sum represents chiefly a heavy volume of repairs, averaging around $2,000 per job.

JUST ABOUT AS MODERN AS ANYTHING CAN BE



There's nothing old fashioned about this design. It's about as modern as anything so far planned for the Century of Progress exposition. Holabird & Root, architects, were prize winners in a competition inaugurated by the Chrysler corporation to secure the most attractive and appropriate design for their $150,000 exhibit building. Details are given in another column on this page.

Inquiries must be accompanied by stamped, self-addressed envelope for personal reply. Answers are based on information received from outside sources and, beyond care in securing it, The Tribune assumes no responsibility. Inquiries should be addressed to the Real Estate Bond Service, Chicago Tribune. Information should not be asked for more than one issue at a time. Give the name of the underwriter and the full title of the bond.

South Shore Apartments.

I am the holder of a $1,000 bond on the South Shore Apartment building, underwritten by Jacob Kulp & Co. These bonds have been in default for nearly two years. I have been advised by the Bondholders' Protective committee to deposit the bonds, but have not done so as I've been unable to ascertain the status of the men on the committee.—N. T. W.

The committee, which claims to be made up of bondholders who are serving without compensation, is made up of L. A. Rose, Charles B. Burkhardt, Louis Goldman, and J. Frank Higgins. We know nothing regarding these individual members. In a form letter dated April 12, 1932, the committee again urges the deposit of the bonds of the Crandon Shore Building corporation, owner of the South Shore apartments. It states that 90 per cent have deposited. The reorganization plans calls for the exchange of income bonds for the regular first mortgage bonds deposited. Foreclosure proceedings are to be instituted to secure title for the depositing bondholders, and in view of the close coöperation of the building owners, the committee states that it believes it will take only from six to eight months to complete the foreclosure.

Taxes for 1928, 1929, and 1930 are unpaid. The statement of receipts and disbursements for 1931 show rent as $24,447. Disbursements were $19,863, leaving a balance available for real estate taxes of $4,583. Edesse Marceau is secretary to the bondholders' committee.

Wolverine Hotel, Detroit.

Will you kindly give me any information you may have on the Wolverine hotel, Detroit? B. J. K.

C. J. Olsen, secretary of the bondholders' protective committee, states that the seventeen story hotel was purchased at foreclosure sale for $700,000 on May 29, 1931. The furniture also was bought at a chattel mortgage sale for $5,000 for the benefit of the depositing bondholders. The Michigan period of redemption, which is six months, expired on Nov. 29, 1931, and on that date the committee had a new management take possession of the property and states that it will be managed for the benefit of the depositing bondholders.

"We are in hopes that the business of the hotel may be increased and the property put in better condition in order that it will be possible to make a satisfactory showing in the event it is decided to borrow money on the property for the purpose of making a cash distribution to the depositing bondholders," writes Mr. Olsen.

"From the foregoing you can see that the interest which the depositing bondholders had in their bonds is now represented as an interest in this property. They eventually will receive everything that can be realized from the ownership of the Wolverine hotel."

The Wolverine hotel is at the northwest corner of Elizabeth and Witherell streets, in the hotel and business center of Detroit, and contains 450 guest rooms. The original first mortgage bond issue was $1,200,000, dated Jan. 1, 1920, and was underwritten by the Greenebaum Sons' Investment company. The first default on the present unsubordinated bond and coupons, except for one $1,000 bond and certain coupons which have never been presented for payment, occurred July 1, 1929. Bonds were called for deposit on Jan. 13, 1930. Foreclosure proceedings were instituted and the property was sold at master's sale on May 29, 1931.

A statement of income and expense from Nov. 29 to Dec. 31, 1931, received since Mr. Olsen's letter, gives income as $11,901 and operating expenses and other deductions as $5,172, leaving a net loss of $991. The occupancy for the period, on a room unit basis, was 15.06 per cent.

Eagle Terrace Apartments, Evanston.

Please give me any information you can about the Eagle Terrace bonds on the building at 550 Michigan avenue, Evanston, underwritten by the Greenebaum Sons Bank and Trust company.—J. B. E.

The Greenebaum Sons Investment company states that semi-annual interest and principal payments to April 1, 1932, inclusive, have been met. Monthly deposits to meet interest and principal as required by the trust deed are up to date.

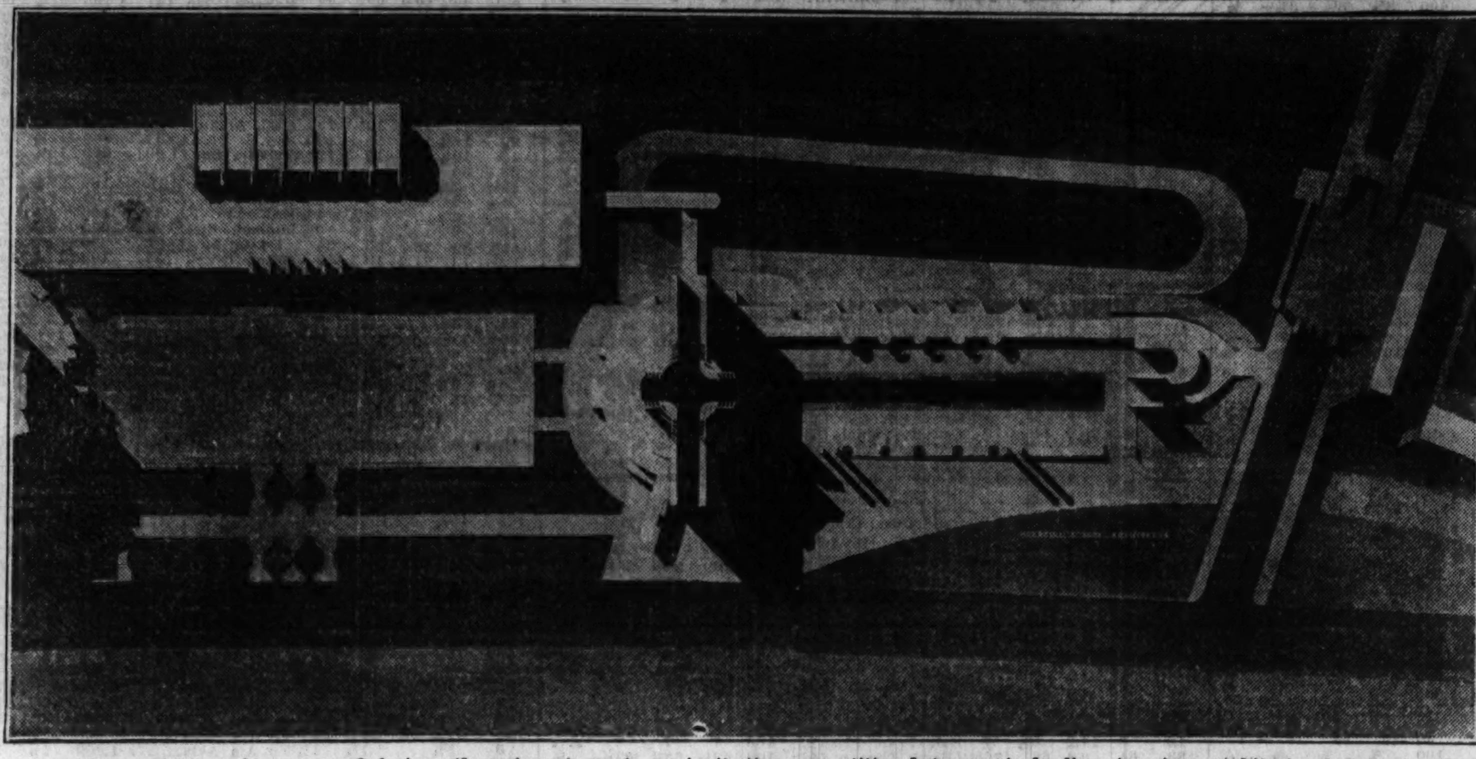
The original issue was $175,000. The loan was dated April 1, 1924, and matures semi-annually from Oct. 1, 1925, to April 1, 1934. It has now been reduced to $108,000.

The security for the loan is the land and building at 550 Michigan avenue, Evanston. The land, which is owned in fee, is 150x152, and is improved with a three story apartment building containing twenty-four suites: Six 6s, twelve 5s, and six 4s. The apartments are coöperatively owned. Title to the property is held by the Eagle Building corporation.

BROADWAY LEASE.

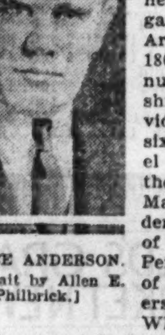
Sidney Math has leased the store at 4643-45 Broadway from the Bausenbach estate for a term of years and will operate a men's furnishings store. H. W. Croxton & Co., were brokers.

LOOKING DOWN ON THE CHRYSLER BUILDING



An unusual view of an unusual design—the prize winner in an invitation competition between six leading American architectural firms for the Chrysler building at the World's Fair. Holabird & Root of Chicago were winners. This is looking almost straight downward from an airplane on this extremely modern structure which will overlook Leif Ericson drive and the lake, at 31st street extended.

WILL AWARD $1,500 SCHOLARSHIP AT SKETCH CLUB MEET



PEIRCE ANDERSON.
[Portrait by Allen E. Philbrick.]

Announcement of the winner of the annual foreign travel scholarship of the Architectural Sketch club of Chicago will be made tomorrow evening, May 16, at the annual meeting and dinner of that organization at the Architects' club, 1801 Prairie avenue. The scholarship, which provides $1,200 for six months' travel in Europe, is the gift of Miss Mary Louise Anderson in memory of her brother, Peirce Anderson, of Graham, Anderson, Probst & White.

It is expected that about twenty drawings will be submitted in the competition for the design of a "Collaborative School of Fine Arts." Selection of the winner will be made by a jury of Chicago and New York architects, and the announcement of the award will be made by Alfred Shaw, acting for Miss Anderson.

Reports of the club's activities for the last year will be made by T. O. Menees, vice president; Benjamin L. Smith, secretary; William Thomsen, treasurer, and Thomas J. Mulig, Albert Eiseman, Albert Bohre, Robert F. Weber, Louis Pirola, and Harry I. Larson, directors. Francis Baldwin, president, will preside.

Officers of the Sketch club for the coming year will be elected at this meeting. The nominating committee has named the following ticket, the only one in the field: Louis Pirola, president; Benjamin L. Smith, vice president; Thomas J. Mulig, secretary; William Thomsen, treasurer; Robert F. Weber, T. O. Menees, Harry I. Larson, Francis Baldwin, Albert Bohre and Alexander Bacci, directors.

$7.50 WANT AD BRINGS $20,000 CASH FARM SALE

Richard C. Day, attorney, tells of a $20,000 cash sale which was brought about through a $7.20 TRIBUNE want ad. "I am pleased to announce the sale of the 200 acre Purvey farm, located four miles south of Crystal Lake, Ill., from a syndicate headed by I. B. Connor of 310 South Michigan avenue, to Louise E. Day of Crystal Lake," he writes.

"The sale price of this model dairy farm was $20,000 cash. It was sold through a TRIBUNE advertisement costing only $7.20. Twenty-seven answers were received from this ad, indicating a general trend toward farms."

Mayer, Meyer, Austrian & Platt were attorneys. The brokers were Charles Teekler of Crystal Lake and Richard C. Day.

HARRY S. CUTMORE.

Small home financing is the soundest factor in the Chicago mortgage field according to a survey just made by Harry S. Cutmore and associates based on several months of appraisals of 2,718 buildings, totaling more than $55,000,000 in value. Less than 2 per cent of the mortgages secured by 384 bungalows, and only 8 per cent of the mortgages on 410 residences exceed the present valuation of the property, it was found.

"Although it's a well known fact that drastic declines have occurred in real estate values," said Mr. Cutmore, "it's not generally recognized except in isolated instances that at present 75 per cent of first mortgages secured by apartment buildings with 12 suites and over exceed the appraised valuation of the property, and that 50 per cent of the stores and store buildings with flats or offices on the upper floors are encumbered with first mortgages in excess of the value of the real estate securing the loan.

Contrast Significant.

"In contrast, it's significant that less than 2 per cent of the mortgages secured by 384 bungalows and only 8 per cent of the mortgages on 410 residences are in excess of the present valuation of the property itself. This situation evidences the soundness of small home financing."

Further analysis of the 2,718 appraisals reveals that 96 per cent of the apartment buildings with twelve suites and over have mortgage loans in excess of 70 per cent of the appraised valuation of the properties. Seventy-two per cent of the flat buildings with less than twelve units have mortgages in excess of 70 per cent of the appraised valuation.

Eighty-two per cent of store buildings; 57 per cent of cottages, 53 per cent of bungalows and 45 per cent of residences have first mortgage loans in excess of 70 per cent of the appraised valuation of the properties.

Loans Exceed Valuation.

The existing first mortgage loans are in excess of the present appraised valuation of the properties in:

50% of store buildings.
21% of cottages.
20% of flat buildings with less than 12 units.
8% of residences.
2% of bungalows.

Mr. Cutmore's study is based on appraisals made on 2,178 structures of various types, as follows:

836	apartment buildings, with less than 12 suites, having a total valuation of	$12,473,000
278	apartment buildings, with 12 flats and over, having a total valuation of	18,539,000
666	store buildings and stores with flats or offices on upper floors, with a total valuation of	17,153,000
410	residences with a valuation of	4,268,000
384	bungalows with a valuation of	2,276,000
2,178	units	$55,186,000

"The result of this study has enabled us effectively to portray the present status of existing mortgage loans on typical properties," said Mr. Cutmore. "The appraisals were undertaken for banks, insurance companies, building and loan associations, educational and philanthropic institutions for the purpose of determining the value of the property supporting the loan. A very large portion of the appraisals were made for the closed banks in the Chicago area."

MAKE LEASES IN THE AMERICA FORE BUILDING

A quartet of leases is reported by Ross & Browne on the ground floor of the America Fore building, occupying the block bounded by Chestnut, Pearson, Rush, and Wabash. The Chicago factory sales unit of Servel and Electrolux refrigerators, the Towertown Book shop, the Hersey Manufacturing company, and Raoul Josset, French sculptor, are the lessees.

Howard L. Storch of Ross & Browne, who has been renting broker at the Palmolive building for three years, recently was appointed manager of the America Fore property. He reports a decided improvement in office leasing in the Upper Michigan avenue district.

The following new tenants have been installed in the America Fore building during March and April, taking a total of 9,045 square feet of space: Continental Cab company, John Ozmon, L. B. Lincoln, Interstate Partition company, the Medical Accessories company, Chicago and Suburban Disposal company, Alex Hornkohl company and Seth C. Hayes.

Although it has already been announced in another department, the publication of THE TRIBUNE's Chicagoland map always is a worth while announcement in this section, for a map as accurate as this one is invaluable to real estate owners and dealers as well as the general public.

This year there's been, of course, the usual careful bringing up to date of every detail of road and land, and in addition there are many new features. For instance, there's an insert in large scale giving a stretch of several miles of lake front, from 40th street to Diversey parkway, taking in the World's Fair site and showing buildings completed and planned, and also the loop district.

Another important addition is the alphabetical listing of 677 towns and cities in the metropolitan area, giving population and distance from the loop. As usual, the map may be had for 25 cents at THE TRIBUNE public service offices or for 30 cents by postage.

WILL STUDY HOW GARDENS MAY BE FLOOD LIGHTED

D. W. ATWATER.

Landscape architects in Chicago, together with illuminating engineers representing most of the large lighting companies in the United States, will study the use of artificial light in displaying garden beauty after nightfall at a meeting of the Chicago Lighting institute tomorrow night at the Civic Opera building. D. W. Atwater, engineer with the Westinghouse Lamp company, Bloomfield, N. J., will demonstrate methods of concealing flood lighting units so they are hidden from view in the daytime and thus do not mar the garden appearance. Methods have also been developed for directing light beams to obtain shadow effects of shrubbery or garden houses.

The night illumination for social events or for business men to prolong their enjoyment of the home yard is said to have developed from wartime practices in lighting government and munition plants as a safety feature. The same methods now are widely used for nighttime sporting events.

GIVE DETAILS OF CHRYSLER FAIR BUILDING

JOHN W. ROOT.

Details of the proposed Chrysler building at the Century of Progress exposition, to be erected from the prize winning design of Holabird & Root of Chicago, have now been made public. In an adjoining column of this page are shown sketches of this extremely modern structure, which won first place in a competition in which were entered several of the outstanding architects of the country.

Of the five other firms invited by Walter P. Chrysler to enter the contest for the best designed building to house his exhibits at the coming World's Fair, four have been winners of various honor awards. Paul Philippe Cret of Philadelphia, for instance, won the gold medal of the Architectural league of New York for his Pan-American building; Gmelin & Walker of New York, won the same medal for their A. T. & T. building, New York; Eliel Searinen was second prize winner in THE TRIBUNE Tower contest; Roger Bailey was winner in the war memorial contest in Chicago. Holabird & Root, of course, themselves have received honors for their Palmolive and other structures.

The jury of award consisted of three architects, Raymond Hood and Edgar I. Williams of New York, and Albert Kahn of Detroit, and four officers of the Chrysler corporation. This quartet comprised K. T. Keller, vice president and general manager; B. E. Hutchison, vice president and treasurer; J. E. Fields, president of the Chrysler Sales corporation, and F. M. Zeder, vice president in charge of engineering. Kenneth Franzheim, formerly of Chicago, was technical advisor to the group.

Quarter Mile Track.

The $150,000 Chrysler building will be directly north of the Travel and Transport building and will be connected with it on both the ground and second floors. Its north entrance will open on 31st street extended. It will have a quarter mile track on the west where visitors may test out the various models. Cars also will be mounted on rollers for stationary driving tryouts.

At one end of a long open gravel court will be what is known as a Belgian Roll where a car is subjected to all of the hardships it would undergo in actual use. The car is kept constantly in motion by mechanical means.

The main entrance will be flanked by centilevered show cases with transparent floors and glass walls so that the public may view the cars from all angles.

At the intersection of aisles which lead to the entrances will be Walter P. Chrysler hall, with a depressed pool, in which is a floating motor, symbolic of an advertised feature of the corporation.

Peeking Into the Future.

On the walls lining the pool the future of the concern's development will be suggested by an intricate electrical device employing colored lights and moving forms, the exact nature of which will not be revealed until the fair opens.

In a glass refrigerator at one end of the hall a car is enclosed where it will be subjected to tests against wind pressure and weather.

Four ramps will lead to the second floor of Chrysler hall where the space will be given over to engineering tests, advertising service and other displays. Sound motion pictures will show methods of car production.

In order to attract attention from all parts of the fair grounds the building has been made tall, reaching a height of 120 feet, while the walls themselves will be of a material that has a high degree of reflection to catch the sun during the day and artificial lights at night. Rising above the building will be four pillars of neon lights, in each of which will be displayed the name of one of the four cars made by the corporation.

IMITATE NATURE IN ROCKERY OR POOL STRUCTURE

Types of Rock and Plants Used Important.

ROCK GARDEN PLANS.

An illustrated booklet of 52 pages, describing each step in planning a rock garden, selection of materials and assembling them, as well as a list of recommended plants and their arrangement in the rookery, may be obtained for 25 cents at any Tribune public service office. Ask for "Landscape Designs for Your Garden." A copy will be mailed upon receipts of 32 cents in stamps by the Garden Editor, Chicago Tribune.

BY PAUL POTTER.

Given sufficient urge to delve into the written and verbal lore on what constitutes an outstanding rock garden, there is little cause for any one to mass a pile of rocks in one corner of the yard, put in a few annuals that have no place in such a setting, and look upon the handiwork as the rock garden Mother Nature would have built.

First of all, then, the rockery should reproduce as nearly as possible the effects of nature. There are five kinds of rock to be used in such formations: The glaciated bowlders, often broken up with years of exposure; the igneous rocks such as granites; the popular tufa or porous, light formations; the eroded sedimentary stones showing water action, and the sedimentary rocks such as sandstone and limestone.

The use of rich earth and peat between the layers of rock is necessary to successful plant growth. When the flat limestone or sandstone is used, an attempt to secure irregular, wavey lines and curves is desired.

Providing Stream of Water.

The judicious use of a little cement aids in directing any stream or trickling of water, frequently piped under the yard from the basement or garage. Care should be used to give the concrete an informal direction, instead of straight lines, and to blend some dry clay or matter into the concrete mixture to keep a natural coloring in harmony with the rock. The rocks should be tilted up at the outer edge to catch trickling water and keep the rockery moist.

Frequently the rockery is coupled with a lily pool, which may be constructed of concrete, or an old bathtub or similar vessel sunken to yard level. The use of rocks about the pool border forms a more natural unity between the rockery and pool. The rocks are sunk into the turf or cemented to the pool itself.

Several gardeners who report difficulty with cats or dogs about the pool, disturbing if not capturing the goldfish, have built smooth stone or tiled borders of an informal or formal design around the edge. Kept wet, these borders prove too slippery for the roving desperadoes.

Forming Background Foliage.

Backgrounds for such rockeries may be of several sorts. A row of lombardy poplars along the lot edge may in turn be the shelter for a grouping of pines. Some of the flowering shrubs which thrive in moist soil and whose foliage harmonizes with the color scheme of the rockery may be used.

A dwarf type willow or larch tree is not out of place in such a locality. No tree or shrub should be atop the rockery, however, as some amateur gardeners have attempted. Care must be exercised to keep the pool far enough from shade trees to avoid trouble from the spreading roots.

Unless the rockery plants have been potted, an early spring start is necessary to produce sufficient growth in the summer. The soil should be rich and contain leaf mold.

For such plants as the alpines, the plant pockets should be scooped out and refilled with a mixture of soil and lime or old mortar. All plants should be bedded firmly and mulched with stone chips to hold the summer moisture and prevent winter rotting.

Suitable Plants Suggested.

The choice of plants is quite free, provided only the types that belong in natural rock settings are used. The ferns native to this locality, the alpines, butterfly weed, nepeta, dianthus, several varieties of sedum, veronicas, tillium, lobelias, primulas, dwarf phlox, arabis, violas, and campanules are all satisfactory. Others might be named, but the cactus and such other dunes plants do not belong in the moist rockery.

In the pool, cat tails and other waterplants may be used for shade and height effects. The water narcissus and lilies, of course, are most suited to such location, care being used not to get too many plants in the new pool since they spread over a surprisingly large area.

Maintenance of the rockery and pool is not a tedious matter. In the spring it is well to apply a top dressing of part loam and part leaf mold in the areas washed during the winter. Weeding and some application of plant food may be necessary at intervals.

A well constructed rockery requires very little watering in summer, since the seepage from the artificial stream supplements the conserving of rains under the rocks, and the roots become well hidden in this soil.

MEN

PERMANENT, IMMEDIATE POSITIONS ARE AVAILABLE IN OUR CHICAGO DISTRICT OFFICES TO MEN WHO ARE QUALIFIED TO LEARN HOW TO SUCCESSFULLY REPRESENT THIS COMPANY.

An executive of our national organization will be here Monday to interview reputable, industrious men for permanent positions. Such men should apply in person at once.

If you are adaptable to this work, if you have the disposition to study and strive to acquire skill in what you do, and if you have a good reputation and the will to succeed, we will employ you, and back you in work that is paying qualified men $4,000.00, $5,000.00, $6,000.00, $8,000.00, $10,000.00 per year and higher, regularly, in our Chicago and northern Illinois offices, and throughout the entire country.

Men selected will have to take the time to learn and acquire skill and during this time will have to be satisfied to get along on nominal earnings of $125.00 to $200.00 per month, if necessary.

As soon as the right kind of experience is learned and conscientiously applied, earnings increase. For example, one man who used to be in business for himself came to us last summer and indicated he was qualified to try out for one of these positions. He was trained and started to work without investing one cent. His first three weeks he made $96.00 [average $32.00 per week], but the next six weeks he made $291.00, an average of $48.50 per week. During the year he gradually increased his earnings, and last month he earned over $615.00. His 1932 earnings should exceed $8,000.00.

E. A. Workman, who started with us March 5, averaged $37.00 per week his first three weeks and made $65.00 the next week. Last month he made $598.00, and he expects to beat that figure for May. A former auto salesman started the day after Christmas and has earned well over $2,500.00 with us so far—for his last week reported he made $138.00. No one would be safe to wager that his 1932 earnings will not pass the $10,000.00 mark.

These incomes are cash, and just as stable and permanent as any business or professional opportunities possibly could be. Such earnings represent success, and these new openings make similar success available to a few more men who can think and work successfully. Our expansion programme is dictated by the amazing success of the new Electrolux invention [not refrigeration].

Concerning this opportunity a former chauffeur stated at a recent sales meeting: "Electrolux paid for my car—Electrolux paid for furnishing my home—Electrolux will buy my wife a trip to Europe this summer. I'll buy a new car this month out of my earnings in this company and pay cash for it. It won't be any cheap car, either. I love this work." Last month he made over $700.00 [exclusive of additional compensation, prizes, etc.] When this man first joined this company he was doubtful as to the incomes in this business, but when he saw another man earn $232.00 for his week's work, he determined to study successful procedure in order to merit similar pay himself.

This man today is more successful than ever, as are innumerable others who have found their life's work with this company. Similarly, this company is now in its greatest success: 1932 will be our third successive record sales year.

If you feel you can qualify, and if you really would appreciate the opportunity this position offers, call for personal interview with

Apply at Parlor "F," Morrison Hotel, Monday morning, 9 to 12, also 1 to 3.

$25,000 LOSS

ON USED CARS TAKEN TODAY BY STUDEBAKER!

Here is a bona fide, legitimate offer by Studebaker Sales Co. Please do not confuse this with the usual "sales" now being run elsewhere, as this is the greatest real used car money saving event in Chicago's history.

Today—we have positively reduced every car in our big selection of 180 assorted makes and models exactly one-third to one-half each. This means an actual immediate loss of $25,000 to us, but we decided to take our loss to move our stock of cars AT THE PEAK OF THE SEASON.

Come prepared to buy, as we will not hold cars on small deposits. Our values absolutely cannot be duplicated elsewhere. Our $25,000 loss is your gain – so act quickly.

THE personal property which nearly every family owns and the signatures of husband and wife enable you to secure any amount up to $300 quickly and easily.

NO FEES. You get full amount of the loan and up to 25 months to repay. Interest at the Reduced Rate is charged only for the actual time you keep the money.

Estimated receipts at Chicago Monday: Cattle, 14,000; hogs, 33,000; sheep, 15,000.

The mild rally in hog prices which started in midweek was ended yesterday when not enough stock arrived to put the market to a test. The meager supply changed hands slowly on a "catch as catch can" trade. Most sales were considered steady because of the poor quality of offerings. Nothing worth within 20c of Friday's top quotation arrived Saturday.

The best hogs on the market were light butchers that sold at $3.50. However, the trade is carrying a nominal quotation of $3.70 for closely sorted lightweights. Several orders for the latter kind were here, but after scouring the yards without scraping up enough to fill a carload, eastern representatives returned orders unfilled. The general average was shoved back 5c to $3.35 on poorer quality.

Until midweek the hog market gave a very poor account of itself. Supplies were generous and prices melted rapidly away, going down 15@25c in two days. Strong local support then appeared and best grades recovered about half of the loss before quotations were jumbled up on Saturday's humdrum session. Plain kinds failed to respond to lighter receipts the last half of the week. Favorable corn planting weather sent farmers into the field late in the week and only meager receipts of hogs arrived. The total for the entire week, however, is comparatively large at 128,100, the second largest weekly supply since February. The week's average price at $3.35 was a new low.

Cattle prices declined in face of dwindling supplies. Total arrivals at 35,900 weekly were equal to the smallest weekly total since March 19, and smaller than in 1931 and 1930. However, an increase in the proportion of beef steers brought the tonnage up despite the decrease in numbers. Butcher stock and all other classes that run light in weight comprised a small share of offerings. The general average price of beef steers for the week dropped to $5.25, lowest since May, 1911. Although big inroads have been made on the beef supply in cold storage, wholesale prices have been moving to lower levels. Beef in storage on May 1 was 34 per cent below the five year average for that date, with 41,192,000 lbs., comparing with 46,246,000 lbs. on April 1, and with 53,150,000 lbs. a year ago.

Lamb Prices Slashed.

Lamb prices were cut down during the week. Competition from low priced pork and beef on the wholesale trade proved too much for the lamb market and before the end of the week live wool lambs had been reduced $1.00@1.25, while springers had followed with a 25@50c break. Closing prices were within 50@75c of the low point of the winter established in December, with best aged wool stock late at $6.10, comparing with $8.35 early in March. As the week ended prices were on a more attractive level. Wholesale prices also came down. Lamb carcasses are selling 1@2c per pound cheaper than a week ago and are 4@5c lower than a month ago. The condition of the trade curtailed the movement of supplies from the country after midweek. Total arrivals were among the smallest in nine months.

Receipts for Monday are estimated at 14,000 cattle, 33,000 hogs and 15,000 sheep against 14,789 cattle, 36,635 hogs and 21,369 sheep a week ago, and 21,010 cattle, 44,495 hogs and 16,336 sheep a year ago. Next week's receipts are estimated at 42,000 cattle, 120,000 hogs and 63,000 sheep, against 43,943 cattle, 113,282 hogs and 64,948 sheep a year ago, and 42,431 cattle, 134,499 hogs and 61,401 sheep two years ago.

UNCLE WILLIE, THERE'S A GUY HERE WHICH SEEN THAT "FOR SALE" SIGN ON YOUR TAXI-CAB AND HE SAYS HE MIGHT BUY IT.
TELL THE GENTLEMAN THAT I AM BUSY RIGHT NOW, KAYO BUT TO BE SEATED AND I WILL SEE HIM PRESENTLY.
WOULD YOU MIND SHOWING ME THE CAR, KID?—IT'S SORT OF STUFFY IN HERE.
SURE-THAT'S WHAT UNCLE WILLIE'S GOT IT FOR- HE SAYS HE DON'T MAKE NO MONEY WITH THE OLD BUS BUT IT GETS HIM OUT IN THE FRESH AIR A LOT.

LOOK AT THIS FAN! YOU CAN PUSH IT OFF WITH YOUR FINGER.
YEH-ME AUNT MAMIE OFTEN DOES THAT. SHE'S GOT A WAY OF ATTACHIN' IT TO HER SEWIN' MACHINE AND MAKIN' HERSELF A ELECTRIC FAN.
UNCLE WILLIE THOUGHT THE CAR WOULD RUN BETTER IF HE TOOK THE ENGINE OUT AND PUT THE SEWIN' MACHINE IN IT'S PLACE SO HE COULD RUN IT WITH HIS FEET AND SAVE GAS. BUT MAMIE WOULDN'T STAND FOR THAT.
THE INSIDE OUGHT TO BE IN PRETTY GOOD SHAPE. NOBODY'S BEEN IN IT FOR A LONG TIME. OH-OH!
I OUGHTA WARNED YOU ABOUT THAT. THEM TIRES IS ALWAYS BLOWIN' OUT.
WELL, I WILL SAY THAT I NEVER SAW A WORSE LOOKING SET OF TIRES.
AS A MATTER OF FACT YOU DON'T EVEN NEED TIRES ON THIS CAR.
_NO?
NO-BY THE TIME YOU GET IT STARTED IT'S GENERALLY TIME TO GO HOME SO YOU DON'T NEED 'EM.
OH!
NO DOUBT ABOUT IT, A NEAT AND NOBBY PERSONAL APPEARANCE IS A BIG ASSET IN CLOSING ANY BUSINESS DEAL----- I'LL GET $$75^{00}$ OR POSSIBLY $$100^{00}$ FOR THE CAB AND ANY GOOD WILL. THEN INVEST IT IN SOME GOOD BUSINESS THAT WILL RUN IT INTO A MILLION.
THE CUSTOMER? OH-HE LEFT. HE SAID HE WASN'T INTERESTED IN BUYIN' IT.

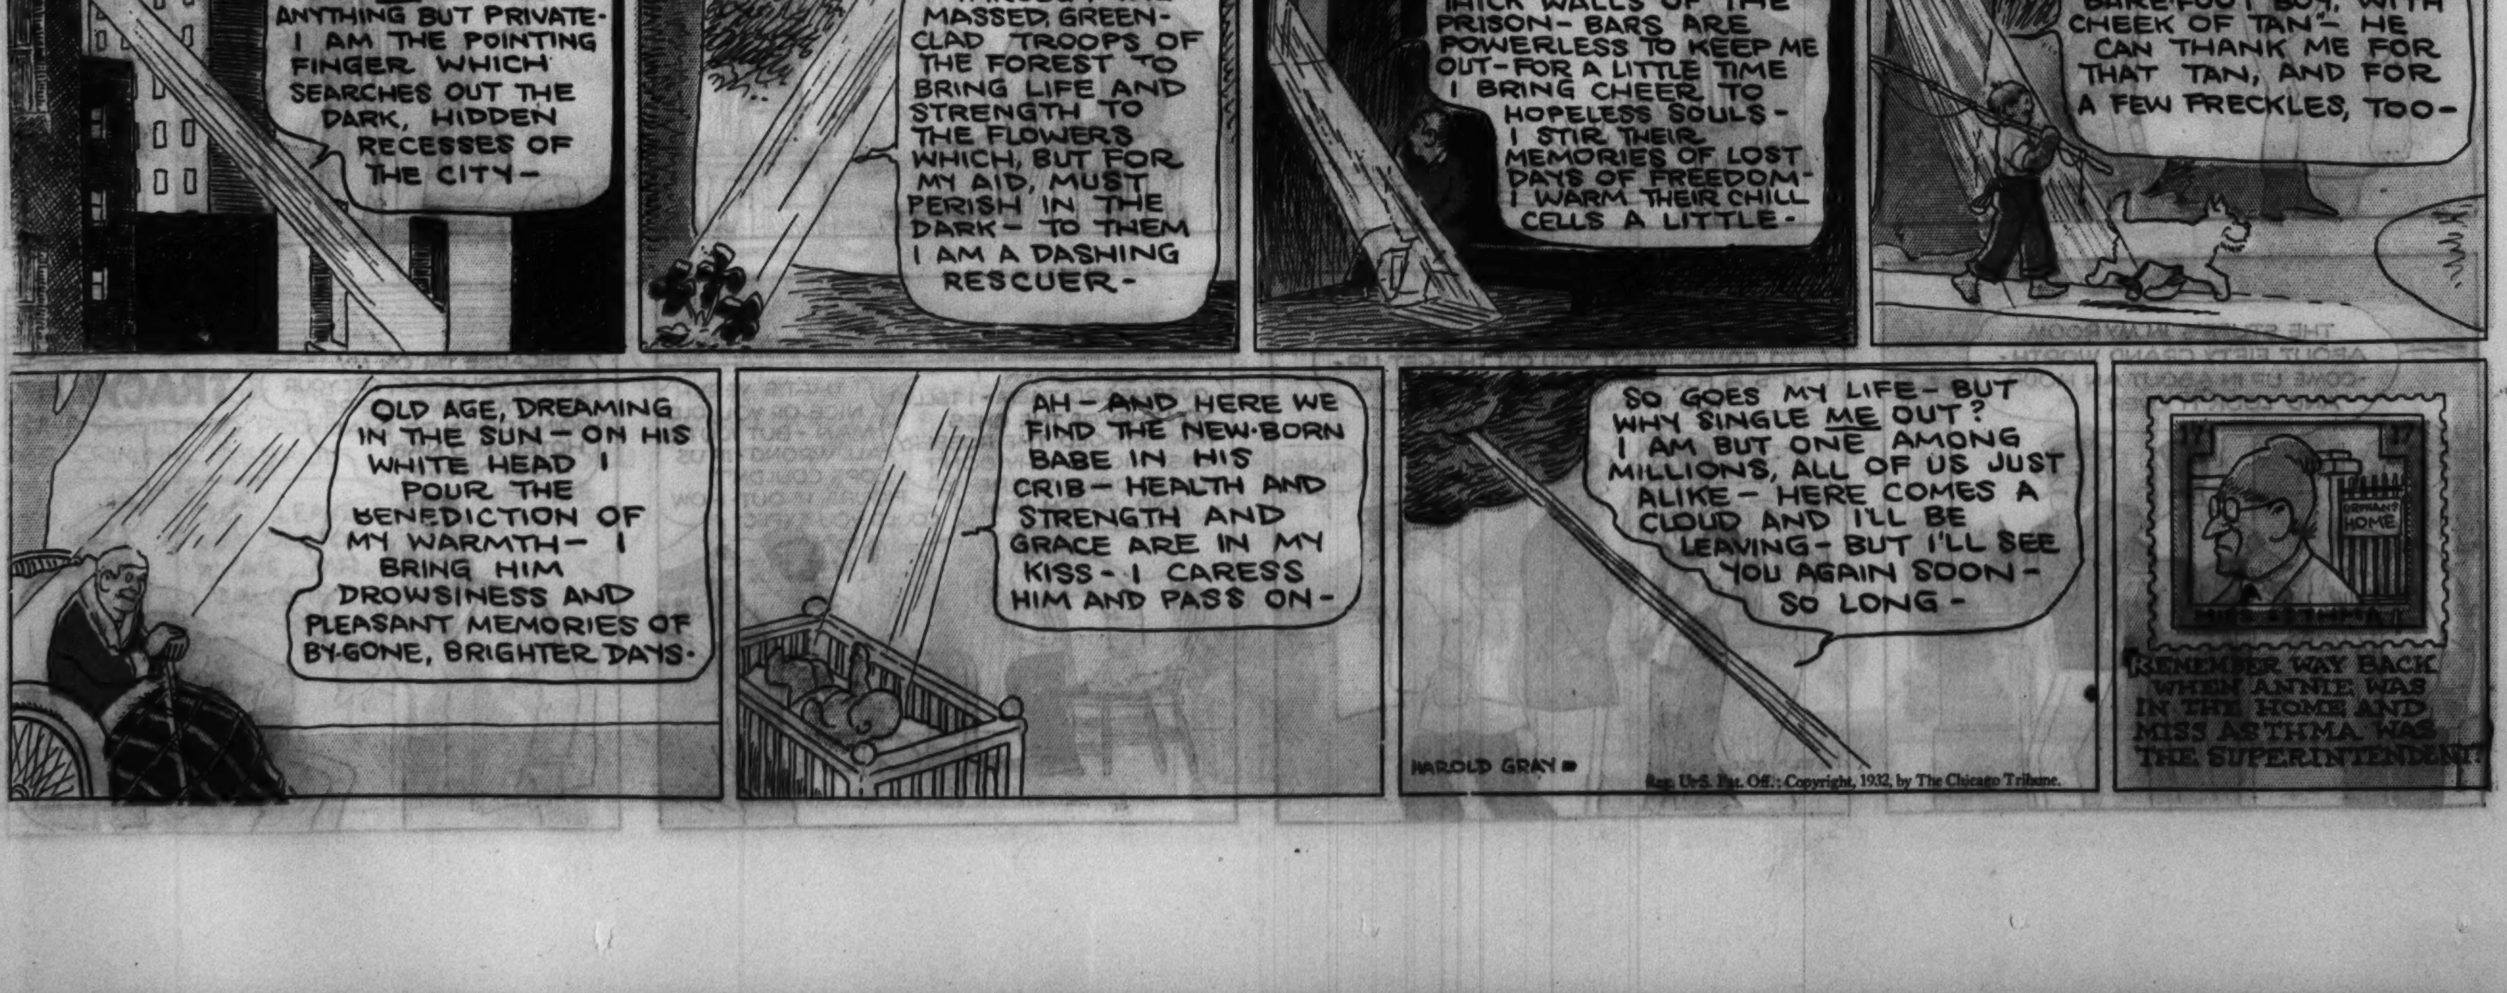
Private Life of a Sunbeam



MY PRIVATE LIFE? WHY, MY LIFE IS ANYTHING BUT PRIVATE- I AM THE POINTING FINGER WHICH SEARCHES OUT THE DARK, HIDDEN RECESSES OF THE CITY-
I SLIP SUDDENLY THROUGH THE MASSED GREEN-CLAD TROOPS OF THE FOREST TO BRING LIFE AND STRENGTH TO THE FLOWERS WHICH, BUT FOR MY AID, MUST PERISH IN THE DARK- TO THEM I AM A DASHING RESCUER-
I DISCOVER THE NARROW WINDOWS IN THE THICK WALLS OF THE PRISON- BARS ARE POWERLESS TO KEEP ME OUT- FOR A LITTLE TIME I BRING CHEER TO HOPELESS SOULS- I STIR THEIR MEMORIES OF LOST DAYS OF FREEDOM- I WARM THEIR CHILL CELLS A LITTLE-
THEN ALONG THE RIVER- WHAT'S THIS? "BARE-FOOT BOY, WITH CHEEK OF TAN"- HE CAN THANK ME FOR THAT TAN, AND FOR A FEW FRECKLES, TOO-
OLD AGE, DREAMING IN THE SUN- ON HIS WHITE HEAD I POUR THE BENEDICTION OF MY WARMTH- I BRING HIM DROWSINESS AND PLEASANT MEMORIES OF BY-GONE, BRIGHTER DAYS-
AH- AND HERE WE FIND THE NEW-BORN BABE IN HIS CRIB- HEALTH AND STRENGTH AND GRACE ARE IN MY KISS- I CARESS HIM AND PASS ON-
SO GOES MY LIFE- BUT WHY SINGLE ME OUT? I AM BUT ONE AMONG MILLIONS, ALL OF US JUST ALIKE- HERE COMES A CLOUD AND I'LL BE LEAVING- BUT I'LL SEE YOU AGAIN SOON- SO LONG-

AVERY, I DIDN'T SHOW YOU THE DRESSED FLEAS I PICKED UP WHEN I WAS DOWN IN MEXICO DID I?
DRESSED FLEAS? I PICKED UP SOME UNDRESSED ONES ONCE.
ALL RIGHT I'LL BITE. WHAT ARE DRESSED FLEAS?
THIS IS ON THE SQUARE, AVERY. SOME OF THE MEXICANS ARE VERY CLEVER AT MAKING TINY COSTUME FIGURES AND MOUNTING THEM IN A BOX NO BIGGER THAN THE END OF A LEAD PENCIL. I'LL SHOW THEM TO YOU.
GOLLY. THEY ARE NO BIGGER THAN MICROBES ARE THEY! HOW DID YOU BRING THEM BACK?
I PUT THE TINY WHITE BOX INTO THIS ASPIRIN BOX SO IT WOULDN'T GET LOST.
I WOULDN'T SWEAR THEY ARE DRESSED FLEAS BUT THEY ARE JUST THAT SIZE.
YOU'LL LOSE THEM AS SURE AS I LET YOU TAKE THEM, SKEEZIX.
NO, UNCLE WALT, I JUST WANT TO SHOW THEM TO THE KIDS.
HURRY UP, SNORT. I WANT TO SEE 'EM.
GEE, THEY'RE SWELL UNDER A MAGNIFYING GLASS. WHAT DO YOU WANT FOR 'EM.
AW I WOULDN'T SELL 'EM.
THROUGH THE MAGNIFYING GLASS
GIVE HIM A CHANCE. YOU CAN ALL LOOK AS LONG AS YOU WANT TO FOR A PENNY APIECE.

WILL YOU WAIT TILL I GO GET A PENNY?
I'LL GIVE YOU A SCOUT KNIFE FOR 'EM.

C'MON SKEEZIX. I'LL GIVE YOU SIX MAGIC TRICKS.
NOPE. I'VE GOT TO TAKE IT IN THE HOUSE.
I'LL MAKE IT 8 CENTS CASH.
TRADE YOU MY DOG FOR 'EM FOR A WEEK.
I'LL GO IN AN' GET 'EM AGAIN AN' THINK ABOUT IT.
RACHEL, DID YOU SEE MY DRESSED FLEAS? I LEFT 'EM RIGHT HERE.

THE LINCOLN V-12 . . . LE BARON CONVERTIBLE ROADSTER . . . $4600 AT DETROIT

Those who truly value the fine things of life find the Lincoln as gratifying in its service as in the beauty of its appearance. Long sweeping lines indicate the smoothness of its motion. Precision construction promises miles virtually without number of luxurious motoring comfort. So hushed is the flow of power, so gliding-like its fleet performance, that one senses immediately the extreme care with which this highly refined mechanism has been built. Every Lincoln is constructed to the highest principles of manufacture, with advanced engineering, of the finest materials, and to precision limits exact to minute fractions of a hair's breadth. This is the background of the Lincoln V-12, a motor car designed to supplement any scheme of gracious living.

If you would like to see pictures of your favorite radio stars printed in this series write your suggestions to Radio Pictures Editor, Chicago Tribune, P. O. Box 1718, Chicago, Ill. Next week pictures of MYRT AND MARGE and RAY PERKINS will be printed in this section, and, like those above, will be so presented as to be suitable for framing or for the pages of your scrap books or albums.

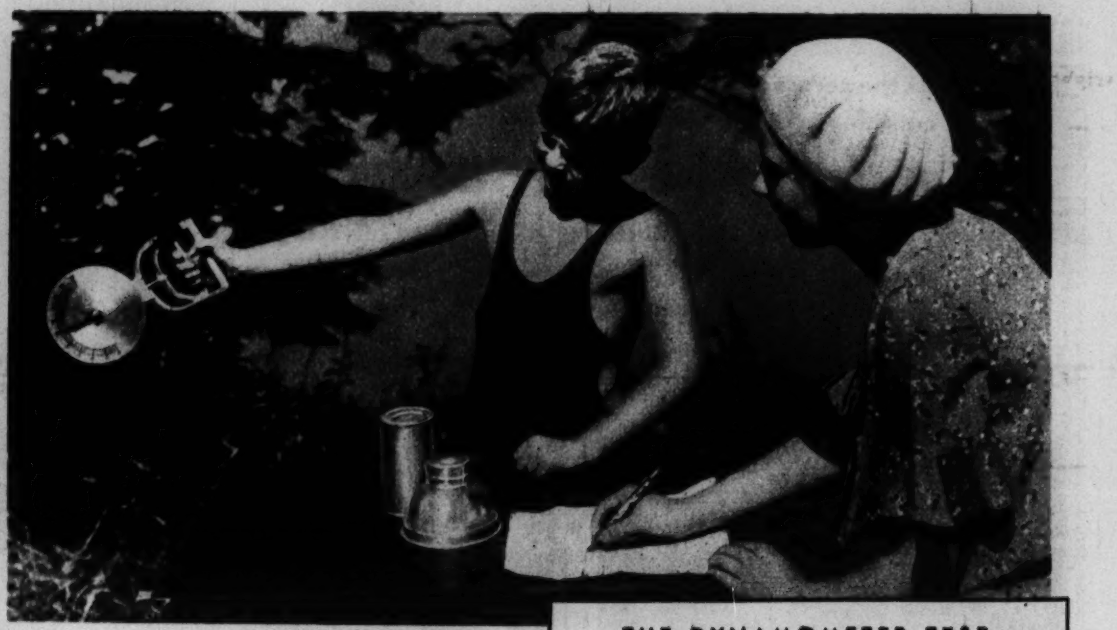
How To Decrease A Child's Nervousness 30% In Two Weeks
..A Way That Adds A Pound A Week In Weight, Too



THE DYNAMOMETER TEST

An Eastern university scientist has found a way, by giving a certain food concentrate, to diminish nervousness as much as 30% in 2 weeks!

In a series of recent tests 85% of all nervous, under-par children responded almost immediately when this food concentrate was given.

Children who had previously been "high strung" became noticeably more calm. They acquired new energy, new stamina. And their mental alertness increased to a marked degree.

In some cases, nervousness—as measured by the Olson-University of Minnesota checking system—was reduced as much as 18% in a single week!

These remarkable results with nervous children are important to mothers of underweight children too. For child specialists have long observed that nervousness and underweight go hand in hand. And the food concentrate used with such success on these nervous children has long been known and used for its power to build up weight as much as a pound a week or more—as well as to combat nervousness.

Thus, when a child is given this food concentrate, he benefits two ways. For it breaks up the "vicious circle" which nervousness and underweight always tend to create.

What It Is

The name of this food concentrate is Ovaltine. Discovered in Switzerland, it has already been approved by 20,000 doctors. You simply give it mixed with milk, and children love its taste.

Ovaltine combats nervousness by supplying important calcium to the system, under the most favorable conditions to promote calcium metabolism and provide proper calcium balance in the blood. Phosphorus—a vital element of nerve and brain tissue—is supplied too. A cup of Ovaltine, in fact, provides, in easily digested and rapidly assimilated form, the food elements often lacking in the child's daily diet, but which are absolutely necessary for building nerve, brain and muscle tissues.

Quicker Digestion—Increased Nourishment

Ovaltine also contains in high proportion a remarkable food property called "diastase"—the starch-digestant. Ovaltine contains so much of this element that it digests 4 to 5 times its own weight of the starch content of other foods a child eats. And the diet of the average child contains about 60% of starchy foods.

This means that Ovaltine not only aids a child's digestion, but helps to speed up the process and empty the stomach sooner. This makes a child hungry. For hunger is a sensation caused by the walls of an empty stomach drawing together.

When your child drinks Ovaltine, he not only inclines to eat more of such healthful foods as vegetables, oatmeal and bread, but because of better digestion, can get more nourishment out of every mouthful he takes.

See For Yourself

Discount, if you wish, the results ascribed to Ovaltine in the remarkable tests above. Disregard the fact that Ovaltine is approved by over 20,000 physicians and child specialists. But for the sake of your child, try it.

Results will surprise you. Note the almost immediate difference in weight—in nerve poise—and in strength. Note, too, the definite increase in appetite—the eagerness to eat.

Give Ovaltine at breakfast always. At meals and as frequently as you wish between meals. You can get Ovaltine at any drug or grocery store. It is economical to serve. It is all food concentrate. You add your own sugar to taste when you mix it. So do not be misled if you are offered a sweet-tasting "sugar mixture" substitute.

NOTE: Thousands of nervous people, men and women, are using Ovaltine to restore vitality when fatigued. During the World War, it was made a standard ration for rebuilding invalid, nerve-shattered soldiers. It is also highly recommended by physicians for sleeplessness, for nursing mothers, convalescents and the aged.

HILLS BROS MADE COFFEE-ROASTING AN EXACT SCIENCE WHEN THEY INVENTED CONTROLLED ROASTING

Under-roasting and over-roasting prevented by Hills Bros' patented continuous roasting process

Every berry is roasted to perfection... results in a flavor that's simply superb

Coffee roasted "a little at a time" instead of in big batches

As the accuracy of the hour-glass depends upon an even, continuous flow . . .

a little at a time

. . . so the uniform flavor of Hills Bros. Coffee is produced by Controlled Roasting — the patented process that roasts evenly, continuously . . . "a little at a time."

Hills Bros.
COFFEE

No can of Hills Bros. Coffee will ever "go stale." The vacuum can keeps it FRESH ALWAYS!

If you under-cook or over-cook your foods, you know that you spoil the flavor. The same is true of coffee. If it is under-roasted or over-roasted, the flavor is considerably harmed. Only one exact degree of roast can develop perfect flavor.

Ordinarily, coffee is roasted in bulk, and can be under-roasted or over-roasted. For there isn't any positive way to keep big batches controlled. Hills Bros. realized this many years ago and—after long experimentation—they invented and patented Controlled Roasting.

Instead of roasting in bulk, Hills Bros. roast a little at a time . . . as the coffee flows evenly, continuously through the roasters. A continuous flow of small quantities, automatically controlled, permits every berry to be perfectly done . . . roasted to the right degree that brings out the finest flavor! And the flavor never varies, because the process never varies!

There's nothing like a fragrant cup of Hills Bros. Coffee to quicken and stir your appetite . . . to make you really coffee-hungry! That hearty, deep aroma promises a lot of pleasure—and the coffee lives up to the promise! Order Hills Bros. Coffee today. Ask for it by name, and look for the Arab trade-mark on the can.

HILLS BROS COFFEE STORED AWAY FOR TEST OF FRESHNESS IN YEARS TO COME

For purposes of testing and checking, cans of Hills Bros. Coffee are retained from each day's pack. Some of the cans, which compose this record, bear dates of ten, fifteen, even twenty years ago.

When the oldest cans are opened and the coffee tested, it is always as fresh and as flavory as the day it was roasted! Hills Bros.' vacuum can never fails to keep coffee roaster-fresh . . . regardless of its age.

The vacuum process of packing coffee is the only method that fully preserves coffee freshness — the air is removed from the can and kept out. It was originated by Hills Bros. over thirty years ago. There is no magic about a vacuum can — it will not make poor coffee good, but it will keep good coffee fresh.

VERSATILITY FASHIONS FOR DAYTIME ARE ESSENTIAL

Double-Duty Clothes Chosen by Parisians

Suit Must Look Smart in Town and Appropriate for the Country, Too.

By Bettina Bedwell.

PARIS.—[Special.]—The way in which fashionable people get around the town and country is responsible for the present Paris daytime styles. Certain French dressmakers are famous today because they have a talent for making versatile clothes, clothes that look elegant in town and rustic in the country. Smart women demand this from their daytime clothes, and it's not so easy to find, even in Paris.

There are heaps of so-called double-duty clothes and two time dresses, suits and coats, but to pick one genuinely versatile ensemble out of the heap takes a lot of looking. That is why about five Paris couturiers have the whole of the Famous Forty running to them for their daytime costumes. A suit that looks as "right" as royalty at the Ritz, and that seems to belong in the orchard dining room of the celebrated rural Inn of Cent Quatre, where it is smart to lunch on a Sunday, is the very life blood of Paris chic this summer.

The tradition of tweeds for the country is a perfectly good tradition and in working order, but one may disregard it, too, without breaking any rule of taste or fashion. Tweed, with the exception of Schiaparelli's new unrecognizable tweed, isn't versatile, and therefore many elegant women only take to tweeds when they stay in the country for a considerable period of time. Smoother materials are more versatile, and rustic, ribbed silks, wools and cottons are the principal tissues used to make ensembles that can serve times without number both in town and out in the country.

Coats for Two Rôles.

Coats that are worn around Paris and in the country, too, are of two types this summer. There is a new coat silhouette that is not fitted and that makes a point of a flaring line from the shoulders in the back. This is one; and the Paris dressmakers vary it in many ways, making it without collar and with a big shawl collar, with or without pockets, and with loose or bishop sleeves.

The other kind is fitted and has sleeves that are exaggerated at the top to give the popular square shouldered appearance. You can wear such coats all day long without any sacrifice of chic provided they be made of one color, dull surfaced silk or wool. Parisiennes wear these coats over their simple suits when they go to the country.

The kind of suit that has the grand chic is one with a hip length, fitted jacket and a plain high topped skirt. All smart Paris is wearing suits like these with printed silk blouses, with linen or cotton blouses and with silk or cotton crocheted sweaters when they go to the country. A fur piece or a printed silk scarf is worn with the suit in town, and for the country the scarf is crocheted, or it is made of striped jersey.

When a coat and dress are worn the dress may be made of one colored rustic silk or cotton, and it may be striped, dotted, or without pattern. Chic Parisiennes are wearing Schiaparelli's new one piece frocks that button in back instead of slipping over the head for both town and country. Vionnet's suspender skirts and peasant blouses are distinguished in both atmospheres and Mainbocher's suits and jabot dresses fit all daytime occasions.

Linen Is Popular.

Hats with rolling, childish brims and those with the sailor with a vagabond brim are the height of chic and are just as smart for trotting around Paris as they are amid fields and flowers.

Slippers for the country are either oxfords or pumps and the Parisienne likes them made of linen for town or for a short foray to the country. She wears linen gloves, too, and sometimes her hat is made of linen.

Dark blue is a color that fits the versatile idea of daytime clothes. Beige is another, and some fashionable women are wearing gray with a contrasting color.

The Schiaparelli ensemble shown at the extreme left combines navy blue with white and there's no better color combination for both town and country. The coat of this ensemble is made of navy rustic ribbed wool. It hangs loose from the shoulders and has a big collar of self-material stitched in lines of blue. The revers and patch pockets are characteristic, and the lack of any fastening or belt is part of its charm.

The frock under this coat is made of navy blue and white striped silk, the stripes worked diagonally, the whole dress cut on the bias. A scarf of tucked silk in a soft medium red is crossed surplice-wise on the bodice and brought to the hipline and held under a navy leather belt. This scarf is clipped to the dress so it seems part of it.

A Clever Ensemble.

In the center is another Schiaparelli ensemble that has great versatility. This ensemble has a straight coat made of a fine mixed woolen in grêge color which looks like silk.

This coat has no collar but it has a double breasted bolero vestee of brown wool, the collar and revers of which lie over the coat. This vestee is attached by two bar clips in gold. The patch pockets are placed on the hips of the coats.

Under this coat is worn a Schiaparelli frock in the same color, but made in a new silk called crêpesse that looks just like the wool of the coat. The dress is entirely cut on the bias and is buttoned in back, as you can see by consulting the figure just behind and at the left. Three clip buttons hold it closed at the shoulder yoke and a rope of the silk holds it at the waistline. The dress has a wrap around back under this closing. A scarf of brown and red silk crochet is placed at the neckline of this ensemble.

Celebrated Suit.

At the extreme right you may see Mainbocher's celebrated triple breasted navy blue wool tailleur, the most famous suit in Paris. This suit has no collar. A navy and white dotted scarf is twisted around the neck and tucked under the big revers. The flaps of the pockets in the jacket are placed at the sides of the waistline and there is a cloth belt across the back. The skirt is gored, has a high top and a surpliced blouse of dotted crêpe to match the scarf. The sailor hat is blue felt with a printed bow for trimming.

Schiaparelli designs the ensemble shown at the extreme left. The coat of a rustic-ribbed wool. It has a big, stitched collar, revers, and patch pockets. Its lack of any fastening or belt is part of its chic. The frock is of striped silk. . . . . In the center is another ensemble from Schiaparelli that shows great versatility. The woolen coat has no collar but has a double breasted bolero vestee of wool. The dress of this ensemble, shown in the figure just behind at the left, is in a new, heavy silk called crepesse. It has a wrap-around closing at back. . . . Schiaparelli also makes the woolen town and country ensemble, which looks exactly like a suit when open. The seated figure on the left shows the coat with its shutter revers fastened with clips. The sleeves have tiny ray tucks descending from the shoulders where they are set in. . . . . Last is Mainbocher's celebrated triple-breasted suit of wool. It has no collar, but has a dotted scarf twisted around the neck.

Let the Left Handed Children Alone

By Gladys Huntington Bevans.

THE principal of the old fashioned but thorough public school that I went to as a little girl was renowned throughout the city for the beautiful writers he turned out. Well do I remember standing before a caterer's window on my way home, pretending to be gazing at the beautiful white candy swan while I tried to curtail my floods of tears because I'd been "kept in" to make capital O's. And well do I remember the despair and struggle of that principal over the little girl in our class who was left handed and had to "sit different and everything."

At various times letters have come in asking my advice about a child who stammered and who was being changed from left handedness to right, and about other difficulties that seemed to crop up with this change and whether there was any conection. It has not been possible to answer these questions fully in a personal reply, so it seemed wise to devote one Sunday's space to the subject.

This is a right handed world. Why? Only because most people are right handed. Consequently, it is inconvenient for a child who is left handed in such a world. But inconvenient is all it would be, if we'd let the left handed child alone. In every other respect he's as intelligent and well fitted for life as any right handed child. He functions just as normally in every way. His only difficulty comes when he has to do with his left hand what the world usually does with its right.

Of Minor Importance.

Both at school and at home these things should be treated as of minor importance. He should never be made to feel different or inferior. His left handedness should be accepted, just as the shape of his nose is accepted, as part of him as a personality. It is the constant effort to change a child's handedness that makes him feel it an undesirable thing.

In schools altogether too much fuss is made over the fact that a child writes with his left hand, or performs other acts with it. Teachers should be instructed as to the correct procedure with left handed children. Parents, too, give too great importance to this deviation from the customary.

But it is when teachers and parents try to make a left handed child into a right handed one that the trouble begins. When a child is trained out of this natural aptitude it usually causes an actual physiological disturbance, a strain which shows itself in various ways.

Girls Who Fail to Attract Men Given Bit of Helpful Attention

By Doris Blake.

WHY is it that one young woman can come into a room and in a few minutes have a group of admiring males surrounding her while another young woman, no less attractive physically perhaps, is left to her own company over in the corner?

If we knew the exact answer we know we could make a number of girls happier. We do know only that some young women have the talent to attract. Others have not. But perhaps by analyzing the type of girl who does not attract men readily we might gather some valuable light on the subject.

So, let's examine this girl who sits on the sidelines wondering why she cannot be as interesting to men as the girl surrounded by admirers.

She isn't one girl, nor one type of girl, this one who has something about her that isolates her from the popular group. She is a number of different types. If one can identify herself among the assortment we are about to present, it is more than possible she can make adjustment with the source of her trouble and earn a better time for herself.

Not Entirely Hopeless.

First, we should like to remind girls that the years often bring a wisdom about handling men, so that 30, let's say, sees created an entirely different personality than the same girl was in her twenties. Proving that one can change her personality. But this great gap of time need not be utilized for learning if one is willing to face the problem intelligently. The twenties are the years in which a girl most wants to do her attracting.

The two outstanding types of girls that improve with age are the excessively shy and the aggressive, overly capable. The latter is usually identified in men's minds with a certain

Enticing Meat Dish Possible with Marinade

Tough Cuts Changed Into Savory Delicacies and Budget Stays Low.

By Mary Meade.

WHAT'S to be done about tough meat?

This question lies near to the hearts of a great many of us who are trying to keep the meat bill inside the lines set for it by our food budget—and are having a pretty discouraging time doing it. The higher the price we pay, naturally, the more certain we are to get tender meats. But low priced cuts, no matter how fibrous they may seem when the delivery boy first lands them on the kitchen table, may be transformed into the tenderest of savory delicacies if the cook only knows how to humor and cajole them properly.

Of course, the most familiar ways of cooking tough meats tender are by long time stewing or baking at low heat, coupled with Swissing, much flour, and vicious onslaughts of a hammer or plate. But while these methods do get results, they all have distinct disadvantages. Either they are time-consuming, too hard work, or wasteful of fuel.

Why Not the Marinade?

Why not, then, try the marinade? It is an old, old method of preparing meats—so old, in fact, that it is new to most modern cooks—and it has the advantage of actually rendering tough meats tender while at the same time preserving and enhancing all the original meaty flavor and juices. The marinade is simply a mixture of oil, acid, and seasoning. It is discussed in old French, German, and Scandinavian cook books, and even in a few of our own early American ones, for it was discovered by cooks in the day when meat was meat, irrespective of its palatability, and when it is doubtful if any of it had much claim to tenderness.

To explain the whys and wherefores of marinating meats takes a word of explanation about meat itself. When we say that a cut of meats is "tough," what do we mean? Though we may not know it, we are actually saying that this piece of rump, neck, or shoulder is cut from a part of the animal in which the muscles have been most exercised. For as the muscles grow and thicken, the connective tissues which bind them together also grow thick and tough. Therefore, what we are attempting in making meat tender is the breaking down and dissolving of these objectionable connective tissues.

In preparing Swiss steak we break these tissues mechanically. In heating in water or steam we soften and convert them into gelatine. This process takes place in all meats, but with tough cuts it is much slower—it needs speeding up to make low-priced cuts really practical buys for the busy homemaker.

Soluble in Acid.

And this is where the marinade takes a hand. It was discovered that these tough connective tissues were soluble in acid as well as in heat. Therefore, by soaking meat in or rubbing into it a mixture which contains acid [usually in the form of vinegar], it was found that things happened. Long cooking and the accompanying loss of flavor were done away with, and a whole host of attractive new meat dishes were made possible at an enticingly low figure.

But before we start marinating, let's take a look at the marinade itself. A three-to-one proportion of oil and acid seems to give the best results. A common cooking oil combined with vinegar, lemon, or tomato juice will do the trick. And as for spices, it's much a matter of personal taste. Minced parsley, onions, thyme, sage, cloves, celery seed, mustard—a combination of any of these or of others will penetrate into the meat and add a delicious flavor.

The following recipe has been most successful in marinating many different meats and cuts:

MARINADE.

¾ cup oil
¼ cup vinegar
½ teaspoon salt
¼ teaspoon pepper
¼ teaspoon thyme
¼ teaspoon sage
½ onion, minced
½ teaspoon celery seed

Now what shall we marinate, and how? Experts who have spent a good many years in meat cookery advise the less tender cuts of beef and lamb—the rump, round, brisket, neck, and chuck of the former, and the rounds, shoulder, or leg of the latter. Wild game and venison are also made more delicious and juicier if marinated before cooking. The marinade, if the meat is not allowed to soak in it, should be rubbed or brushed into every possible opening.

Braising has proved the most satisfactory method of cooking marinated meats. Salt should first be rubbed thoroughly into the meat [after marinating]. It should then be seared in a heavy frying pan or Dutch oven and allowed to simmer in its own juices or in added milk, water, sour cream, or tomato juice.

The following recipes have been drawn from various sources, and I can vouch for their delicious flavors and tenderness if properly prepared:

SAUERBRATEN.

4 pounds beef [rump, round, or chuck]
1 teaspoon pepper
4 teaspoons salt
2 teaspoons chopped onion
Blade of mace
1 teaspoon peppercorns
Equal parts of vinegar and water
¼ cup sugar
6 ginger snaps
¼ cup raisins

Rub the meat with salt and pepper and place with onion, mace, and peppercorns in a deep casserole or earthen dish. Season water and vinegar to taste with salt and sugar, and add hot to the meat, making sure it is

Sidelights on Girls Who Fail to Attract Men

masculinity of character that does not appeal. At thirty she has learned from observation that aggressiveness is not one of the cherished feminine arts. The excessively shy girl has also gathered from life that the rewards of hiding her light under a bushel are nil. Too, she has made enough contacts to give her a better personal assurance of her own worth.

Of the girls whose nature has much to do with their social ostracism, first we might cite the young woman who is out of harmony with people entirely. She is not interested in people or in their affairs. Her emotional life, if fed at all, is fed through novels, plays, and movies. So far as men, and people generally, are concerned she is emotionally asleep. She lacks that appeal, which, while we do not mean sex appeal in the physical sense exactly, is based on a certain physical vitality given out to others. The cure here is simply to shake out of one's self and force an interest in people generally.

Maidens Out of Step.

Then there are girls who do not fit in with their contemporaries. Their points of view may be molded entirely by a generation of which the girls are not now a part. Or their outlook may be dominated by a mind in advance of their time and generation. Anyway, they are completely out of step with the generation that matters most. Such young women do not have to change their ideals. But they must compromise with the modern spirit of amusement getting. Otherwise they will have only a mental life, which is not a rounded out enough life for a young woman. This group is not large compared with other groups. Still, we do run into her sitting a bit too formidably on the sidelines—wondering what men can see in the girl who is eager to join in whatever fun is presented.

A group that appears to get on for a time with men and then is forced back into the waiting line is constituted of girls who are too obviously eager for friendship. These girls throw themselves at men. They telephone them on the least provocation, pursue them too avidly with invitations, ask for explanations about what the young man did last night and the night before, why he didn't call, etc. You know the type. They may be perfectly grand girls but their eagerness for popularity cramps their winning style. They get too serious before the man's feelings have had a chance to develop. They attract, but they do not hold, because the man gathers the impression by the persistency of her pursuit that said girl is not sought after by other men. The fault here lies in looking upon every man as a marriage prospect, instead of thinking of him as a friend.

Too Selfish for Friendship.

There is another and a growing type who use people for social contact. Not that this is a fault in itself, but the type referred to "works" her friends so obviously that she earns their hearty dislike. There is a ruthlessness about this kind of girl who adopts a friend or a group of friends, gets what she can out of them, and proceeds to shed them completely for a fresh field of conquest. Frequently she finds herself with no friends at all at the end of a few seasons. No boosters. No one to laud her good qualities, which in this game of winning popularity is well to have.

There is the type who underestimates herself and everything about her, the girl without spirit enough to do battle with her inferiority feeling. She cannot build up an attractive personality belittling herself. She creates inconspicuousness by her constant self-brooding. She's a good deal of a bore to women as well as to men. No one has time or inclination to spend bolstering up a deflated ego. No one should be expected to sympathize with it. It's not sweet humility nearly so often as it is a self-centeredness that will not rise above its own petty interests.

There is a type of girl who refuses to adapt herself to men's interests, activities, and pursuits. She offers no promise of interest to men. She may get along well with girls for she adapts herself readily to their interests. But she has none of the magnetism in her contacts with men that pique their curiosity. She is "lazy" about appealing to men. She won't stir herself to say a pleasant thing or commit a feminine wile to earn their attention. She doesn't dislike men, this type. She would like their company but she will not put herself out to please them. And they return the compliment.

Eyes Cast Upward.

There are girls with a definite and set version of the type of man they want to attract. In so far as the qualities demanded are good character and decency, well and good. But this type have the personal ambition to attract men whom they cannot attract, men whom they have no opportunity of meeting; men beyond them intellectually, socially, even geographically. This type of girl overestimates what she has to offer in return. She is a girl unwilling to face realities. A dreamer, a wisher, but no doer. She wants that particular type of man or nothing. She keeps on wishing for some dream type of meeting, some act of fate to bring them together. What this type should do is to adapt herself to the men within her horizon and, through their association, broaden her acquaintance. It is the only way she can hope to catch up with the man of her desires, if ever. It may just happen that one of these substitute boys has all the good qualities the dream man was endowed with.

Then, there is the waster type of girl who may have a fling for a time but winds up with an unprofitable looking list of male acquaintances. There is a character weakness in this type girl. She lacks faith in herself, so she allows herself to be attracted to men whom she would not consider seriously as a marriage bet. She wastes herself and her time on them. You will find this type frequently gravitating into affairs with married men, and wondering why it is only the ineligible kind of man that she attracts. She is not willing to face the fact that the fault is hers and the comparatively light value she puts upon herself.

And then there are the types that love to nurse an old love wound with either a perpetual state of sadness or in a cynical attitude toward men as a whole. Gloom and bitterness being the least attractive of human qualities, this type is avoided.

The Tribune Cook Book

Squares of lamb, sandwiched between thick tomato slices, were marinated—allowed to stand in a mixture of oil, vinegar and seasoning—for one hour before broiling. The result was a tender and juicy meat service, at once flavorful and economical.

well covered. Cover the dish and let stand in a cool place for from three to five days. At the end of this time place the meat, onion, and a little of the marinade in a kettle, brown well in a hot oven, then cover and let cook slowly until tender [about three hours], adding more vinegar when necessary.

When done, slice and keep hot. Strain the liquid in the kettle, skimming off the fat. Melt the sugar in a frying pan, gradually add the liquid, then the ginger snaps and raisins. Cook until thick and smooth, and pour over the meat. This is frequently served in Germany with a cup of thick sour cream added to the gravy.

2 lbs. rounds of lamb cut in small squares
8 large, ripe tomatoes
1 cup oil
½ cup catsup
½ cup vinegar
¼ cup sugar
½ teaspoon salt
½ teaspoon paprika
1 tablespoon grated onion

Shake the last seven ingredients thoroughly together and in this Russian dressing marinate the squares of lamb for one hour. Then slip the squares on long steel skewers, alternating with thick slices of tomato. Broil over hot coals and serve on toasted bread.

MARINATED BEEF STEAK EN CASSEROLE.

Chop beef steak into inch cubes and roll them in a mixture of flour, salt, and pepper. Melt butter in a frying pan and in it brown thinly sliced onions. Add the beef cubes and simmer until they are brown on all sides. Season well with paprika and turn into a casserole, cover with sour cream and bake in a moderate oven [325 degrees F.] about one and one-half hours, or until tender.

Sour cream, by the way, makes an excellent marinade and gives a delectable flavor to meats cooked in it. The lactic acid which is found in sour cream softens the tough meat fibers, and, of course, fat, the other ingredient we need to make a marinade, is furnished generously by whole milk or cream. So if you are a true sour cream fan, you will want to try it in meat loaves, and you'll wish to simmer not-so-tender steaks and roasts in it. And if you are a devotee of Russian cooking, this sour cream special will seek out the right spot in your heart.

RUSSIAN SHASHLEEK WITH SOUR CREAM.

Cut two-by-four inch rectangles from slices of shoulder of lamb. Marinate in sour cream, salt, and pepper for three hours. Remove the meat from the marinade at the end of this time and fold each piece over a very thin slice of a clove of garlic. Alternate these folded slices on metal skewers with small slices of lamb fat. Broil under a flame until tender and richly browned.

Shantung Steps Into Evening Dress Class

PARIS.—(AP)—Shantung has stepped into the evening dress class. A number of shantung dinner and evening frocks, both plain and embroidered, were shown in spring style shows. Coral red, leaf green, and white are the favorite colors used in a design with a high waist, square décolletage, and little round puffed sleeves.

Wedding Dictates Bridal Gown

By Helen Bartlett.

To the girl planning her wedding, the question of dress looms large and important. As a matter of fact it is much simpler for her to decide upon and to obtain her costume and the costumes of her attendants than it is to find the right costume for the men. And as a practiced adviser and observer of weddings of all kinds, we know that inconsistencies are more often found in the garb of the men than the women. We'll attempt to give the men some help next week.

Once the bride decides on the type of wedding she wants she can, with one eye on the fashion bulletins, follow her own personal preferences about dress for herself and her attendants.

Brides Gown.

If she decides to wear the traditional wedding gown and veil, she will probably choose for this season a princess gown of satin, crêpe, or faille. Every wedding gown, in our opinion, should be long sleeved and skirted and modestly cut at the neck. The arrangement of the bride's veil will depend on what becomes her; it may be of tulle, net or even chiffon, as described recently in THE TRIBUNE by Bettina Bedwell.

For the quite formal wedding her gown will have a train of two, three or more yards. Her veil will probably be longer. The veil that comes down over the face is extremely popular. Her gown being long sleeved she can dispense with gloves, which are much too awkward anyway.

Incidentally, this season's bride is wearing white or a soft ivory; the nuances of blue, pink, or silver so popular for the last two or three seasons are no longer seen.

White for Attendants.

White for the attendants is universally popular, but this is usually accompanied by color accents, perhaps a sash, a jacket, or a bouquet providing sharp contrast.

The bride carries a prayerbook or flowers, just as she prefers. Her bouquet may be the conventional shower affair or an armful of white roses. The bridal bouquet of last season we remember best was a simple fan shaped one of white stock, truly lovely in its simplicity. Any florist can help the bride-to-be on this point. If she's short, she shouldn't carry a Gargantuan armful; if she's tall a little tight colonial nosegay would be equally inappropriate.

For the not so formal daytime wedding at home or in church the bride will wear an afternoon frock, with a matching or contrasting hat. She can carry flowers or wear a shoulder bouquet. Her attendant is dressed in somewhat the same fashion, but in a different color. At weddings of this type it isn't customary to have more than one attendant.

At the Informal Wedding.

For the entirely informal wedding the bride wears a more or less tailored street or going-away costume. This may be a suit, a frock, or an ensemble. It's long sleeved, usually, and she wears no gloves during the ceremony. She wears a smart street hat and pumps; her flowers are probably a shoulder bouquet of gardenias.

At the formal daytime wedding the bride's mother is dressed in her very best; a silk or lace afternoon frock, and a rather lavish corsage. The groom's mother should also be dressed in her best, with smart frock and hat and corsage.

At an evening wedding both mothers wear evening gowns.

The attendants in a formal evening wedding wear evening frocks usually accompanied [particularly at a church wedding] by jackets.

Picturesque Flower Girls.

Looking about, we find that one of the best costumes for flower girls is the picturesque Kate Greenaway frocks—high bodiced, full skirted and topped by a cunning little poke bonnet. The best bouquet with this is a nosegay.

Muffs for bridesmaids and flower girl in lieu of bouquets are still popular and they are sufficiently new to have a certain distiction. Usually they're tiny, made of chiffon, with either real or artificial flowers obscuring the background of chiffon almost completely.

Next week, in the fifth article of this series on weddings, we'll turn our attention from brides to grooms, ushers, and best men, giving them some information about what they should wear on the day of the wedding.

Lace Frock of Black Wool Worn at Fashionable Tea

NEW YORK.—(AP)—Black wool lace is something new for afternoon. One smart woman attended a fashionable tea recently wearing a frock of wide meshed black wool lace designed along straight, simple lines and finished with a white peau d'ange collar with a large bow on one side. With it she wore a simple black milan hat with two white gardenias poised on the left side.

In the Spring a Young Girl's Fancy Turns to Romantic New Frocks

Dressed Like a Dryad, She Is Hard to Resist

Printed Silks and Diaphanous Chiffons, Sleek Satins Enhance Her Beauty

By Rhea Seeger.

AND now, when a young man's fancies stray amorously to thoughts of rhyming sonnets and rosebuds and other tender tokens of this spring season, the maidens that inspire this cerebral activity turn their thoughts and pockets wrong side out for extra cash for alluring new evening gowns, the better to charm their sighing swains with, my dears! A good soul satisfying, slinky, slithering evening gown can change the dullest, most dejected wallflower into a glamorous star of the evening with the entire blasé, seemingly world weary stag line fighting for dancing rights.

A floating, misty cloud of tulle masquerading as a formal can snare the most illusive male. Any vacillating charmer can be safely added to the list of permanent admirers when the designing minx that covets such attention dresses for easy conquest in new evening clothes. The clever clothes hound can magically change her personality with various evening dresses. The frank, easy camaradie of the tennis opponent of the morning vanishes completely, hidden behind the clinging draperies of lace of the lady of the evening.

The almost terrifying athlete becomes delicate, fragile loveliness under the stars, wrapped in soft silken fabrics. A crisp, uppity young kid sister has been known to make a scoffing big brother gasp with pardonable pride when she swished about of nights in piquant taffeta.

Catering to Economy.

Gay night life is yours for the buying this year. Never have formals and not-so-formals been so lovely, so picturesque, and so divinely within the purchase price of small allowances. You can be quite devastating in cotton net. You can languish and lure in chiffons and equally clinging cotton voiles. You can be ravishing in quaintly ruched net creations that sweep and swirl around your satin slippers. You can be riotously colorful in printed silks or chiffons, and last, but far from least, you can rule royally in sleek satins and heavy crêpes.

And for gay young things that irresponsibly sponsor rebellious ideas against formalities some kindred souls have daringly fashioned evening dresses of wash materials. One great French designer went so far as to cunningly cut white pique and sew it into a smart evening frock with extreme décolletage, fringed flowers to match, and a long, slim fitting silhouette. What a find for the girl who has to be different!

Red heads who know the ways of green dress like slim, cool woodland dryads in leaf green chiffon, with rusty brown slippers to contrast. Slender, silvery blonds wear yellow and then look like daffodils with slippers and sash of tender green. Butternut brown tanned beauties dramatically depend upon ice blue or cool green gleaming satin for striking emphasis. This dressing game for star studded nights is a most intriguing and engrossing pastime.

Jackets Are Important.

In this year of revived feminine frills and fripperies and a certain careful grace and charm all evening clothes lend a most alluring picturesqueness with flowerlike spreading skirts and demurely covered shoulders. The newest dresses invariably cling firmly to their matching jackets. These jackets are just as important as the gowns. They are practically never about, one without the other.

Chicago shops are featuring these new jacket or cocktail jacket gowns enthusiastically, with creations in different fabrics, in many colors, and with jackets of original design. Four have been sketched in the nearby columns. Illustrated at the extreme left is a printed silk crêpe evening gown fashioned in long slender lines with circular fullness starting well below the knees. Narrow straps are used over the shoulders, and the bodice is formed with triangular sections making a deep V in front and back. With this model is worn the matching short bolero-effect jacket that gives the fashionable width and height at the shoulders.

Two Sides of Satin Used.

The smartest trick for contrast is to use two sides of the same shade of satin as illustrated at the left center. The gown is of a lovely, cool, watery green, with the satin side used for the lower section of the swirling skirt, the Chinese-effect jacket, and the belt. The rest of the gown becomes even more slender with the dull crêpe side used for accent. Jeweled clasps at belt and neckline serve as simple and correct decoration.

Dusky, lovely, shell-pink lace is undoubtedly the most feminine fabric for evening wear. The third gown sketched is made of this shade of angelskin lace over a whispering silk slip of the same shade. The skirt flares flatteringly around the knees and hangs well to the ankles.

A most sophisticated ensemble for spring and summer nights is one of gleaming black satin, fashioned most simply but with tremendous smartness. The gown is pictorially perfect for the most formal occasions without the tied, very brief cocktail jacket, but a smashing success as a cinema costume or dinner ensemble.

Broom Cabinet Is Joy of Housewives

A SUPPLY cabinet for brooms and cleaning equipment of all kinds ranging from mops and brushes to vacuum cleaners and floor polishing machines—if you have one—may be easily obtained, as cabinet manufacturers have built excellent units for just this sort of household comfort.

If you do not wish to purchase a cabinet already for service, you can probably find some corner in kitchen or hall or closet which some local carpenter or expert handyman around town can fit up for you. A step nearer you will be to that Utopian state when the home contains a place for everything and everything in its place.

These Debonair Costumes Will Enliven Balmy Evenings

A Friend in Need

By Sally Joy Brown

A Free Camping Site in Woods of Northern Wisconsin Is Offered City Boys Through Generosity of Reader.

DURING a week of most depressing letters, stories of suffering and privation, comes a bright spot in an offer from one of our generous readers. He is making the most of the opportunities about him to help others and because of this he will be responsible for a happy, healthful summer for the group of boys who take advantage of his offer. In short, he is giving a free camping site in a most delightful spot in the northern woods.

Here is the letter he wrote:

"Dear Sally Joy Brown: I have been thinking that you may know of some boys' club—not be as well provided with vacation camps as the Boy Scouts and the Y. M. C. A.—that would be interested in a free camp site for the summer in northern Wisconsin on a good, small lake in a comparatively wild section of the state.

"There are plenty of fish, berries, and wood. Arrangement can also be made for planting a gardening area so that they would have their own small vegetables. This would mean a healthful summer for the boys. I would not want those of the young gang type who would destroy the trees, and would expect to have some reliable adult in charge. J. W."

Doesn't it all sound inviting? Mr. W. enclosed snapshots, too, which lead me to believe that it must be a most delightful and charming spot, just the place to spend a marvelous summer.

Well, the next step is yours. If your club or group is all set for a slick vacation in the Wisconsin woods, write me about it. I shall forward your letters to Mr. W. and let him decide which of you will make the best tenants. We must have the assurance that you will take good care of the place and will do not damage—all of which, to my way of thinking, is a very small return for such a marvelous summer.

Request for Reading Material.

"I am the mother of three babies and know very few people out here, so I am lonely when my work is finished. I wonder if some one might have old magazines and books to give. I would enjoy anything in print. "MRS. L. B."

To the subscriber of more than one magazine, disposal of them when they've been read often presents a problem. Here's a woman who would be delighted to fall heir to any you no longer want.

Request for Cook Stove.

"We are in need of a garbage burner or a small cook stove. I am the father of two children. About a year and a half ago I fell and fractured my hip so that I am unable to work. For this reason I cannot buy the stove and would appreciate it if you could get one for me. A. S."

The old cook stove which you no longer use would provide a means of cooking for this family and would also help to heat the house during cold weather. Won't you give it to them?

Offers Playing Cards.

"I have about a dozen decks of playing cards which I shall be glad to send to any one who can use them. Perhaps some hospital would like to have them. W. N."

If you enjoy the pastime which playing cards afford perhaps you'd like to share in this gift. Write me if you are interested in securing one or more of these decks. Please do not telephone.

Offers Books, Uniform for Girls.

"I have several books for girls and a Girl Scout uniform, size 12, which I should like to give through your column. Do you know of some one who would care to have them? "MRS. R."

The young bookworm will find a wealth of good reading in this collection which Mrs. R. offers. We'll be glad to hear from a Girl Scout who needs a uniform, too. Write and tell me which of these you are interested in; please do not telephone.

Request for Two Books.

"I'd appreciate your help in getting me the books, 'Frankenstein' and 'Dr. Jekyll and Mr. Hyde.' I'd enjoy reading them but cannot afford to buy them. A. R."

If your library shelves contain copies of these books and you no longer want them, here's a bookworm who'd appreciate falling heir to them. May he not have them?

Would Like Roller Skates.

"Do you know any one who could give me a pair of roller skates? I have never had any, and my father cannot afford to buy them for me. He has been out of work for two years, and there are six children in our family. I am 13 years old. I. F."

Surely this is a sign that spring is not far distant, when the boys and girls begin to think of roller skating. Have you a pair for this young miss, who, although 13 years old, has never had a pair.

Lack Shoes, Blankets.

"My husband and I are greatly in need of shoes and overshoes for the winter. We have no money to buy them as we live on a farm and crops were ruined last summer. There is no work to be had around here. My husband needs size 6 or 7, and I wear 5½ or 6. We'd be grateful for a quilt or blankets, too. MRS. J. H."

As you probably can judge from the letter, this writer does not live in the city. It's most uncomfortable to be without proper shoes during the winter, especially in the country. This family would be grateful for the old shoes you are planning to discard.

Lacks Clothing for Work.

"I am writing for a young man who has had a promise of work but who has no warm clothing. As it is outside work, I wonder if you would try to get some things for him. He needs an overcoat, size 38, underwear, shirts, size 14½, and shoes, size 6. He'd be grateful for a sweater, too. "E. H."

Once we get this young man properly outfitted and he is back at work after his long siege of unemployment, perhaps his troubles will be over. Help him if you can.

Mercolized Wax Keeps Skin Young

DO you know that just beneath that soiled, discolored, faded or aged complexion is one fair to look upon? Nature causes the normal skin to peel off in tiny, unseen, flour-like particles, a little each day, renewing the complexion of youth naturally, but there comes a time when this skin shedding slows up. Worry, overwork, sickness, inactivity are reasons that cause the face to be blotchy, discolored, pimply and old looking. The thing to do, if you wish to look your prettiest at all times, is to assist nature in the process of absorption by using pure Mercolized Wax. Get an ounce at any drug store or beauty counter and use as directed. It gently but surely peels away the outer scarf skin, removing freckles, pimples, blackheads or a muddy complexion. The underneath skin, now in evidence, is clear, pink, fresh and velvety, and the entire face looks years younger. Mercolized Wax brings out the hidden beauty. Powdered Saxolite reduces wrinkles and age signs. Simply dissolve one ounce Saxolite in one-half pint witch hazel and use daily as an astringent. It overcomes oiliness and enlarged pores. It tightens and tones the underlying tissues, improves facial contour and stimulates and refreshes the skin.

Let Left Handed Children Alone, Says Bevans

Crop of Bad Results Ensues When Youngster Is Forced to Change Ways

right. You can see what it does in one obvious way alone—it takes the easy habitual act and makes each step of it a deliberate effort.

The habit paths are such helpful routes because they make it possible for us to stop thinking about certain necessary acts. The left handed child who is forced into right handedness has too much extra conscious work to do. It is not surprising that nervous difficulties arise as well as educational ones.

Forced Change Is Bad.

Now, the following fact should be kept to the fore: Left handedness does not make a child any the less normal, nor is it an indication of lower mental capacity. But trying to change him does almost certainly cause him difficulties that retard his school progress and give that effect. It is when he is let alone that he gets along best.

There are many things that all the world does with two hands so he will not be set apart in every activity, even if he is left handed. And there are a number of conventional things that he will try himself to do with his right hand because it is more socially convenient. If he does these occasional things when he gets older, let him.

Experience and study of behavior have shown that changing a left handed child to right is deleterious. But here is an absolute anatomical fact, if you like such things better. You probably already know that the right lobe of the brain controls the left side of the body, and that the left lobe of the brain controls the right side of the body. But here is a further piece of information which shows how closely speech and handedness are associated: The same side of the brain which controls or determines the handedness also contains the speech center. That is to say, in a right handed person the left lobe does the controlling of the right side and also contains the speech center.

If a child is left handed it is the right lobe of his brain that does the controlling and there is also located his center of speech. So, when you interfere with his individual mechanism and with nature's own special plan just for him—something is going to happen that isn't good for him, in almost every case.

High Prices Paid.

Now, to be as brief as possible. Some left handed children can possibly be changed with little harm. Some, on the contrary, simply can't and won't be changed. And last—there are some who can be changed, but who suffer for it. Here are some of the prices they pay. Stammering, mirror writing, slowness in learning to read, write, think or speak, reversing syllables in spelling, and behavior irregularities, light or serious, such as nervousness, "fidgetiness" and even anti-social actions so-called, such as stealing and playing truant.

Common sense inserts a remark here to the effect that a right handed child may show some of these aspects of behavior. That, of course, is true. But when they occur in the left handed child who is forced, it is well to look for a connection.

Why the Rain Went

By Eleanor Jewett.

Down swept the rain
  In long, thin lines
And raindrops hung
  For detour signs

To lurking sunbeams
  All the way
From sunrise straight
  Around the day.

But one bold sunbeam
  Winked an eye
And dived across
  The rain-swept sky.

The others followed
  Where he led
And soon an arch
  Shone overhead.

In sheer surprise
  The sulky rain
Blinked at the bow—
  And skipped to Spain!

Bright Sayings

Bobby, aged 5, was walking through a cemetery one day, by his mother. He seemed quite absorbed in all the graves. Suddenly he saw a lamb engraved on one of the tombstones.

"Mother," he called, excitedly, "look! Here's where Little Bo Peep was buried!" H. B.

My little boy, aged 4, came home from Sunday school and asked: "Mother, what does create mean?"

I said: "O, it means to make something."

After a little while he said: "Mother, let's go out in the kitchen and create a cake!" A. B.

The workmen had been grading for a new street past the house, and Rex, age 3, had been told to play in the yard and not go out near the place the men were at work. During the day he managed to get out there, and was having a grand time when his mother discovered him.

"Rex, I thought I told you to stay in the yard."

"I is in the yard. They took it all out in the street, so I had to go out there to play in it, didn't I?" A. W.

Farewell, Miss Julie Logan By Sir James M. Barrie

Young Adam Yestreen, Scots Minister, Tells of the Remote Village in Which He Has Come to Live, and of the Strange Spirits That Haunt It in Winter . . . a Delightful Two Part Story by a Modern Master

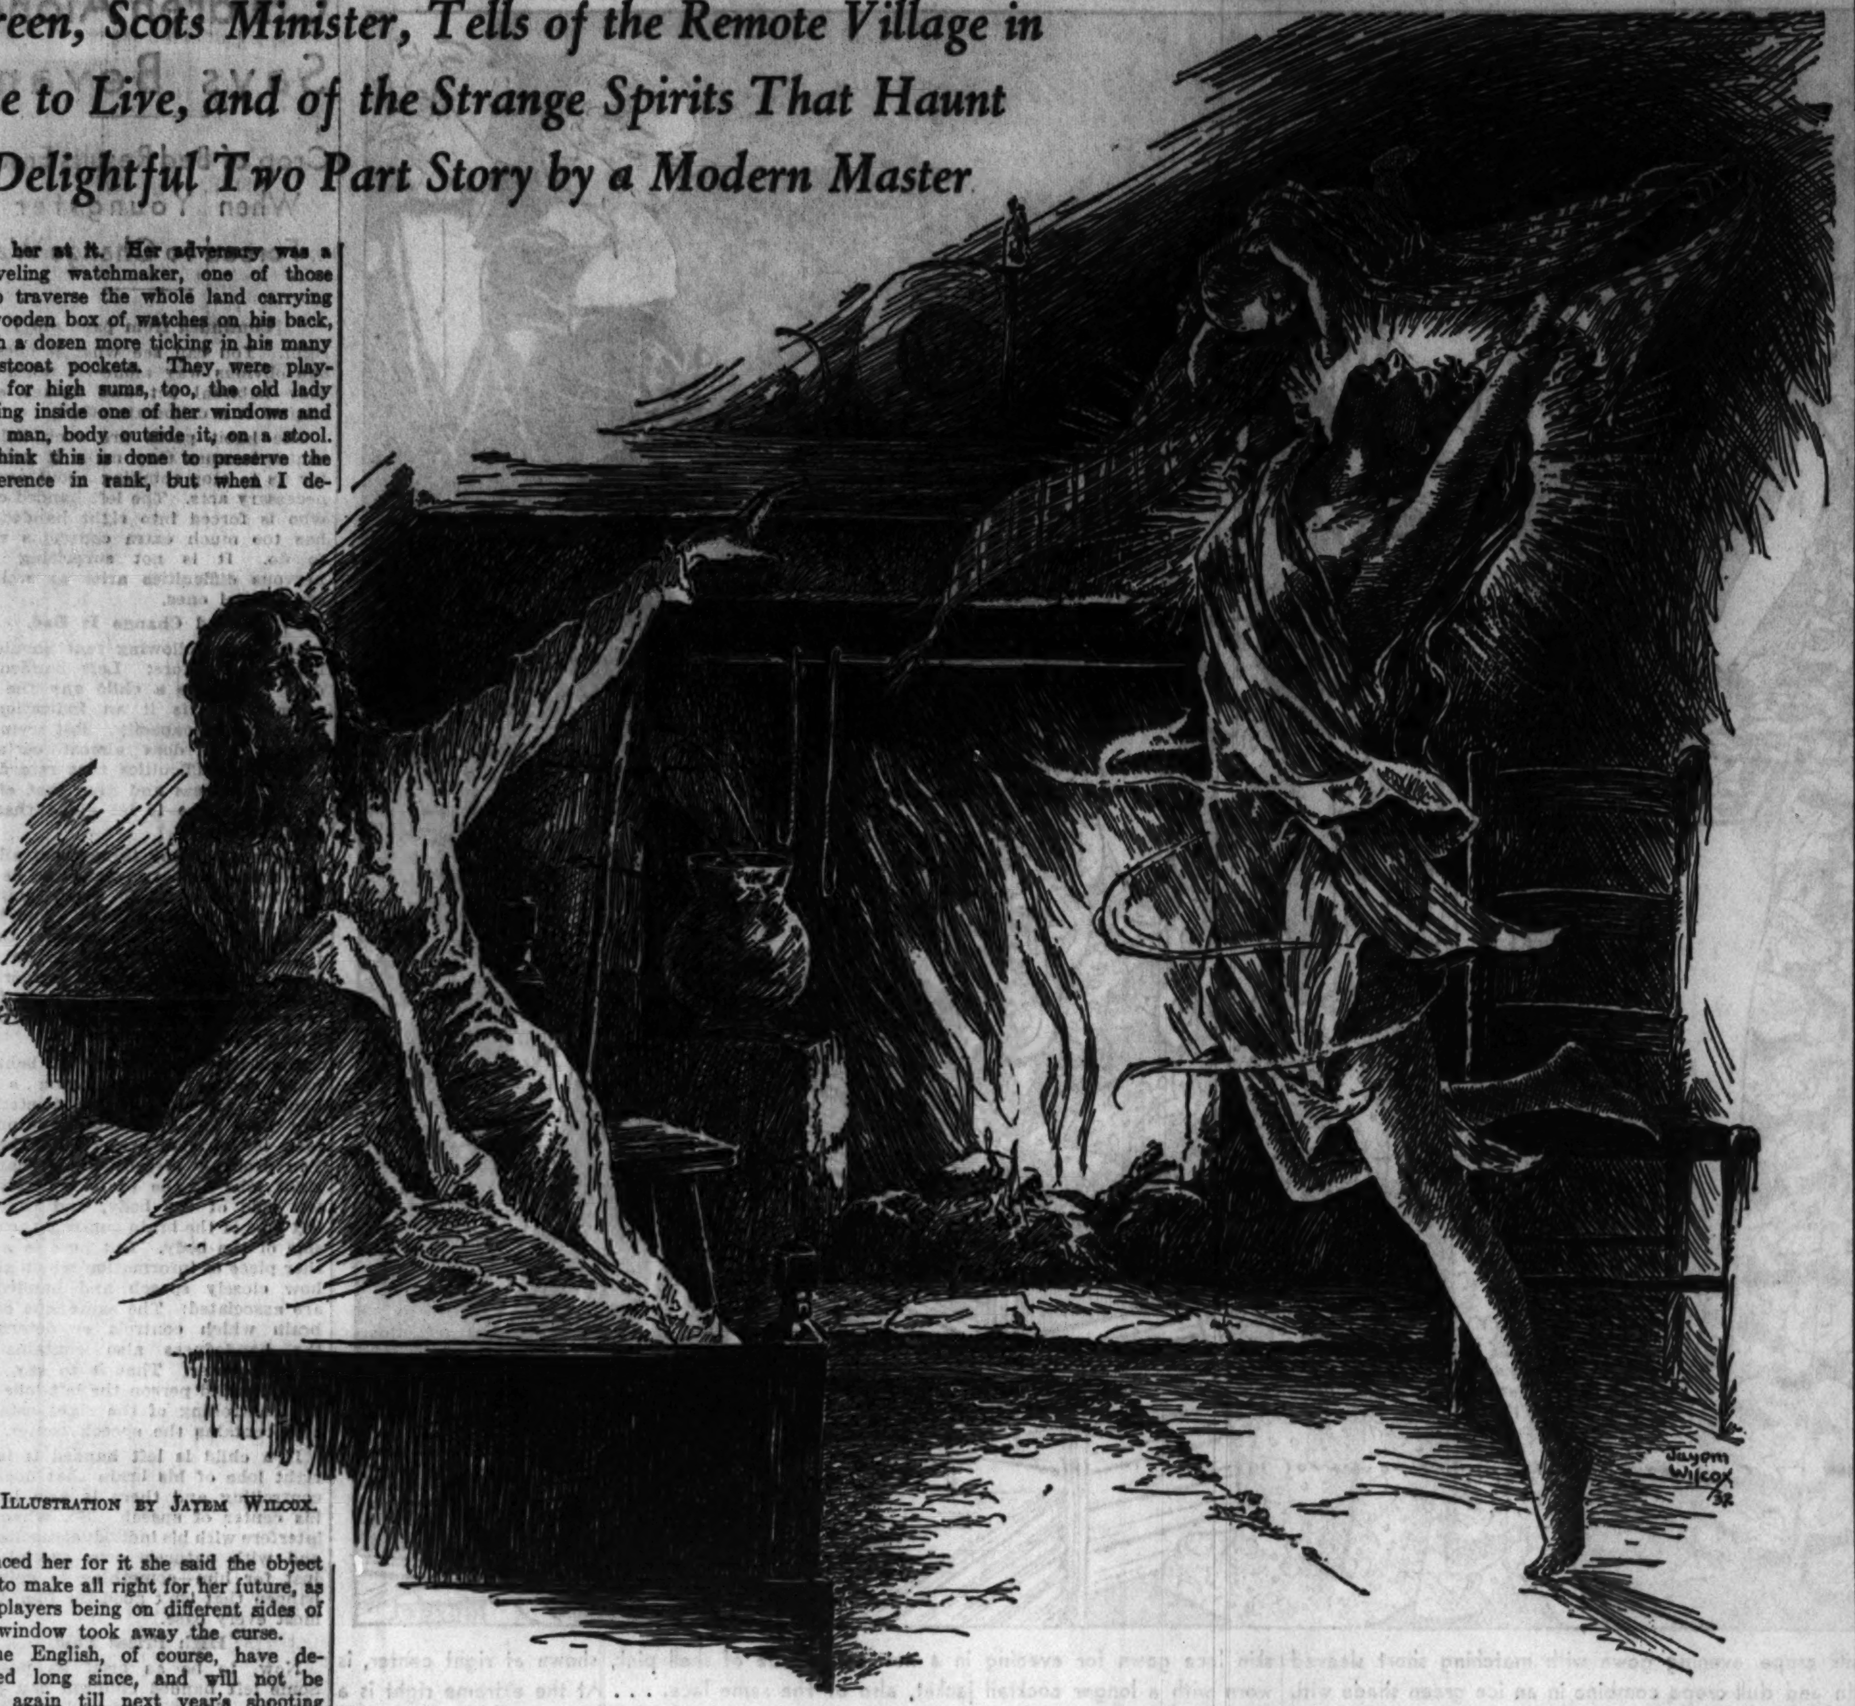

ILLUSTRATION BY JAYEM WILCOX.

"Never," said Joanna, "till the bairn was born, and then for just a short time, when she capered about mad-like with glee, holding it high in the air."

I. The English.

THIS is December 1, 186—; I think it prudent to go no nearer to the date, in case what I am writing should take an ill turn or fall into curious hands. I need not be so guarded about the weather. It is a night of sudden blasts that half an hour ago threw my window at me. They went skirling from room to room, like officers of the law seeking to seize and deliver to justice the venturesome Scots minister who is sitting here ready to impeach all wraiths and warlocks. There was another blast the now. I believe I could rope the winds of the manse to my bidding tonight and, by running from door to door, opening and shutting, become the conductor of a gey sinister orchestra.

I am trying to make a start at the Diary the English have challenged me to write. There is no call to begin tonight, for as yet not a flake has fallen in this my first winter in the glen; and the Diary is to be a record of my life here during the weeks ('tis said, it may be months) in which the glen is "locked," meaning it may be so happit in snow that no one who is in can get out of it, and no one who is out can get in. Then, according to the stories that crawl like mists among our hills, where the English must have picked them up, come forms called the "Strangers." You "go queer" yourself without knowing it and walk and talk with them, thinking they are of your world till maybe they have mischieved you. It is all, of course, superstitious havers, bred of folk who are used to the travail of out of doors and take ill with having to squat by the saut-bucket; but I have promised with a smile to keep my eyes and ears intent for tergiversations among my flock, and to record them for the benefit of the English when they come back next August. Possibly there will be very little snow, for, 'tis said, the white winters sometimes jump a year or two, which must be vexatious to the Strangers.

My name is the Rev. Adam Yestreen; and to be candid I care not for the Adam with its unfortunate associations. I am twenty-six years of age and, though long in the legs, look maybe younger than is seemly in my sacred calling, being clean-shaven without any need to use an implement; indeed I may say I have desisted for two years back. My congregation would naturally have liked me to have a beard.

I took a fair degree at St. Andrews, but my Intellectuals suffered from an addiction to putting away my books and playing on the fiddle. My proper course was to have got rid of that fiddle when I made my entry into the glen, walking for six miles with sinful pride behind three cartloads of furniture, all my own; but I had not the moral strength. When the English discovered how ashamed I was of my old back-sliding with this instrument they had the effrontery to prig with me to give them a tune, but I hope it is unnecessary for me to say that they had to retire discomfited. I have never once performed on the fiddle here, though I may have taken it out of its case nows and nans to fondle the strings.

What I miss, when my unstable mind is on the things of this world, is not so much my own poor performances as not hearing the songs themselves, the more homely Scottish lilts, for of course the old reprehensible songs that kow-tow to the Stewarts find no asylum with me.

Though but half a Highlander, I have the Gaelic sufficiently to be able to preach in it once every Sabbath, as enjoined; but the attendances are small, for there are not so many pure Hielandmen nowadays in the glen.

My manse and kirk are isolated on one side of the burn, but on the other side, so close that I can keep a vigilant eye on them, are the Five Houses in a Row, which the English say, incorrectly but with no evil design, contain all the congregation I can depend upon for a wet day. On the contrary, there is a hantle of small farms in the glen, forbye shepherds' sheilings and bothies, and an occasional roadside bigging of clay and divot in which may be both man and beast; truly, when I chap I seldom know which will come to the door.

THE English, who make use of many old words that even our Highlandmen have forgotten, call the Five Houses the "clachan." They are one-storey houses, white-washed and thacked, and they all open on to the glen road, as if not to miss any diversion that may be passing by. A coarse grass grows on the road in lines as straight as potato drills, and carriage-folk who do not keep the ruts are shaken most terrible. One of the English told me that his machine sometimes threw him so high in the air that when he was up there he saw small lochs hitherto unknown to man, and stopped his horse and fished them. The English, however, who have many virtues, though not of a very solid kind, are great exaggerators.

The carriage-folk, except when she lets what is familiarly called the Grand House to the English, consist of Mistress Lindinnock alone, who is called (but never to her face) the Old Lady. She has two spirited ponies, but not so spirited as herself. She goes to Edinburgh while the Grand House is let, and, excepting myself (on account of my office), is the chief person in the glen. She has been a fine friend to me, but I have sometimes to admonish her for a little coarseness in her language. I grieve to say that this lady of many commendable parts plays cards, and I once saw her at it. Her adversary was a traveling watchmaker, one of those who traverse the whole land carrying a wooden box of watches on his back, with a dozen more ticking in his many waistcoat pockets. They were playing for high sums, too, the old lady sitting inside one of her windows and the man, body outside it, on a stool. I think this is done to preserve the difference in rank, but when I denounced her for it she said the object was to make all right for her future, as the players being on different sides of the window took away the curse.

The English, of course, have departed long since, and will not be seen again till next year's shooting time comes round. On the day they left they came up to the manse to remind me that they were looking forward to the Diary, and when I protested that I did not even know how to begin they said in their audacious way, "You could begin by writing about us." I have taken them at their word, though they little understand that I may have been making a quiet study of them while they thought I was the divert.

AS I say, I have found them to be very pleasant persons, so long as you make allowances for them that one could not be expected to make for his own people. The bright array of their kilts is a pretty bit of colour to us, the trousered people of the glen. They have a happy way of skimming life that has a sort of attraction for deeper but undoubtedly slower natures. The way they riot with their pockets is beyond words; I am credibly informed by Posty that they even have worms sent to them by post in tins. They are easy to exploit for gain, as Posty was quick to see, and many a glass of —— has he, to my grief (for I am a totaller), got from them by referring to himself as "she." I have written that word with a dash because, now I come to think of it, I have never heard it spoken by the glen folk. One might say that it is thus pronounced by them.

They invite you to partake, and you are dull in the uptake if you don't understand of what you are being asked to partake. They make a complete sentence by saying of a friend, "He is one who on a market day," and leaving the rest to the listener's common sense. Similarly they say, "He never unless he is in company," or "He just at a time, because he is lonely-like." Now the English in this matter as in many others are different, and they give the thing its name and boldly say, with pride in knowing the word, Usquebach. In this I hold that they come out of the murky affair with greater honesty but more shamelessly than we do.

They were hospitable to me, and had me up at the Grand House once, giving me the most attractive lady to take in on my arm to dinner, and putting the most pleasing man on the other side of her to make up for me. They are so well meaning that it would have vexed them to know I noticed this, and of course I never let on; but there are few things that escape my observation.

On the Sabbath there were always some of them in the kirk, where they were very kindly to the plate but lazy at turning up the chapters. When they had new arrivals these were always brought to see the shepherds' dogs in the pews; in fact I have decided that the one thing the English know for certain about Scottish religion is that there are shepherds' dogs in the pews.

The English, how quick they are compared to a cautious Scot like myself. He may be far deeper in the fundamentals when there is time to take soundings, but they are so ready. That time I dined with them the talk might be on subjects I was better versed in than any of them, but they would away to another topic before I could steady myself and give utterance.

The man on the other side of the lady I was in charge of made a flattering remark to her about her looking very pretty tonight (they stick at nothing), and said to me across her did I not agree with him. It may just have been a niceness in him to bring me into the talk, a melting quality they have; but to be approached in such a direct manner about a lady's looks before her face threw me off my balance, and all I could reply was that I had not given the subject sufficient consideration to be able to make a definite statement about it. She stooped quickly at that, like one looking for her feet, but on consideration I had a suspicion she was anxious not to let me see her making a mouth, at which they are great adepts; and she will never know now that I can say a neat thing myself if they will give me time.

The thoughtlessness of them is something grievous, but their manners make me wae for my own. When they said good-by to me at the Five Houses, their departure was like a flight of birds. As the poet says, they seemed to take away the sun in their pockets. At the manse I had shown them my study, this room I am now sitting in (with the wind still on the rampage), and especially I drew their attention to the finest plenishing thereof, which is two presses containing theological and classical tomes of great girth, somewhat warped in the binding.

They cried out at this being all the reading I had to carry me through the time when the glen may be locked, and the ladies said that what I needed to distract me pleasantly was not a Diary but a wife. They were at the Five Houses by this time, getting into their machines, and I countered them with "Who would have me?" All the ladies cried out "I will," and made pretense to want to leap from their carriages. Such are this strange race, the English, in their light-heartedness, which on occasions, as in this extraordinary scene, rises to a pitch called by the French abandon.

I daresay they had forgotten all about me before they were out of the glen, and will never have another thought of the Diary; indeed now as I look at my shelves of massive volumes, which were not of my collecting, I wish I had not agreed to call it a Diary, for that is a word of ill-omen in this manse.

II. Some One Who Was with Him.

DEC. 3.—I have read the above over more than once and then hid it away from Christilly, because it is written on sermon paper. Christilly is a most faithful young woman with a face as red and lush as a rasp, who knows her carritches both ways, and has such a reverence for ministers that she looks upon me more as an edifice than a mortal. She has an almost equal pride in herself for being a minister's servant, and walks into the kirk with an official genteelity that some consider offensive. She has also a provoking way of discussing me in my presence as if I was not there, telling visitors the most intimate things about me, such as the food I like but it does not like me, the while she stands in what is meant to be a respectful attitude, neither inside nor outside the door.

My visitors are likely to be few for some time to come, neighbours from the Five Houses whiles, and I hope Mistress Lindinnock and Dr. John from Branders. The smith at the Five Houses is my chief elder, and, as his bairns are innumerable, the family in their two pews are a heartsome sight. A more cautious man in argument I have never known. About as far as he will go is, "I agree with you to a certain extent," or "My answer to that is Yes and No." Posty has a story that he made the second of these answers at his marriage when asked if he took this woman.

Posty is also at the Five Houses. His most valued possession is a velocipede, which has so often come to bits when he was on it that near every man in the glen has been at the repairing of it, including myself, or at least has contributed chains or iron girds. He brings the letters from Branders on this machine, and, as it often runs away with him, we all—dogs, hens, and humans—loup the dyke when we see him bearing down on us. He carries telegrams, too, but there are so few of these, now the English have gone, that when we see him waving one we ask "Who is dead?"

MY great friend is Dr. John, who is sometimes in the glen to succour us, though he lives at Branders, where he sits under Mr. Watery. Branders is an important place of five hundred inhabitants, and stands near a loch, out of which two streams run in opposite directions like parties to a family feud that can no longer be settled with the claymore. Branders is not in the glen, but just at the head of it, and, according to Dr. John, it stopped there because it said to itself, "Those who go farther will fare worse." It is jimply six miles from my manse in summer weather, but seventeen from the nearest railway station and electric telegraph. Dr. John says that whether Branders is the beginning or end of desolation depends on your looking up or down the road.

A gnarled little figure of about fifty is Dr. John, grandly bearded, but for a man of larger size. He wears a plaid in all weathers and sometimes even in the house, for as he says before he has time to wap it off and find it again somebody on a cart horse will be clattering to his door to hurry him to my glen. I have seen him, too, sitting behind on that clattering horse. Repute says that for humane ends he will get through when the glen is locked to all others, though his sole recompense will be a ham at the killing or a kebbock or a keg of that drink I have spelt ——. Though I touch it not, I cannot deny that he partakes as if it were water, and is celebrated (and even condoled with) for never being the worse of it.

If he is in the glen he sometimes puts up his shalt at the Five Houses and stays the night with me, when we have long cracks, the while he smokes his pipe, grunting, which is the Scotch way of bringing out the flavour. Last night was such an occasion, and we got on to the stories about "Strangers," of which he says humorously he has heard many clutters though he has never had the luck to encounter the carls themselves. He maintains that the origin of all the clutters of nowadays was that cankering affair of the '45 which, among its misdeeds, for long gave an ill name to the pipes.

The glen had been a great hiding place of "pretty men" of the period, and among its fearsome crags and caverns, if ancient tales be true, those ill-gettit gentlemen had lurked for months and some of them for years. It is said that forbears of folk still in the glen saw them from below, searching for roots, and so distraught with hunger that they went on searching openly while they were being shot at by the redcoats, who would not face the climb. When the glen was in a blanket of snow and pursuit for a time at an end they sometimes lay at the Grand House, which was loyal to their dark cause, and held secret carouse there.

They were talked of cautiously by the glen folk of those times, who liked best to be of no party unless they were of both, would not betray them to an enemy that hunted them with bloodhounds, yet would hold no intercourse with them willingly, and looked the other way if they came upon one of the gaunt red-shanks unexpectedly, as sometimes happened, carrying braxy mutton or venison to his lurking-place, or a salmon the otters had left by the burn after taking one nip from its neck.

The glen folk were too mouse to call the hunted ones Jacobites. "The Strangers," they said. In the queerest story that has come down to us, they called the heroine "Some One who was with Him." The Him was a fugitive who is believed by the simple to have been the Chevalier himself. He is said to have lain in the glen in July month, fevered and so hard pressed that no friends dared go nigh him lest it led to his capture. I have not seen his hoddy place, but the doctor tells me it is still there and is no more than a lair beneath what we call a bield, a shelter for sheep. Very like it began by being a tod's hole, and was torn bigger with Ogilvy dirks. If it ever existed, the lair has been long filled up with stones, which are all that remain to mark the royal residence.

SHEEP again shelter in the bield, but there were none there in the time of the Prince, if it was he, nor as they say could food be passed to him. In his extremity he was saved by Some One who was with Him. Of course, the legend has it that she was young and fair and of high degree, and that she loved much. She fed him with the unwilling help of the eagles. The Eagles Rock, which is not far from the bield, is a mighty mass, said by the ghillies of today to be unscaleable by man because of what is called the Logan Stone. No eagles build there now; they have fallen to the guns of their modern enemy, the keepers, who swear that one pair of eagles will carry a hundred grouse or more to their nests to feed their young. But at that time there was an eagle's nest on the top of the rock.

The climb is a perilous one, but now and again hardy folk get up as far as the Logan Stone, where they turn back. There are Logan Stones, I am told, throughout the world, and they are rocking stones. It is said they may be seen rocking in the wind, and that they never lose this property though with the centuries they wear small. Such a monster hangs out from our Eagles Rock, and you cannot reach the top save by climbing over it, nor can you get on to the Stone without leaping; and it is as rounded as an egg. Twice men of the glen have leapt and it threw them off.

Nathless, the story is that this Some One who was with Him got through the searchers in the dark, reached the top of the rock by way of the Logan Stone and, after sometimes fighting the parent eagles for possession, brought down young grouse for her lord. By all kind accounts she was a maiden, and in our glen she is remembered by the white heather, which, never seen here till then, is called the marks of her pretty naked feet.

It brought her little luck. In a hurried and maybe bloody flitting she was left behind. Nothing more is recorded of her except that when her master embarked for France he enjoined his Highlanders "to feed her and honour her as she had fed and honoured him." They were faithful though misguided, and I daresay they would have done it if they could. Some think, according to the doctor, that she is in the bield in the hole beneath the stones, still waiting. They say, maybe there was a promise. To what clan she belonged is unknown, but in the glen they think it was probably the one that is a little better than the rest.

III. The Spectrum.

DEC. 3 (contd.).—"I am thinking," Dr. John went on, "that all the daftness about folk of nowadays meeting 'Strangers' when the glen is locked comes out of that troubled past. In a white winter, as you have jaloused yourself, folk hark back by the hearthstones to the forgotten, ay, and the forbidden. But I assure you, despite the whispers, the very name of the '45 is now grass-grown in this glen. Even Posty, though he is sib with the pipes, gets dunder-headed if you press him about what his old ballants mean. Neither good-luck nor mischief, so far as I can discover, comes to the havrels who think they have talked or walked with a Stranger; unless, indeed, as some say, it was one of them who maintered poor Mr. H., and I understand he, being a learned man, always called it a Spectrum."

This set us talking of him of whom I have already hinted that he once kept a Diary in this manse. It was so long ago as to be just a legend even to Dr. John, in the days when there were no seats in my kirk, and all stood on their shanks. Though I say we talked about him we really said very little, unless an occasional furtive glance be speech. All in these parts become furtive when a word, falling as meaningless you would say as a cinder on the hearth, brings the old man to mind.

Mr. H. was a distant predecessor of mine, and a scholar such as the manse is not likely to know again. It was he who collected the library of noble erudition that is in the presses of this room, many of the volumes bound or rebound by his fond hands. His Diary was written on the fly-leaves of a number of them. I believe he thought in Latin and Greek quicker than in his own tongue, for his hurried notes are often in those languages and the more deliberate ones in ours.

I am in a dunce's cap with the Greek, but I can plod along with a Latin dictionary, and entries in the Latin have made me so uneasy that I have torn out the pages and burned them. Mr. Carluke, whom I succeeded, had to confine himself to the English bits, and he treated some of them similarly, for, as he said to me, they were about things that will not do at all. They appear suddenly amidst matter grandly put, as if, you might say, a rat had got at the pages. Minute examination has made me question their being in the same hand-write, though an imitation. This trickery, if such it was, had escaped Carluke's attention.

"YOU mean," Dr. John said to me when I had let him study this queer Diary, which he peered into with a magnifier the size of a thimble that he carries in his waistcoat pocket and is near as much dreaded by malignerers as he is himself, "that it is the hand-write of the Spectrum?" If Dr. John has a failing it is that he hankers too much to tie one down to a statement, and of course I would not accept this interpretation, for I do not believe in Spectrums.

It is not known even by the credulous when, in Mr. H.'s distorted fancy, the Spectrum first came chapping softly at the manse door, and afterwards blattering on it, in a wicked desire to drive him out of the house and take his place. But it was while the glen was locked. According to the stories, sometimes one of them was inside the house and sometimes the other. Sounds were heard, they say, coming from the study, of voices in conflict and blows struck.

The dwellers of that time in the Five Houses, of whom two carlines are still alive, maintained that they had seen Mr. H. sitting on his dyke at night, because the other was in possession. They claimed that they had seen the other also, and that he did not walk. "He padded," they said. By this time no servant would bide in the manse after gloaming, and yet though Mr. H. was now the one chapping at the door they said they could see a light being carried in the house from room to room.

"When they found him, according to the stories," the doctor said, "his face was in an awful mess."

What had caused that? I asked, and he said shortly that he supposed spectrums had teeth.

It was eerie to reflect that to those two carlines, as we call ancient women, my study must still be more his than mine, and that they would not have been taken aback if they had come into it at that moment and found him in this chair instead of me. We tried to get on to more comfortable subjects, but it was as if the scholar's story would not leave the room.

"I feel as if there were three of us here tonight," I said to the doctor.

"Ay," said he, "and a fourth keeking in at the window."

As usual our sitting ended with Christilly coming in to announce that she gave us ten minutes before she carried away the lamp. She also mentioned, as a matter of smaller importance, that it was snowing.

IV. The Locking of the Glen.

DEC. 19.—In this white world the dreariest moment is when custom makes you wind up your watch. Were it not for the Sabbath I would get lost in my dates. Not a word has gone into my Diary for a fortnight. Now would be the time if there were anything to chronicle, but nothing happens, unless one counts as events that I have brought my hens, whose toes I found frozen to the perch, and my two sheep into the manse, or that yesterday my garden slithered off to the burn with me on it like a passenger. I have sat down whiles to the Diary to try to fill up with old matter, but the whiteness of the sheets gives me a scunner, and I put it away. The snow has choked my Diary as well as the glen.

The glen road, on which our intercourse with ourselves as well as with the world so largely depends, was among the first to disappear under the blanket. White hillocks, which we have been unacquainted with in any color, are here and there, and dangerous, too, for they wobble as though some great beast beneath were trying to turn round. The mountains are so rounded that they have ceased to be landmarks. The farm-towns look to me to be smored. I pull down my blinds so that I may rest my eyes on my blues and reds indoors. Though the Five Houses are barely a hundred yards away I have to pick out signs of life with my spyglass.

I am practically cut off from my kind. Even the few trees are bearing white ropes, thick as my wrist, instead of branches, and the only thing that is a bonny black is the burn, once a mere driblet but now deep and boastful, and unchancey to cross. At ordinary times they cross here to the kirk in two easy jumps on boulders placed there for the purpose, and called the brig, but the boulders are now like sunk boats, and, of the sprinkling of members who reached the kirk on the 9th, one used a vaulting pole and lost it.

Last Sabbath I did not open the kirk, but got down to the burn and preached to a handful standing on the other side. My heart rose with pride in the smith's bairns, every one of whom was there; but I have cried a notice across the burn that next Sabbath the bell will ring as a solemn reminder, but the service will be in the smiddy, whether I find that man's pole or not.

Two or three times Posty, without his velocipede, has penetrated to Branders and delivered my letters and a newspaper to me by casting them over the burn tied to stones. There is no word of Dr. John. For nearly a week, except for an occasional shout, I have heard no voice but Christilly's. It is a treat to me now, though formerly when I had company an irritation, to see her friendly foot keeping the study door open. I sit up here reading and nodding, or I go out and shovel, though all I shovel away, and more, may be back by morning.

Of an evening Posty sometimes struts up and down in front of the Five Houses, playing on his pipes. I can just see him passing and repassing the glints of light like a pendulum. But I can hear him from the manse, and still better from the burnside, if I slip down and listen in the dark. On one of those nights I got a dirl in the breast of me. It was when I went back to the manse after hearing him finish with a merely amusing piece, "My Name It Is Little Jock Elliott." The glen was in silence now, but as I opened the manse door I heard my fiddle playing, "My Name It Is Little Jock Elliott." For a moment I thought that Christilly—but then I knew she must be bedded, and she has no ear, and it was grander playing than Posty's, though he is a kittle hand. I suppose I did not stand still in my darkened passage for more than half a minute, and when I struck a match to get at a candle the music stopped.

There is no denying that the stories about the Spectrum flitted through me, and it needed a shove from myself to take me up the stair. Of course there was nobody. I had come back with the tune in my ears, or it was caused by some vibration in the air. I found my fiddle in the locked press just as I had left it, except that it must have been leaning against the door, for it fell into my arms as I opened the press, and I had the queer notion that it clung to me. I could not compose myself till I had gone through my manse with the candle, and even after that I let my fiddle sleep with me.

MORE reasonable thoughts came to me in the morning, as that it might be hard on an instrument never to be let do the one thing it can do, and that maybe like the fiddlers they have a swelling to cry out to rivals, "I can do better than that." Any enticement I may have felt to take advantage of this fancy and put the neck-rest beneath my chin again I suppressed, but I let Posty know he could have the loan of my instrument on condition that he got it across the burn dry.

By the smith's connivance this was accomplished in a cart. It is now my fiddle Posty plays instead of his pipes, which are not in much better condition than his velocipede and are repaired in a similar manner. I extracted just one promise from him, that he would abstain from the baneful Jacobite lilts he was so fond of, but he sometimes forgets or excuses himself across the burn by crying, "She likes them fine, and she is ill to control once she's off." It is pretty to hear him in the gloaming, letting the songs loose like pigeons.

I will now go and say good-night to the Old Lady, for though it is barely 9 o'clock we keep early hours in the snow. This is a moment I owe to her ingenuity. The Grand House, which has, of course, a statelier name of its own, is a steep climb from here and is at present inaccessible, but it is visible and at 9 o'clock she shoots her blind up and down twice, and I reply with mine. Hers, I am thankful to say, is red, or the lamp behind it has a red shade, and this shooting of the blinds is our way of saying good-night. There is a warmth about it when the glen is so still that I am thinking you could hear a whit-rit on the move. Sometimes I stand by my window long after hers is dark, and I have felt that night was waiting, as it must have done once, for the first day. It is the stillness that is so terrible. If only something would crack the stillness.

V. A Stranger.

DEC. 21.—For the first time since the glen was locked Dr. John "threw in," as we say, this morning. He came straight to the study, where he found us at family exercise. I did not look up from my knees, but Christilly whispered to me, "Be short," which I daresay made me in consequence a little longer. Yet I knew she would not have taken such a liberty unless there was something untoward with the man, and though I found when I rose that he was on his knees with us, I saw that he had gone to sleep on them.

His face was so peaked that I sent Christilly hurriedly for the bottle of brandy that has lain in the manse uncorked since I came here six months ago, and as soon as he had partaken she hauled off his boots and rushed him into the lobby to scrape him, for he was getting on to the carpet. I saw he wanted to be rid of her before communicating something by-ordinar to me, and he took the best way to effect this by saying in a sentence that he had got through to Joanna Minch and it was a girl and both were doing well; whereupon Christilly was off to cry the tidings across the burn.

He was nodding in his chair with fatigue, so that it looked as if only by sudden jerks could he keep his head on, but he brought out the words, "There is more in it than I told Christilly. I have been to the shieling but I did not get through in time. There were two lives saved in that bit house in the small hours, but don't be congratulating me for I had naught to do with it." Having said this he fell into a torpor, and I had ill rousing him, which I sweer to do but he had made it plain that he wanted to say more.

"It's such a camsterie tale," he said, "as might banish sleep in any man, but I am dog-tired and unless you keep pulling my beard with all the strength that is in you we'll never come to the end of it." I may say here that I had to do as he instructed me several times. We must have looked a strange pair, the doctor yawning and going off as if for the winter months, while I tugged fiercely at the beard.

I will put his bewildering tale together as best I can. He had forced his way last evening to an outlying farm, where a herd was lying with two broken legs. While he was there Fargie

Shops Are Displaying a Colorful Array of Chairs, Tables and Settees for Warm Days

Rattan, Stick Reed, Peeled Reed and Wicker Fashion the Latest Styles.

By Edith Weigle.

IT'S going to be a gay and colorful summer if one may judge by the display of porch, terrace, and garden furniture the shops are putting on just now. Walking down some of the aisles flanked by huge umbrellas cocked at a jaunty angle over painted tables and chairs is like standing knee deep in June. Circular reed tables with scarlet tops call loudly for tall glasses of iced tea with a sprig of mint in them, and canvas deck chairs seem made for lounging after a game of tennis on a warm afternoon.

Everything is as practical as it is good looking, too. Almost all the chair seats have cushions covered in a weatherproof, sunfast material, and tables with black onyxlike tops and tubular steel supports defy the elements.

Fabrics in solid colors seem more popular than ones carrying floral designs. Plaids, too, are very good, and glazed chintz and even calico dress up otherwise quiet furniture.

The chaise longue that may be wheeled about the garden is as much a favorite this year as last, and no wonder, for it is such a convenience and it is upholstered with that amusing tubular cushion that reminds one of a life preserver and is awfully comfortable. Designed for the lawn is that white, extremely simple wooden furniture made of broad slats that is as inexpensive as it is attractive. You can get chairs and settee in this group.

Then there is that kind of furniture ideal for a log cabin, or a cottage in the woods that is made exactly like that used by the early settlers of Canada, the habitants. It has a great appeal if you like anything absolutely rustic.

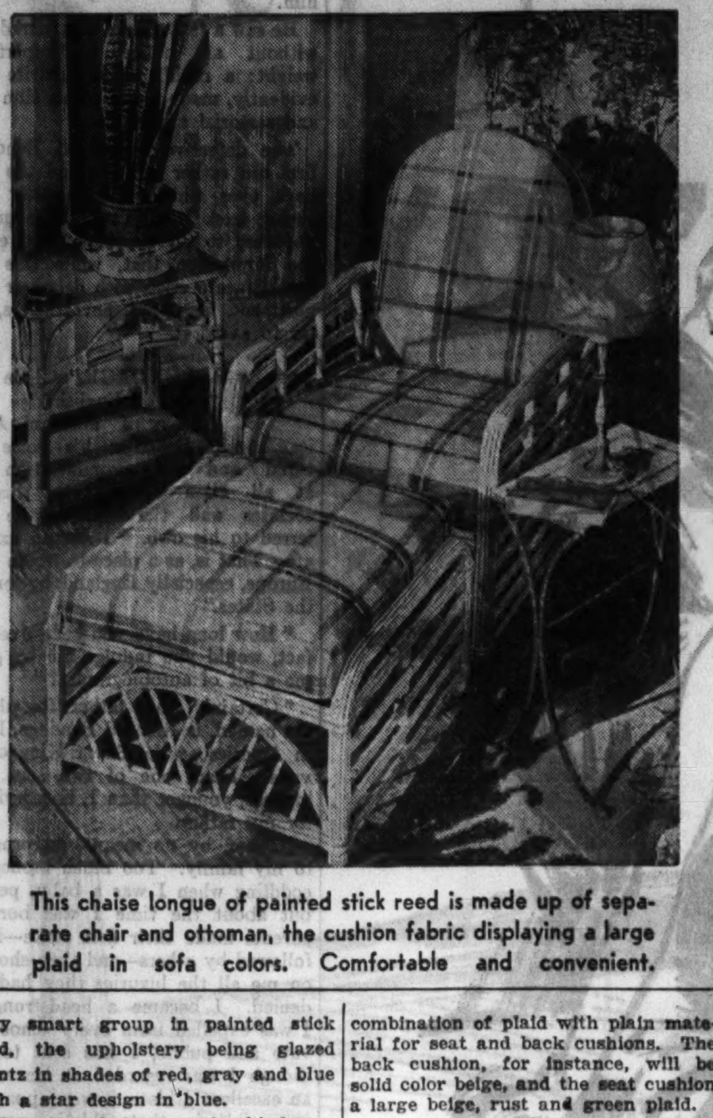
Gayly informal is a porch set of rattan stained walnut color and made along French Provincial lines, just the thing for the early American or the little French cottage. And keeping the bicentennial year in mind, this same manufacturer has made a very smart group in painted stick reed, the upholstery being glazed chintz in shades of red, gray and blue with a star design in blue.



This chaise longue of painted stick reed is made up of separate chair and ottoman, the cushion fabric displaying a large plaid in sofa colors. Comfortable and convenient.

The arm chairs are the kind you like to spend a long afternoon in, for the spring cushions are most comfortable. Each arm has a drop leaf, too, that may be lifted to hold books and smoking accessories. A low, circular gray stick reed table with a bright top accompanies the chairs of this group of extremely decorative furniture.

Following the fashion for white in home furnishings is another porch set of stick reed painted pure white and built along modern, square lines. Springy, luxurious cushions are of rust colored material that is much like leather but that is impervious to rain and sun. This is bound in white. A low, very smart little table is white to match the chairs and has a top of the same color as the chair cushions.

Natural color rattan summer furniture is made doubly attractive by the combination of plaid with plain material for seat and back cushions. The back cushion, for instance, will be solid color beige, and the seat cushion a large beige, rust and green plaid.

Made in China and with a delightful tropical flavor are the many pieces in peeled reed: long, low chaise longues; round topped tables, arm chairs and side chairs. None of the chairs have cushions. These can be added to follow individual color schemes, or the chairs may be used as they are, without any. Often the natural white of the peeled reed is relieved by touches of apple green or black reed woven into the piece for decoration.

One great advantage of this furniture is that it is so light in weight that it may easily be moved from one part of the lawn or porch to another. It is sturdy and practical, too, and will stand hard wear. And—it is remarkably low in price. In fact, the values are astounding.

We saw one very French looking little wicker set that would be entirely at home in the most sophisticated surroundings. The colors were light goldy-beige and black.

Hickory furniture will always be favored for places where youngsters are, for you can kick it and scuff it and knock it about and it never shows the strain. This season it comes with cushions made of rag carpeting in pretty light colors, a most appropriate material. Or you can get it upholstered in heavy scenic patterned linen or cretonne.

The pictures today show a large and small group of summer furniture. The large group is composed of chairs and table and fernery of natural color rattan. The chair seats are braided and may be used with cushions or not, as you prefer. In the background is one of those large, artistic chairs that make you think of the tropics and that always serve admirably to frame a pretty woman.

The other picture shows a very smart chaise longue for the porch, terrace, or sun room. Made of stick reed, it is composed of separate ottoman and chair, each having a comfortable spring cushion covered in a plaid fabric of soft pastel colors, beige predominating. A small iron table with tile top is placed next the chair to hold a book and a lamp, and in the background is the table designed to accompany this stick reed furniture. It has a convenient lower shelf, as well as a broad top surface, and is one of those handy pieces that is a joy to own.

Veneers Bring Out the Choicest Grains

DID you know that only by veneering can the choicest grain of furniture wood be obtained? It has long been recognized that the most beautiful wood was used by cabinetmakers in the form of veneer. This process dates far back into history, so far that it is not known when it was first employed. The workers of the Italian renaissance used it, and during the 17th century it was in common use in England.

Some of the best cabinet pieces in existence were made with veneered surfaces, because a more symmetrical pattern could thus be achieved with the grain. During the war and since so many improvements have been made in veneers that they are now considered as long lived and even more impervious to age than the solid

One Bedroom Is Used as Both Study and Guestroom in This New House

By WillElla de Campi.

SEPARATING the sleeping quarters from the pine panelled living room of the charming little house described last Sunday is a tiny entrance hall. This is just big enough to accommodate a narrow console table with a colonial wall mirror hanging above it. Opposite a wide doorway opening into the living room is a door which leads into the bedroom hall. This arrangement makes the bathroom easily accessible without necessitating passage through either bedroom.

Each room has three steel casement windows with two exposures so that plenty of sunlight and cross ventilation are assured. The front room, which measures 10x16 feet, serves as a combination study and guest room. Walls here are painted a soft gray-green and the woodwork is in a slightly deeper tone of the same. Glass curtains of string colored filet net match those in the living room, so that the front windows from outside present the same appearance. Draperies reaching to the floor are of plain copper colored glazed chintz, finished with an ivory and green edging.

At one side of the room is a studio couch, upholstered in copper colored rep. Boxed cushions to match stand against the wall. This couch may be opened out to double-bed width when there are overnight guests in the house. A drop leaf table of maple, standing at one end of the couch, holds a brass lamp with a natural colored parchment shade banded in green and copper. Current magazines and books find their place here, too. A small table to hold smoking accessories stands at the other end of the couch.

Between two windows is a kneehole desk with a colonial mirror above. This serves as a dressing table when occasion demands. Drawers at one side afford storage space for writing equipment, etc., while those at the other side are kept clear for the disposition of toilet accessories and clothing belonging to any visitors. On the desk are a good looking green leather desk set, and a green and gold tôle lamp with shade to match. A maple arm chair in Windsor style is used in conjunction.

This corner of the guest room shows a comfortable reading group made up of armchair with matching ottoman, and table.

Between two windows is a small scaled secretary desk, flanked by a pair of ladder back chairs with chintz seat pads. A simple chiffoniere, an armchair done in chintz with floral clusters on a yellow ground, and a convenient small table complete the furnishings. The same color scheme is carried out in the bathroom.

This Two Story House Has Lots Fine Features

Planned for 50 Foot Lot; 2 Bedrooms and Porch Overlook Flower Plot.

(Proofs of floor plans of this house, together with basement layout, may be secured by sending stamped, addressed envelope to Louise Bargelt, Home Builders' Editor, The Chicago Sunday Tribune.)

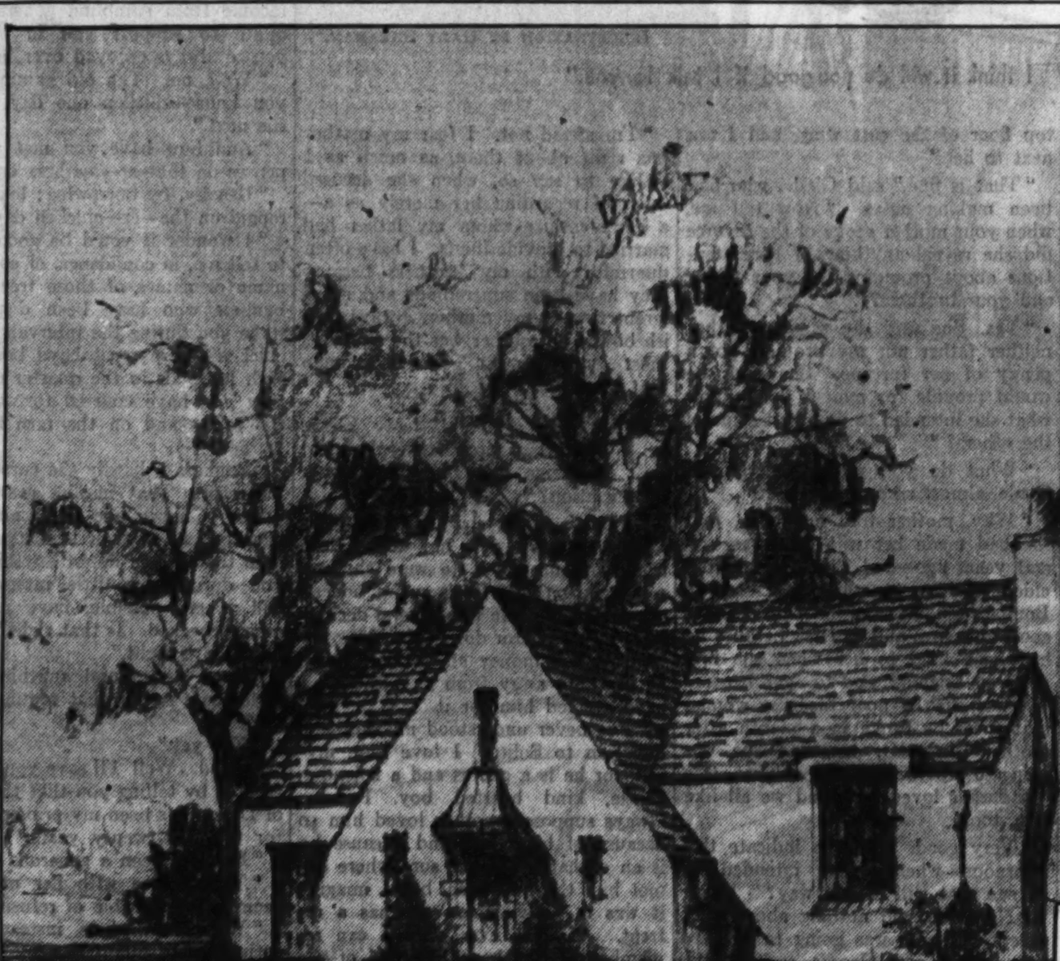
By Louise Bargelt.

A RATHER amazing revelation—this little two story "garden" home—when you look within and see all the comforts and conveniences, all the beauty and joy which may be purchased today for some five thousand dollars!

It has two floors, though a glimpse at the perspective suggests only one story. This is because it is in truth a "garden dwelling," and the two sizeable bedrooms and screened porch above overlook the terrace and garden in the back.

Designed for a fifty foot lot, or better said, so designed that it may be placed on a fifty foot lot—though it would show to better advantage with a little more space on each side—its exterior walls are of whitewashed brick and its roof of dark slate. An effectively rugged material, slate, one of the oldest roofing materials and one of the most satisfying. From early times men have roofed their homes with this natural product of nature and slate roofs, laid hundreds of years ago, may still be seen.

The house is designed by James J. Gathercoal, Wilmette, Ill. Its cubage is 19,955 cubic feet and the cost of its construction approximately $5,725.



Many points of interest to the 1932 home builder has this low lying five room English house, with its two stories, its conventional basement, its attached garage, screened second floor sleeping porch, and two upper chambers given private dressing rooms all their own. A lavatory on the first floor, vapor heat, and concealed radition are also included. This little house may be built at an estimated cost of $5,725.00. It was designed by James J. Gathercoal, Wilmette, Ill.

Many Fine Features.

There is much to be said, indeed, for this low lying brick residence. First we might mention the attached motor room at the left, 9x18 feet, which is reached from a small rear service hall. Again there is a conventional basement, not excavated under the entire house, but large enough to contain a game room, 16x15 feet, a laundry and boiler room, 15x15 feet, a coal room and a storage closet.

In the house proper we find closets in abundance, a lavatory on the first floor, two large dressing rooms connected with each of the upper bedrooms and a large screen porch with canvas roof. All these modern comforts incorporated into this five room house with bath!

As for the planning, present day objectives have been carefully considered in due relation to the amount of money to be spent. We find health regarded in the good circulation through the cross ventilation and the sunlight possible in all the rooms. Easy access between rooms is seen. By this is meant there is a short distance from the kitchen to the front door and easy communication between all the downstairs rooms. The bathroom on the second floor is not only well located, but is unusually large for such a comparatively small house.

Convenient Arrangement.

At the right in front is the living room, 15x18 feet, with natural wood or coal burning fireplace, oak floor and walls of textured plaster. Beyond this is the dining room, 11.6x13.6. A conventional dining room for those not converted to the modern dinette or combination living room-dining room ideal! And still beyond this one reaches an outside terrace porch, 11x14 feet. A happy arrangement this always is, establishing immediate intimacy between the house interior and the great out of doors.

Here is an opportune moment to comment on the most desirable frontage for this particular house. It may face east or west or north; any direction, in fact, except south. This latter frontage would not be desirable as the bedrooms and screened porch, as well as the dining room and kitchen all have large window areas overlooking the rear terrace and garden.

Two Bedrooms.

On the second floor stairs from below lead to a central hall, with a large broom closet. From this hall open two bedrooms, the master bedroom, 16 feet by 12 feet, and the second room, 9 feet by 12 feet. Both chambers have a large dressing room with outside window and a built-in wardrobe. Beyond the bedroom is the aforementioned sleeping porch with canvas roof, 13 feet by 13 feet 6 inches.

The heat suggested for the house is vapor with concealed radiation. The bath has a tiled floor and wainscot with washable wall covering above.

One interesting feature of this house to all owners who are interested in fire resistive construction is the use of reinforced brick masonry floor slabs for the first floor. Such a floor provides a shut off for all fires that may originate in the basement and is, moreover, structurally safe and vermin proof. Besides this one can secure artistic effects through the use of bricks of various colors and textures.

The design of a reinforced brick masonry floor is much the same in principle as that for reinforced concrete. Reinforcing rods of suitable diameters and spacing are introduced into the vertical mortar joints between adjacent brick. These serve to take the bending, and the brickwork itself takes the compressive thrusts.

If a finished floor of wood is desired, then there is introduced into the brick masonry at proper intervals suitable nailing strips, wood plugs or other such devices. If a linoleum floor is to be applied, there is trowelled over the top surface of the floor slab a thin cement grout properly leveled off, and the linoleum is directly glued thereto.

Again one may use colored face brick laid in colored mortar and effective pattern. After the floor and pattern has been completed the entire top surface is "surfaced" with a terrazzo finishing machine and then filled and waxed. Periodical waxing as time goes on will maintain the beauty and wearing qualities of this unusual floor.

Aid to Fire Prevention.

These reinforced brick masonry floors are practically the same in cost, it is claimed, as a wood floor which is given a varnished hard wood finish. And in giving to the house such a sturdy, fire resistive floor one has taken one step further towards the end desired by every one—that of making our homes entirely safe from the dread enemy—fire.

Fires have a devastating tendency to climb. If one hasn't a fire safe first floor in the house one can at least cover the cellar ceiling with a fire resisting material. Metal lath covered with good gypsum or cement plaster furnishes a fine protective covering and so do approved, noncombustible sheeting boards if they are so applied that there are no openings to permit the entrance of flames into concealed wall or floor spaces.

The second floor of this house deserves especial note because of two outstanding features. One of these is the sleeping porch, which shows signs of coming back into favor. This porch has been conveniently placed at the back so that it is not visible from the front view. And so completely a part of the building program is it that there is no chance of its marring the house appearance, which too often has happened in the past when such an appendage was added as a mere after thought and placed wherever the owner thought would be most convenient for his use.

Naturally, this room should connect with the bedroom of the person or persons who will use it most. Or an entrance to it from the hall is always practical. If the owner did not wish to fit this porch up for sleeping purposes he could use it for a children's play room during the warm weather months, and by glazing it, could use it for auxiliary bedroom or play room all seasons.

Dressing Rooms.

Another point of interest to this second floor is the dressing room which each bedroom boasts. This dressing room gives one a cozy, warm spot to prepare to retire in at night, even though the bedrooms have grown cold during the evening, and also the same comfort in the morning before the house gets warm. [Not forgetting that it is entirely possible with oil or gas heat or with heat regulator and coal as fuel to have our bedrooms warm when we arise! Still, not all of us have achieved these modern utilities, and are still descending "to fire" in the early morning hours.]

In lighting this home, as any other, one should consider the effects that the fixtures will produce, no matter though they may be very simple fixtures indeed. Soothing atmosphere is created and rested nerves result from modern installations where the effects are soft and the fixtures themselves blend with the general decorating scheme. Avoid the gaudy, blatant fixture which shrieks out at you as soon as you enter the room. There are many, many styles of fixtures available with bulbs set in pockets that are delicate and neutral in tone. Your dollar goes a long way today, in lighting equipment as in everything else; but though you may have only a few dollars, comparatively speaking, to spend, you want to get the prettiest and the most desirable that you posibly can.

Way to Cut Expense.

Relative to costs, it may be said that this house can be built for a little less by substituting a shingle or siding exterior for the brick and a wood shingle roof for the slate. In this way three or four hundred dollars may be saved in the construction expense.

Not for generations alone, but for centuries as well, wood has been employed in various parts of the world and has shown evidences of long endurance. Building with wood, which is not difficult to work or to handle, is an economical method and there are various small precautions which may be taken to add to the durability of wood and to keep its maintenance costs low.

Brief ways which the prospective home owner should familiarize himself with and make sure that they are employed during purchase of materials and process of construction are as follows: All exposed woods needs a preservative and stain, timber should be well seasoned and of those woods which years of testing have proven to be greatly enduring, and careful ventilation of shut in wood to keep it from rotting. Furthermore, it almost goes without saying, dry masonry foundations should keep all wood above the ground level.

There are many types of less expensive shingle roofing to choose from and each year they appear in handsomer colors than ever before. Given creosote stains, wood shingles preserve their color for a considerable length of time and perform their allotted purpose in life faithfully and well. While it may be true, aesthetically considered, that consideration of costs should come last in the selection of a roof for one's home, the fact remains that the cost question looms high and prominent in the building of the average moderate sized home.

If a man has only one hundred and fifty dollars to spend for a roof it is folly to consider spending four hundred dollars, and so it goes. There are also numerous excellent artificial or composition shingles on the market. Indeed, there is a vast choice of good inexpensive roofing material to consider with a frame or masonry house. The prospective home owner may learn of these from his architect or builder, who knowing the extent of his purse, can suggest materials suited to his house, his taste—and his pocketbook.

Why Walls Crack.

From time to time many queries come into this department about the cracking of walls and ceilings.

"Why do my walls crack?" "What on earth causes my ceiling to split open?"

There are numerous reasons for this, but most of them may be traced to wrong use of materials, or to the skimping of materials in the process of construction. Just as you can take the choicest velvet and make it into an ill fitting hodgepodge of a dress, with seams splitting and eblows breaking out, so you can take the best materials on the market and put them together so that they fail to give satisfaction.

A small book could be written on the possible causes of cracks. The concrete may contain dirty gravel, or it may not have enough cement, the plaster may be too thin, the lath placed too close together, the plaster may be laid on lath that is too dry, or metal reënforcement omitted in plaster at corners.

Again, the floor joists may not be bridged, or they may be too high; the supporting posts may be too small, the footings too narrow to take the loads they must carry, and the posts in the basement not given sufficient footings. Frequently wood walls are not framed with a view toward equalizing their shrinkage, and their braces are omitted. Indeed, there are various authorities which quote as high as fifty or more reasons for plaster cracks, none of these the cause of any particular needed economy, but the result of Jerry builders who either don't care what happens to your house, or don't know how to prevent their mistakes. But still another reason: plaster cracks because good, honest, experienced men have not been employed in the designing and the building of your house—men with a reputation to maintain and to live up to.

Avoid Too Low Prices.

Your house may only cost you $5,000 according to present prices, but it wants to be a worthy, sturdy little house just the same, a house that will stand up under the test of the years, meet the emergency as a salable asset if the emergency should arise, and supply you in the meantime with those things needed to make living in it happy, comfortable and pleasant.

The Death of the Duchess

by COSMO HAMILTON & SIDNEY SUTHERLAND

What Has Gone Before?

At a house party at Weir castle the duchess of Devon, American-born heiress, startled her husband, her two sons, her daughter, and her guests by telling them she is about to seek a divorce from the duke, known as "Beauty," and then telling each one, with the exception of her daughter and two guests, why she despises them. She walks into the garden alone. When the guests and family assemble for dinner, her grace fails to appear. A half hour after the dinner hour the butler dashes in to announce that the duchess' lifeless body has been found in the castle grounds. The police are sent for, and Inspector Glade of Scotland Yard takes charge of the case when it is indicated that the duchess has been murdered. The police question the duke and his guests. Enid Forbes, who returned to London about the time of the murder, is ordered back to the castle for questioning. Inspector Glade begins the examination.

INSTALLMENT V.

"Beyond That Door."

ENID realized that she'd better tell the truth, or at least some of it. This fellow seemed to be trying to trap her. After all, the truth didn't always hurt.

"O, yes, I forgot," she said brightly, smiling at Glade. "After I reached the outskirts of London I became so furious over what had happened that I decided to do something about it. I stopped at a little chemist's shop in Tottenham and tried to get the duchess on the phone out here. Josette answered and said she was still out in the grounds somewhere, and that a frightful storm was raging.

"I thought it over and figured that if she had been caught out in the storm she'd take refuge in the bathing pavilion or in the summer study. So I decided to drive back and have it out with her. Frankly I didn't have the courage, so I went next door to a public house—it's called the Boar's Head—and drank several brandies. When I'd screwed up enough courage to see me through I returned to the chemist's shop to get my car, and——"

"Did you purchase anything from the chemist?"

"No. I told you I stopped there to use the telephone, and walked next door to the inn. My car was still in front of the pharmacy."

"I understand. But did you make any purchases there? You know, it will be a simple matter to check on that, but you can save me time and trouble by saying so if you did."

"I never entered the place again, I tell you. I got in my car and drove back here through the downpour."

"Were the outer gates open?"

"Yes. I was surprised, but I fancied the lodgekeeper hadn't wanted to go out in the rain and close them. So I drove right through and came on up the drive."

"Why didn't you stop at the pavilion if you thought the duchess might have run in there out of the storm?"

"I did intend to stop there, but as I drove around it the headlights shone up the road a ways and I thought I saw some one in white—the duchess had had on a white dress—standing beneath one of the beeches, about half way between the pavilion and the castle. So I went on up there; it was she leaning against a tree, soaking wet and weeping. I could see her dimly in the edge of my lights."

"Then what happened?"

"She didn't look up as I stopped the car, so I got out, turned off the lights, and walked over to her. She lifted her head when she heard me, but she didn't recognize me in the dark."

"How do you know she didn't?"

"Because when I reached her she said something I thought was funny."

Glade leaned tensely across the table. "What did she say?" he asked eagerly.

"I couldn't hear very well exactly what she said because of the thunder and the wind in the branches. But it sounded as if she said: 'O, for God's sake, are you back again? I wouldn't let you have it all this time, and you come out here in this storm to talk about such a thing.'"

"Miss Forbes," the detective succeeded in concealing his intense interest and spoke casually, "have you any idea what the duchess meant by that?"

"No. I supposed she was raving, and I proceeded to say what was on my mind. She seemed startled when she heard my voice—we could only see each other vaguely in the lightning flashes—but she didn't interrupt me. I suppose I spoke pretty freely to her. When I finished she merely said, 'All right, Enid. Now please go on back to the castle.' Evidently she hadn't heard that I'd gone into town earlier."

"What happened next?"

"She seemed to be quite ill, but at that minute I didn't care about that. I had said what I had to say, so I got back in my car, turned it around—I didn't want to drive up past the lighted house—and returned to London."

"Did you see anybody else in the grounds?"

ENID hesitated, and the inspector watched her keenly. She puckered her lips and then spoke:

"No. I can't say I did. I did think, or rather I felt while I was talking to her that there was somebody nearby in the darkness. Still, I imagine if there had been I'd have seen them in the lightning. It made everything pretty light, but it didn't last long enough to really see anything, and it sort of left you blinded, at that.

"No, I saw nobody. I can't explain it, though, but I had an eerie feeling at the time that we were not alone. In fact, when you hinted that you knew I'd been out on the driveway after the storm broke, I surmised that the duchess had told you, or that this mysterious person, if there was anybody there, had told you."

"What did you do after you got back to town?"

"Why, I was pretty upset by the whole affair. A lot of my plans seemed to be going wrong. I went to the Embassy club, but nobody interesting was around, so I went on to the flat of a friend of mine named Pamela, and I drank quite a bit, and then I went on to my own flat."

"To the flat rent of which has been paid for the last year by the duke, all the time that you have been leading his son on?"

Enid flushed and recoiled as if he had struck her. Then she said brazenly:

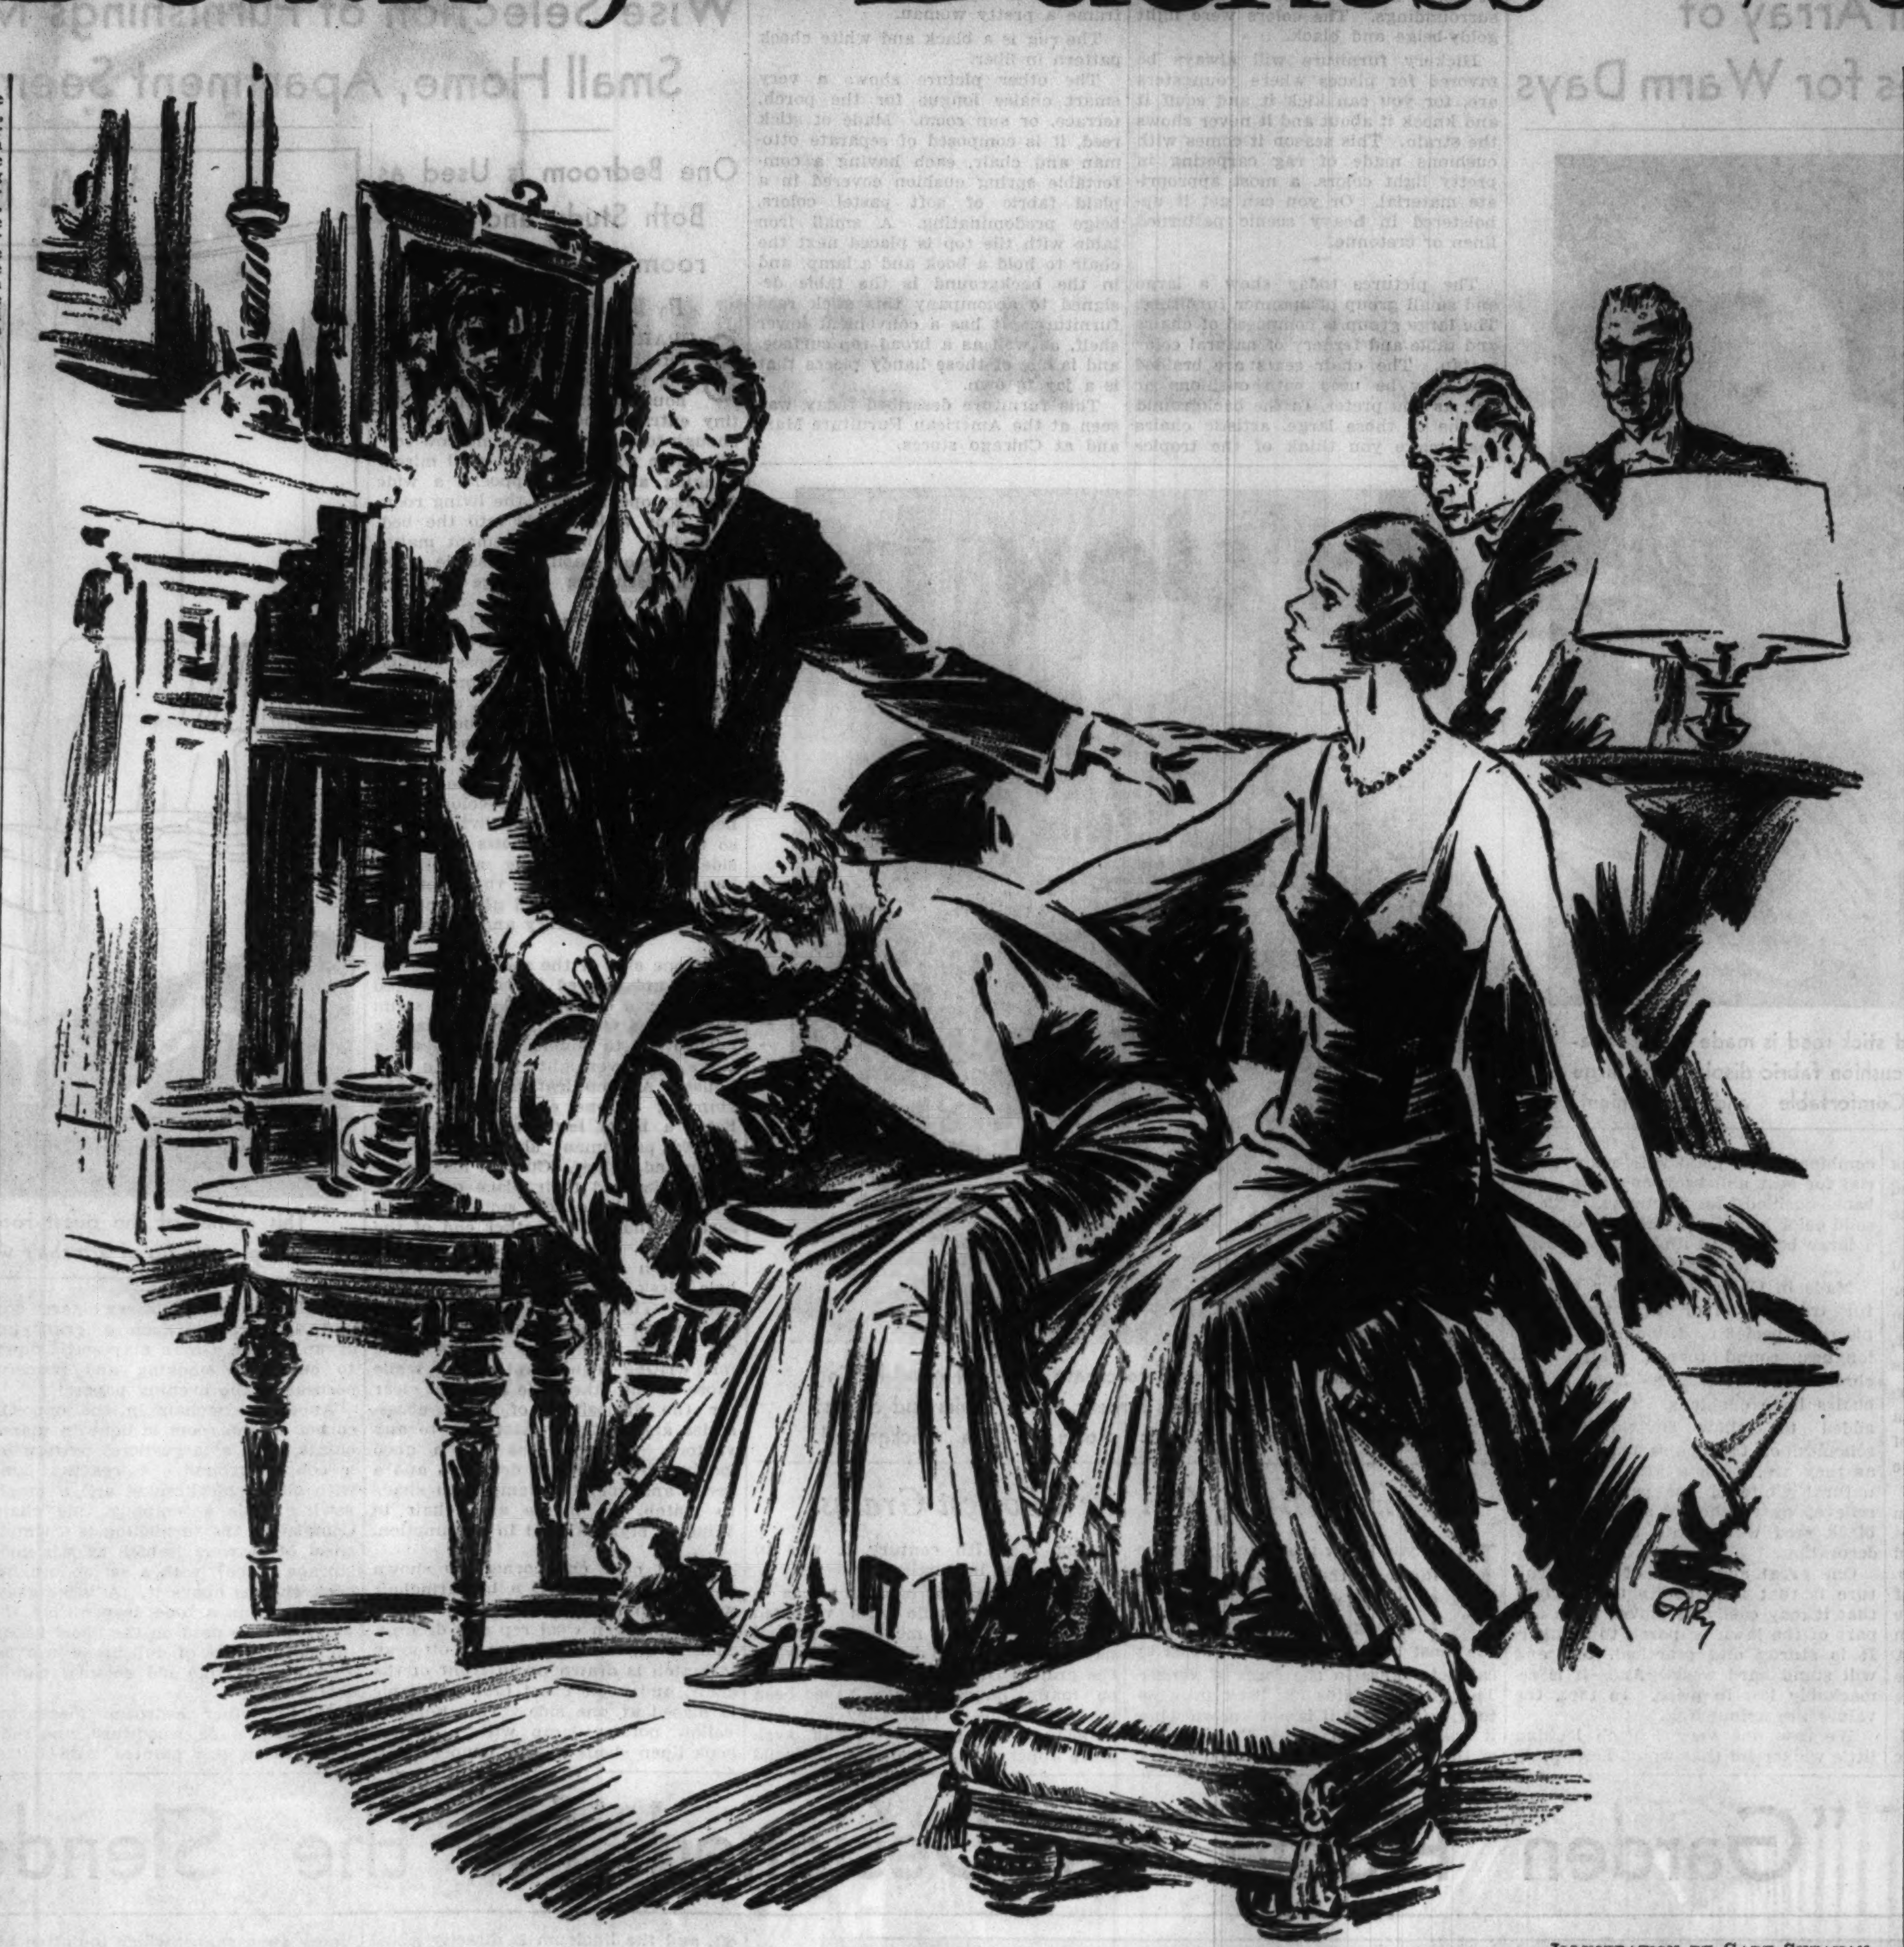

ILLUSTRATION BY GARY SHEAHAN.

"Lady Elissa," he said, bending down, "can you come with me for a few moments? I think it will do you good if I talk to you."

"Yes, the flat in which the duke has been keeping me! And what of it?"

"Nothing. That isn't in my jurisdiction, and I'm not interested in whether you admit you are the duke's mistress, except as it bears on your general credibility. That isn't my mission now——"

"By the way," Enid interrupted, "just what is your jurisdiction and your mission? And since we've not been introduced, you might also tell me who you are and what right you have to question me? Why all the mystery around here tonight, and why have ordinary police officers supplanted the duke in his own palace? And where is the duchess, and why am I summoned out here from London as if I were a suspect in some weird murder?"

GLADE stared at her until she grew even more nervous.

"I'll answer your questions in order, Miss Forbes, though I haven't yet made up my mind definitely as to whether you don't already know the answers. I'll know before I'm finished.

"I am Inspector Glade of Scotland Yard, which explains my jurisdiction and my right to question you. There is plenty of mystery around here, which explains my mission and why ordinary police officers have taken charge of these premises and of every person on them. And your use of the word weird was most appropriate, for the duchess of Devon was most weirdly murdered early this evening, about the time you admit you were talking to her.

"And you were summoned out here like a suspect because until this minute you are the last person known to have seen her alive. Does all that answer your questions?"

"Murdered—Anita—dead——!" Enid whispered, crouching, white faced, in her seat. "But, good Lord—she was alive—when I last saw her."

"Was she? Well, we'll know more about that presently. Meantime, may I ask you to return to the library?"

He opened the door and ushered the bewildered woman into the ring of staring eyes. She hurried to her chair and sat down, covering her face with her hands, while Glade turned to observe an animated argument between Flint and Bombarrassi. The obese Italian, his face streaming with perspiration and wringing his pudgy hands, appealed to the inspector.

"Signor eenspector," the huge man's voice quavered, "I am a very seeck man. I musta go to my room and lie down, or I shall become eel weeth nausea at once. I promeese I weel lie down on my bed, signor, and notta moove unteel you send for me, or come there to talk weeth me. Please let me go, signor, and send one of your poleece to guard me."

Glade glanced at Dr. Ferguson. The latter nodded: "This chap is quite ill. Temperament, and nerves getting ragged. He can't run away, and he will be really sick if he stays here much longer."

"All right, Mr. Bombarrassi," said the detective. He turned to Flint: "Let this constable go and sit in the room with him. I won't want him for questioning for a while. And by the way——" He whispered something to Flint, who whispered to Carter, and the mountainous Italian and the stolid constable left together.

Glade looked around the room and his eyes softened as he walked across to the divan where Elissa lay, her face buried in a cushion.

"Lady Elissa," he said, bending down, "can you come with me for a few moments? I think it will do you good if I talk to you."

Elissa sat up, her eyes swollen, lips quivering, and reached for Glade's hand. His manner was gentle as he led her to the reading room, where Flint closed the door behind them.

Elissa dropped wearily into the chair the detective held. He lowered the lampshade and seated himself, looking pityingly at the quietly sobbing girl.

"Lady Elissa," his voice was low, "if there was anything I might do or say to assuage your sorrow I should hasten to do so. I can only urge you to try to regain your composure, because I need your help. This is a ghastly situation, I know, but my only purpose tonight is to clear it up as quickly as I can. And, I repeat, I need your help. Try to grieve a little less while I ask you one or two questions to which I must have answers."

ELISSA dabbed at her eyes with a crumpled bit of linen, and finally lifted her head. She nodded for him to proceed.

"Without committting myself against further investigation," Glade began, "I will say this now: I am confident that the guilty person is among the group in the library. I may be wrong and we may find that one of the servants, or even some outsider about whom we know nothing, may have done the—the crime. But I have a peculiar premonition that we shall find the person we seek beyond that door.

"Therefore, I'd like you to tell me, to the very best of your recollection, what it was your mother said on the porch to or about the maharajah, Miss Forbes, your father, and if she said anything derogatory about the two lawyers."

"Mother said nothing that could possibly implicate Mr. Pilkington or Mr. Groathouse," Elissa said slowly. "You may disagree with me, but I think you can leave them out of the list of persons you suspect.

"As to Joolep, she accused him of betraying my father's friendship the night before they were married, by making love to her and asking her to elope with him. She told us she had repulsed him and called him a colored man, and that he resented it so greatly that he had encouraged father all these years in his—his misconduct.

"Let me see," Elissa frowned as she tried to recall the scene. "She did say something else about what Joolep had done, but I can't remember it. It couldn't have been important, or I should think of it——"

"Excuse me, Lady Elissa," Glade said quickly, "permit me: I shall have to be the judge of whether it is important or not. Try to concentrate, did she accuse him of anything else besides asking her to run away with him? This may be very important."

ELISSA'S brow was furrowed as she reviewed the incident. Then she shook her head.

"No, I imagine I'm wrong about it. To my best recollection she merely blamed him for a great deal of her domestic unhappiness.

"As to Enid Forbes, this is most distressing. Mother said she'd seen her coming from father's rooms, dressed in negligee, and that father had been keeping Enid in an apartment in town and spending her, mother's, money on his mistress. She also accused her of trying to entangle George so he would marry her.

"I can't repeat all that my mother said about my father's conduct. She said he had wasted his life, his talents and promise, because of her wealth, and had never run straight since they were married. She told us she intended to divorce him, and that was the reason she had sent for Mr. Groathouse and Mr. Pilkington, so the thing could be arranged."

"I see. And what did she—— By the way, can you tell me, briefly, in what parts of the castle the different guests are quartered?"

"Bombarrassi and Solito have a suite in the east wing at the very corner, because Bombarrassi plays the piano constantly, and Solito sometimes practices, too. And Bombarrassi keeps several funny pets there with him.

"Joolep has rooms on the first floor in the west wing. Jane Carlinrosse and Frankie Bevan and Enid have two or three rooms, each, right above Joolep's suite, on the second floor. Father lives in an apartment on the third floor, above where the girls are staying.

"The two lawyers are in the middle of the second floor in the rear, in adjoining rooms, overlooking the gardens. Dick Bendage is on the second floor, in the east wing, not far from George's rooms. Vicary Hopkins has quarters on the second floor, too, toward the east wing, near Brooke's, and Captain Orozco is on the ground floor beneath them, and near Bombarrassi.

"Mother's suite occupies most of the top floor of the east wing, and I am next to her."

"That is fine," said Glade, who had been making notes. "Now tell me, when your mother spoke of the divorce did she reveal anything of her intentions about providing for your father and your brothers?"

"Yes. She said she would see that neither father nor my brothers got a penny of her fortune. She said she would provide for me. I don't know what she intended to do about some of the others?"

"What do you mean?" exclaimed Glade, almost rising to his feet.

"Why, mother told me, once, that she had made her will—this was several years ago—and that she had decided to leave a substantial sum to Bombarrassi, because he had been so good to Solito, and to Dick because he had been kind to her when she first came to England, and to Jane because she was such a poor business woman that she'd be broke in a month after mother died. O, yes, and she was going to provide a fund for Solito. She has always loved him, and we all like him, too."

"Very good. Did she indicate this afternoon whether she intended to change that will in any way?"

"No. She said nothing about that, except that she was going to be sure that father and George and Brooke wouldn't get anything."

"Do you happen to know whether she had ever told the other beneficiaries of her first intentions toward them?"

"I don't know."

"SHE never told you anything about leaving anything to the maharajah, did she?"

"That's funny, Mr. Glade! She did say something, but I don't remember what it was because I didn't think of Joolep in connection with mother's will. He has a fabulous fortune, you know. It might be that I think she said something when, as a matter of fact, she might have said she wouldn't have to provide for Joolep. No, I can't recall anything along those lines."

"Now, am I correct in assuming that your mother found fault this afternoon with several others who were on the porch—Bombarrassi, Bendage, Orozco, Miss Bevan, and Miss Carlinrosse?"

"Yes. She accused them of being blackmailers and spongers."

"Did they resent it?"

"Well, they said nothing at the time, but I imagine they were furious."

"And how did her announcement about cutting George and Brooke off affect them?"

"They haven't said anything yet. But I imagine the prospect rather staggered them."

"I should imagine so, too. Pardon me, but was much affection ever shown between your brothers and your mother?"

"I'm afraid not. I fear my mother was right about them, as much as I dislike to say so, when she accused them of regarding her merely as a—a bank cashier whom my father had married to provide funds. I have often quarreled with my brothers because they have been supercilious and indifferent toward my mother, always selfish boys, and mother was the sweetest, most patient, most generous woman that ever lived."

"I HAVE been told, Lady Elissa, that your mother excepted Mr. Hopkins and Solito from her denunciation?"

"That is right, sir. Mother loved Vicary. He is a dear boy and a close friend of ours since we were children playing together. He is a fine, honest, unselfish chap. He won several decorations as an aviator during the war. He hasn't much money and of late years he has kept away from us, although I have scolded him for it.

"I've never understood my mother's devotion to Solito. I love him, myself, for he is a genius and a splendid, gentle, kind hearted boy. I have always supposed mother loved him so because of his talent and because he is an orphan. I'm not sure where she met him the first time, but I imagine it was in Italy, where she has a retreat. Anyhow, ever since I can remember he has been like one of the family, though he has spent most of his time in Italy studying for the opera."

"And, my child, do you love Vicary like a brother?" Glade smiled.

Elissa blushed, then smiled sweetly back.

"No. Mr. Glade, I do not love Vicary as—as a brother, or as I love Solito!"

"I know, my dear; I understand," and the inspector reached across the table and patted Elissa's hand. "And now, will you run along back into the next room? If you'd like a breath of the fresh night air you are at liberty to go outside, and you may take Mr. Hopkins with you, if you want. I'll have to ask you to leave Solito in the library for a while. I will want to question him before long. In fact, I'll be greatly surprised if some rather extraordinary news doesn't come out of that young Italian before the night is over.

"Do you feel better now, my dear?"

Elissa rose and wiped away her tears—tears of relief. She pressed his hand and he bowed as he opened the door.

"Flint," he said, "Lady Elissa may wish to walk outside for a bit. She has my permission to go and, if she wishes, Mr. Hopkins may go with her. They may remain away, without surveillance, as long as they choose. I'll send for them if I want them.

"Now," the detective looked about the room, "now I will ask Mr. Bendage to join me in here."

Bendage slouched down into the chair indicated by the detective, lit a cigaret, and crossed his knees. Glade sat back, silent, and frankly studied him.

He saw a tall, square shouldered man without an ounce of superfluous weight; a middle aged sybarite who, evidently, made a god of his slim torso and sartorial appearance.

The detective looked at Bendage's firm but rather full lips and the bold, dark eyes which, though they were gazing back levelly at him, somehow imparted to the Scotland Yard expert the impression that, while this man would face a crisis with debonair comportment, he would, nevertheless, prefer to avoid it.

"MR. BENDAGE," Glade said, "are you English?"

"No. I am an American," said Bendage, his voice cultured and his pronunciation not at all alien to that of his associates and the country he preferred to his own. "I am an expatriate. That is, as a place to reside I like Europe, especially England, better than the States."

"How long have you been over? In fact, would you indulge me by giving me a bit of autobiography?"

"Certainly. My father, for whom I am named, is Richard Bendage, known in America as the Silver King of Nevada. I am one of two sons. My brother, younger than I, is carrying on for my father.

"I am, by no means, an ornament to my family. Too much money and coddling when I was a baby, perhaps, but about the time I was born my parents made their first stake—it was followed by others—and they showered on me all the luxuries they had been denied. I became a headstrong lad. I was expelled from every school, private and public, I was sent to, and, though I was regarded at Harvard as an excellent athlete, it was, apparently, impossible for that athletic excellence to offset my numerous other undesirable qualities as an undergraduate.

"In 1900, when I was twenty-two years of age, somebody told my father that the sterner faculties of English universities could tame me, so I came over to give Cambridge a try. I met the duke there, and the maharajah was living with him. In a short time we three were bunking together. We've been pretty close ever since.

"When reports of my conduct drifted back to the old homestead my father centered his affections and the provisions of his will on my brother and cut me off completely. I have preferred, since, to remain over here. I did my bit in the war."

"How have you made a living since the allowance was closed?"

Bendage flushed. He studied the detective a moment, as if undecided whether to bother answering. Then he shrugged.

"I fancy that London and several continental capitals would suggest that I am a gambler."

"Are you a winner? I mean, is your income from gambling generally adequate to support you in the style you've always enjoyed over here?"

"Well, no. The old gaming adage, you know—chicken one day, feathers the next."

"And how have you met your expenses on the—er—feathers day?"

"Usually, by borrowing; loans to be repaid on the—er—chicken day."

"I wonder if you'd be good enough to tell me, in confidence, of course, the name or names of those free hearted bankers who have been disposed to stake you during the intervals between chicken—there must have been many such intervals in the quarter of a century you have courted fortune across the tables and on the race tracks of Europe?"

"Bankers is hardly the correct word, inspector. That implies previous deposits. Change one letter and call it backers. As to their identities—I suppose that if you doubt anything I tell you during this little interview you will, where possible, have my statements checked. Is that right?"

"That is right."

"Have you found anything in my statements so far that requires checking?"

"Not yet."

"Good. Well I'll save you time and trouble by telling you that the duchess of Devon has been my principal backer for the last twenty years."

"Has she been a generous one?"

"Very. Free with her money and seemingly incapable of refusing me."

"Why the duchess, instead of your intimate, the duke?"

"But where do you imagine the duke has applied for funds all these years? It saved time to apply direct to his backer and mine, rather than get it second hand from his grace."

"THE duchess, then, really has been the banker for both of you?"

"Correct."

"On those days when chicken has featured the Bendage menu, have you ever repaid your backer for her timely rescues?"

"Well, not exactly with currency."

"With what, then, exactly?"

"Well, sir, if I had been favored with that strange appendage, a conscience, I should have placated it with the reflection that she was in debt to me."

"In what way did she contract that indebtedness?"

"It makes quite a chapter in the autobiography. When she and the duke reached Weir castle after the honeymoon the duchess was a lonely, frightened, bewildered bride. She was a lovely girl, with a gentle, friendly disposition. And here she was, suddenly torn forever from her background, her friends, her family, her national atmosphere, young, unprepared, and friendless.

"You may find it difficult, sir, to credit me with any decent quality—and I assure you I don't give a damn whether you do or not—but, honestly, it seemed to me, not knowing much about it, that my young countrywoman was a most pitiable object as she stood waiting for English society's verdict. As a matter of fact all doors were wide open to her as the wife of a duke.

"So I took the duchess under my wing, or rather gave out that I did.

"That, sir, is the debt I alluded to, and it was a debt that the duchess was fair enough to acknowledge."

"But, Mr. Bendage, do you think that that mythical service obligated her grace forever?"

"I fear, Mr. Glade, that I never gave the statute of limitations much thought. Habit, sir, is a powerful factor in life, and I simply got into the habit of regarding the duchess' purse as a bottomless coffer into which, I confess, I have dipped my hand whenever it was—feathers day."

"And what will you do now—for chicken?"

"The prospect is dismal, indeed."

"Well, that is manifestly a private concern of yours in which I cannot intrude. But I should like you to tell me one or two things more. First, what was it the duchess said to you, particularly, on the porch?"

"INASMUCH as you have undoubtedly discussed that episode with the others who preceded me in here, I presume that that question takes on the aspect of checking.

"As you probably know, she told us to wait on the porch and she came along shortly and began her denunciation by launching into Joolep. When my turn came she called me a sponger, a middle aged pauper with a toupee and false teeth, a Lothario among shop girls, and an evil influence on her husband."

"Was her appraisal of you erroneous on any count?"

"Well, I do affect a toupee and a bridge!"

"Was that the extent of her indictment of you?"

"Good Lord, man, wasn't that enough?"

"Were you, pardon the question, awfully offended?"

"Of course, I was offended. I never expected such an outrageous outburst."

"Was it the denunciation there in public, or the signal that your banker had finally closed the books, which most affected you?"

"Mr. Glade, are you trying to start a row with me?"

"No. I am trying to learn what manner of a man you are, so I may reach some conclusion as to whether the scene in which you were pilloried might have produced in you such an effect that you would follow the duchess into the woods and murder her. Somebody did."

"I see. But I pledge you my word that it was not I."

"Now, I may have to start doing a bit of checking. I hardly expect any one to walk in here and confess the crime. Why should I accept your word that you didn't murder the benefactor who had indicated that you must now forage elsewhere for your—chicken? Particularly, if you expected her to leave you anything in her will."

"I know nothing about her will. Certainly, I have no reason to expect anything from that quarter. But if you have learned anything at all about what manner of man I am, you must have decided that her murder would be farthest from my thoughts, for I am not the sort of fellow to let the matter lie where she had tossed it.

"Why, even while she was painting my portrait this afternoon, I was figuring what would be the most effective step to take to soothe the lady and induce her to continue in her delightful rôle. I most emphatically could not contemplate with pleasure a prospect featured solely by feathers; and I didn't intend to let a little thing like her being off her feed, and getting a bit balky at things, discourage me from remaining her friend."

"I've listened to some pretty stories in here tonight, Mr. Bendage, so I'm getting hardened. Rotten qualities don't seem to be geographical—England, America, India, and I suppose Italy and Mexico, all produce their share. I imagine that before this thing is cleared up, nothing could make me really ill.

"NOW, tell me what you did from the time the duchess left the porch until you appeared in the library before dinner?"

"I had intended to play tennis with Lord Brooke, if I could tear him away from Miss Bevan long enough for a few sets. When the duchess had ended her little monologue and retired, I glanced over at him, but he shook his head. So, after a bit, I went to my room, rang for Ransome to bring me a whisky and soda, and settled down to do a little serious drinking and a little serious thinking.

"I'd been there attending to both for an hour or so, when Lady Elissa came in. She'd been crying, and said she was worried about her mother. I suggested I'd run out and see if I could find her in the grounds and try to persuade her to come in before the storm broke. She asked me to do so.

"So I went out. I hunted out beyond the gardens, in the direction the duchess had gone; and I went over the hills and down the little valleys. I couldn't find her anywhere. I went back around the castle in the direction of the summer study, looked in there, didn't see her, and went on down the driveway below the lake.

"It began to get dark—the clouds were piling up everywhere, and the wind was rising—so I decided it was no use and came back to the house, making one final detour over in the woods beyond the bathing pavilion. She wasn't there; so I came on in and went to my room.

"Then I had another drink, bathed, had my valet shave and dress me, and went on over to the library. Soon we'd all rallied round, trying to be a bit cheerful, and then Joolep came in and the duke followed him, and we waited for the duchess. She never came, of course. You know all the rest."

Glade sat lost in thought. He wondered why Elissa had failed to tell

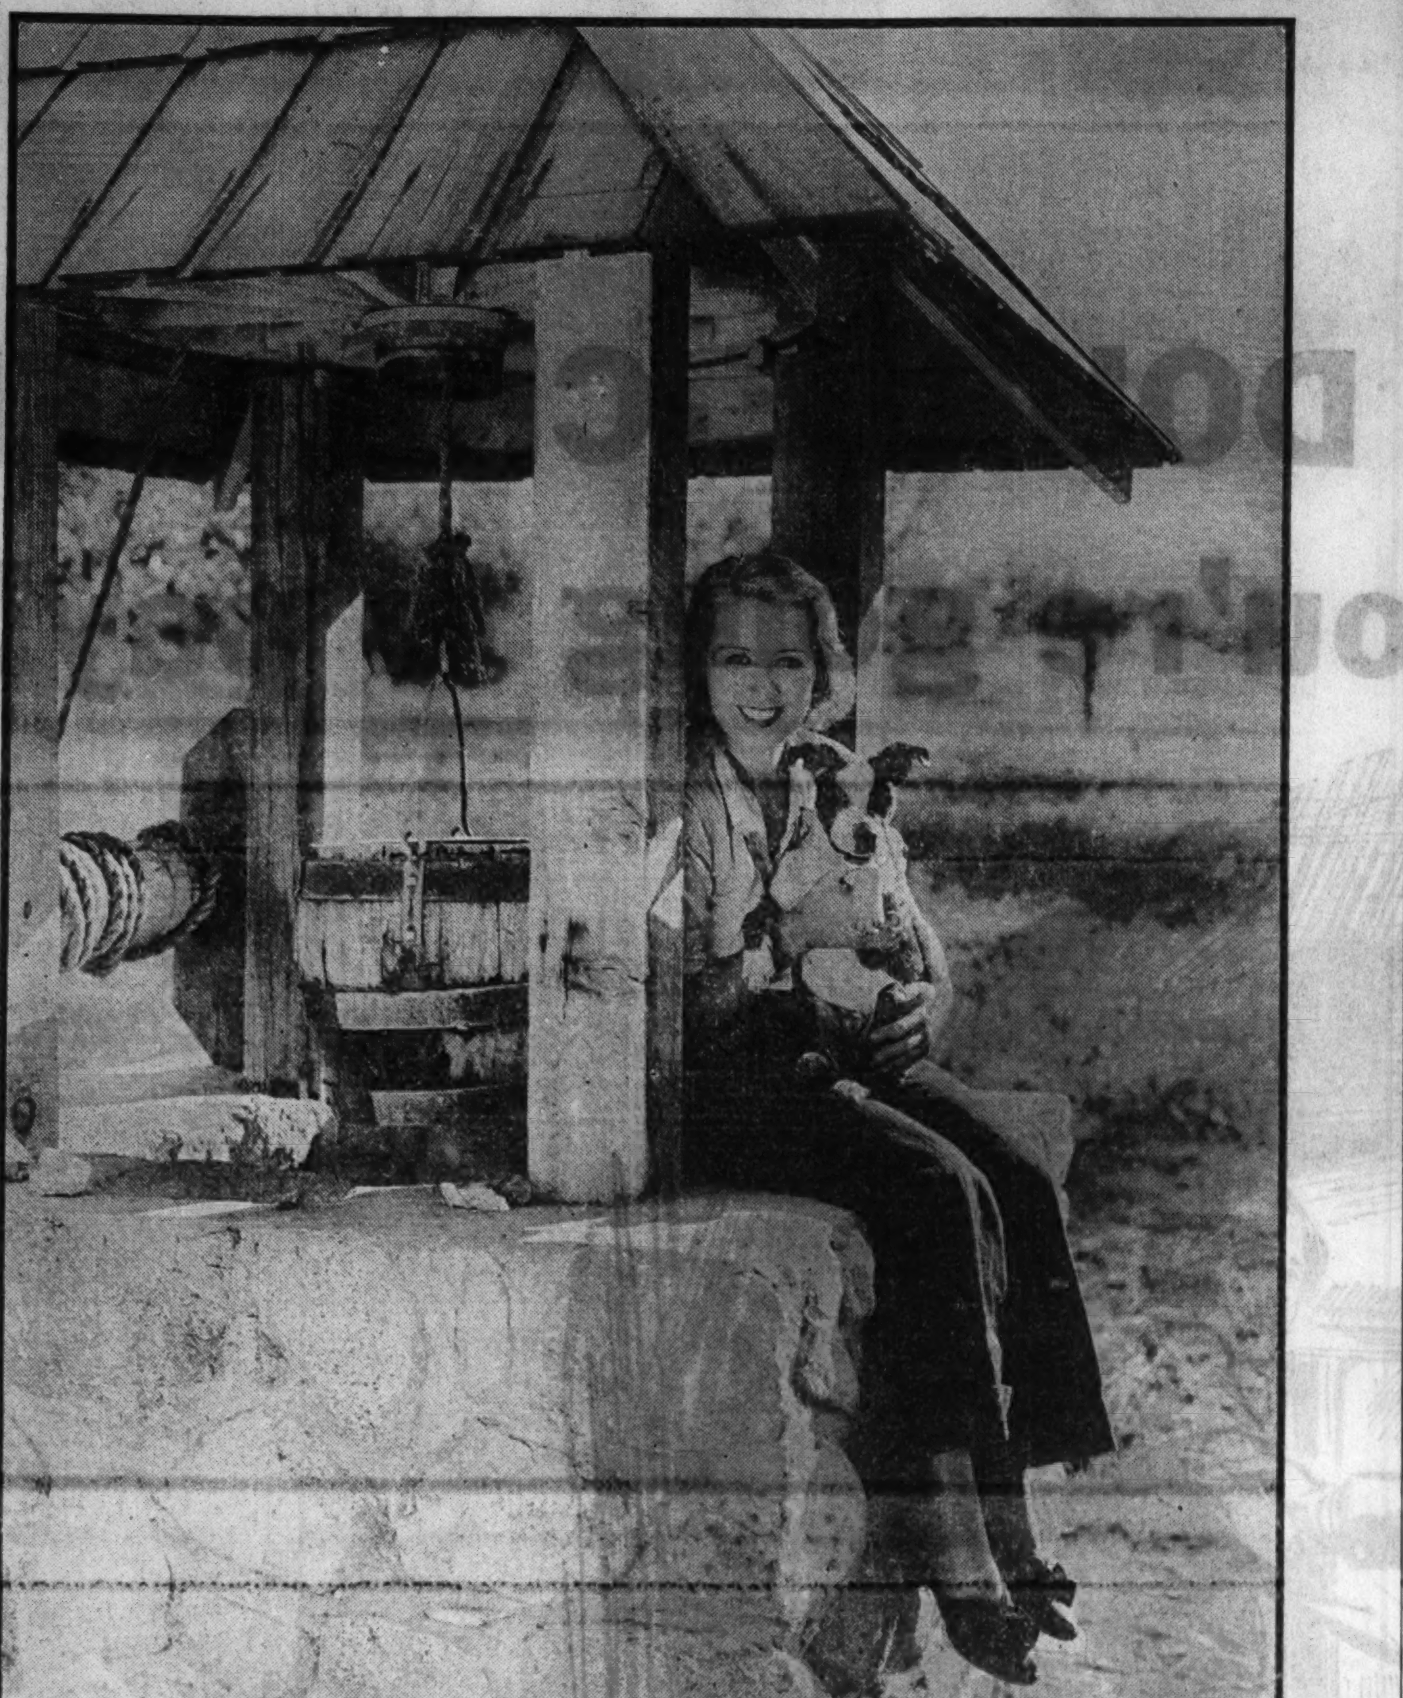
Reformed Diet Enhances Skin Beauty



"Back to the old oaken bucket" is the slogan of lovely Joan Blondell. Drink more water if you would be more beautiful . . . and do your water drinking particularly between meals, Antoinette Donnelly advises.

Improved Appearance of Face and Figure Show Their Quick Response in Meals Properly Balanced.

By Antoinette Donnelly.

IT IS rumored that a renewed war on feminine fat is on with a vengeance, the idea being to make the figure supply the lines that the purse cannot afford this year. It's true, as you know, that a woman reaching a certain weight has to spend more for her clothes than does her lean sisters. She must spend in order to get the good lines that conceal fat and effect the streamline silhouette.

So women, bowing to the depression felt by the pocketbook, are proving that it will take more than a little thing like financial depression to keep them from hewing to the slim line of fashion.

It is told by some of our investigating scouts that women are passing up facial care [involving money expenditure] for the better figure lines [involving massage and circulatory treatment expense] on the dress theory just cited. Which brings us around to a point about skin and complexion beauty and the benefits accruing to each simultaneously through reformed diets.

We women have the habit of thinking of the complexion as a thing of local interest purely. We are intrigued by the ads promising youthful loveliness of skin with a lotion or a cream.

Local Care Necessary.

And we are right in giving eye and ear to these local reminders, for local attention must be given the skin. But what we women need to be reminded of just as frequently is that diseases of the skin, blemishes of the skin, color, and, in some cases, texture of the skin are matters of internal origin generally. And the tie-up with the reduction of excess weight and skin condition, as we are tying it up today, is something I want women to think about.

Every medical authority tells us that two of the commonest factors in the development of skin troubles are over-eating and constipation. The two commonest factors in weight accumulation are the identical same pair of trouble makers, too much food consumption and irregular elimination.

In the years I have been overseeing reducing experiments, and these experiments have covered thousands of cases, time and again it has been reported to me how the complexion has undergone a magic change along with the better silhouette accomplishments. The complexion takes on a clearer and cleaner tone. The blackhead tendency often is eliminated along with the reduction of excess starch, sweets, and rich foods generally. The light or heavy acne state of face has been reported as immeasurably improved, or often completely cured. As you know, medically supervised acne treatment includes a reformed type of diet for the patient. And treatment for constipation is necessary in nine cases out of ten. Here, again, you see the immediate tie-up between a sane reducing program and skin betterment.

Effects of Liquid Diet.

I have had women report a change of complexion tone after a short liquid diet period, the three day one usually recommended as a prelude to the actual reducing campaign. The reason for this improved state of skin is due to the fact that the liquids have acted as eliminative factors. The system has been washed out, so to speak. Skin and eyes immedately take on a markedly clearer tone. The fruits and green vegetables which form an important part of a good reducing diet are also eliminative in effect.

So you can mark it down in your book that no other group of causes more frequently produce diseases of the skin than improper diet, bad habits of eating and living, and the series of digestive disturbances that go with these. Substances are introduced into the blood stream which cause skin irritation of one kind or another.

The proper diet for the hygiene of the skin calls for the substitution of the type of foodstuffs that are recommended in a sane and healthy reducing program. Diet for the skin has no secrets of its own. The same mixed and properly balanced maintenance diet serves beauty to both face and form. The same heavy, starchy things must be avoided for the improvement of both face and form. And the same type of exercise that serves to give tone to muscles of the body and prevent early return of flesh gives the needed impetus to blood circulation that rules the state of the skin.

So if any women are bemoaning the fact that they have to confine their beautifying efforts to reducing, they needn't think they are objects of sympathy because of their money shortage for facial upkeep. They can do their own creaming and massaging daily while they are working up the basic complexion beauty principles on a good reducing diet.

A good reducing diet, as you are fully aware, does not eliminate all starches, all sweets, all fats. It minimizes their intake. The case against skin preservation along with reducing was built on the foolish sort of reducing diets that were practiced widely before we became thoroughly enlightened on the subject. It's the too liberal consumption of hot, fresh breads, pastries and cakes, sugars and sweets that make for both bad figures and bad skins. Carbohydrates, starches, and sweets may be taken in moderation and should be. The value of fresh vegetables and fruits in the diet is that they consist, in addition to water, of indigestible fibrous material and are laxative in effect.

A point of beauty conquest we women are terribly remiss on is that of water consumption. In reducing programs, water drinking is strongly advocated. And where it is indulged, the immediate reaction in complexion betterment is plainly obvious. If a good quantity of water is taken into the system, a large quantity will be excreted. Thus, there ensues a washing out of the tissues with a liberal water consumption that is most invigorating to the skin. There is no longer any doubt of the hygienic value of the habit of free water drinking. Yet, it is most difficult to get women to cultivate the habit of taking water between meals.

Drink More Water.

Take water in moderation at meals so that you will not want to eat more than necessary, which sometimes happens with heavy water drinking at meals. It is best taken at the beginning or end of a meal, preferably the latter to increase the activity of digestion. But for the sake of both figure and complexion, try to get the water drinking habit between meals. It is one of the most efficient measures against constipation. A large glass of water before breakfast is a highly recommended aperient measure.

This water drinking and the diet recommended for a sane course in reducing will not only correct constipation but its immediate facial ills as shown in the greasy, muddy, flushed or blackhead blemished complexion. In other words, when you go on a good reducing diet you go on a complexion beautifying program at the same time.

Now, should it be so hard to muster courage to say "No, thank you" to the second helping or to the overloaded first? Not if you are a true daughter of Eve, it shouldn't.

hir about this excursion on which she had sent Bendage. Still, he hadn't asked her what she had done during the afternoon. Strange though. After all, was it important? Who could tell? Oughtn't she to have volunteered the information? Had she forgotten it or, remembering, deemed it trivial? Might there be something significant back of her omission? Well, he could, of course, call her back for questioning later, if he decided it to be desirable. Funny though!

"YOU didn't talk to your two friends, the maharajah and the duke, about this crisis in your lives?" Glade resumed the inquiry.

"No. There was no crisis as far as Joolep was concerned, apart from shattered friendships—he was not included in the sponging and blackmailing counts of the general indictment. And I know his temper so well I thought he'd prefer to be alone while he brooded. And while the crisis was extremely important to me, it was a lot more important to the duke, for I happen to know of some checks he recently put out in the expectation of getting funds from the duchess this week-end. So I thought I'd better leave him alone with his problems."

"Did you see anybody while you were out searching the grounds?

"Let's see. Yes, I saw the gardener working at the edge of the lake. That's all."

"Did you pause near the pavilion long enough to sit on the bench where Bates saw the man with the heavily tanned neck?"

"No. I'm not the man who was seen by Bates. My neck is dark enough naturally and from exposure. But I didn't sit on the bench."

"You didn't see Miss Forbes as she drove away? Or Miss Carlinrosse down below the lake? Or the duke emerging from the summer study and walking toward the castle?"

"No. I saw none of them."

"How do you account for Bates' failure to see you? You weren't taking any pains to conceal yourself behind the trees were you?"

"No. I saw him clearly enough two or three times. I don't know why he didn't see me. I wasn't skulking about."

"After you returned to the castle, did you go out again in the rain?"

"I did not."

Can your valet prove that?"

"Let me see. He finished dressing me about half past six, and—"

"How do you know it was half past six?"

"Because I looked at my wrist watch. I didn't want to be the first one in the library."

"Go on."

"Then he went down to the servant quarters to get his supper."

"What time did you reach the library?"

"I made very sure to get there about ten minutes past seven."

"Then the valet cannot prove, can he, that you didn't go out into the dark and the storm in a raincoat, murder the duchess, and return to your room, change your shoes quickly, and hasten to the library? You would have had ample time if you had hurried to do all that."

"Well, all I can say is that I didn't. Besides, somebody around the premises would have been sure to see me. And how would I know where to find Anita? And where would I get the poison the coroner says caused her death, or get her to take it in some mysterious manner he can't discover?"

"These seem to you like insurmountable questions, don't they? Well, those questions, or similar ones, will have to be surmounted before we find out what we are after. I think they will be.

"That is all I require of you just now. I'll ask you to step back into the library, please."

Glade opened the door and Bendage hurried over to the cellarette, poured himself a whisky and soda and carried it with him to his seat. The detective looked around the library—Elissa and Vicary were not in the room. He stood a moment staring at the floor, then looked across at George.

"May I bother you for a few minutes, please?"

While George was going sullenly into the little reading room, Glade turned to Flint:

"Did Lady Elissa and Mr. Hopkins go out soon after I went into the next room with Mr. Bendage?"

"Yes. They were up and out before you finished closing the door."

Farewell, Miss Julie Logan

Routh, the husband of Joanna, had tracked him down to say that she was terrible near her reckoning. The doctor started off with him rather anxious, for Fargie was "through ither," and it was Joanna's first.

Dr. John had floundered into worse drifts, but the wind was lashing his face and the visibility was so bad that they soon lost each other. He tumbled and rumbled down in a way at which he is a master hand, and reached the shieling hours before the husband, who is a decent stock but very unusual in the legs. The distance is a short mile when the track is above ground. Dr. John was relieved to smell smoke, for he dreaded that Fargie might not have had the sense to heap on the peat and that the woman might be found frozen.

I TOLD him I knew the house, which is a lonesome one roomed cot of double stone and divot. I asked if he had found Joanna alone, but he had taken the opportunity of my making a remark to fall asleep again. I got his eyes open in the manner recommended by him, and he said with even a little leer at me, "She was not quite alone, but maybe you are one of those who do not count an infant till it be christened."

"If there is any haste for that," I cried, looking for my boots.

"There is none," he said.

"But who had been with her? Was she in such a bad condition that she could give you no information about that?"

"She was in fine condition, and she could and she did," he said. "I was with her till Fargie, who had gone back to the farm, brought down the wife, and I have no doubt Joanna is now giving the particulars to them. They are such uncommon particulars," he went on, "that I can fancy even the proud infant sitting up to listen to them."

Then who was it that had acted in his place, I asked, not daring to be more prolix lest he should again be overtaken.

That, he said, was what he was asking me.

"Dr. John——"

"Be assured," said he, "that I am too dung ower with sleep to be trifling with you, but this will become more your affair than mine. It is not to me they will look to be told who she was but to their minister."

"I hope I shall not fail them," I said loftily. Nevertheless I dreed what was coming, and I insisted on his keeping awake "or I would lay a hot iron on the beard." He said he had found a kettle on a bright fire and Joanna in her bed with the child, who was fittingly swaddled in a shawl. He would not let her talk until he had satisfied himself that everything necessary had been done, and then (for the curiosity was mounting to his brain) he said with pretended casualness, "I see you and your friend have been having a nice cup of tea."

"And merry she was at the making of it," replied Joanna, turning merry herself.

"I forget," said he, "if you mentioned who she was."

"Of course it was one of the Strangers," she said.

"Of course it would be one of those curiosities," said he, "but I never chanced to fall in with ane; what was she like?"

"O," said Joanna, "she was like the little gentleman that sits under his tail"—meaning a squirrel.

"I thought she would be something like that," he said, "but had you no fear of her?"

"Never," said Joanna, "till the bairn was born, and then for just a short time, when she capered about madlike with glee, holding it high in the air, and dressing and undressing it in the shawl, so as to have another peep at it, and very proud of what she had done till a queer change came over her and I had a sinking that she was going to bite it. I snatched it from her."

"To bite them is not my usual procedure at a birth," the doctor had said, "but we all have our different ways."

Joanna gave him a fuller story of the night than, as he said, would be of any profit to a sumph of a bachelor like Adam Yestreen, but he told me some of its events. The door had blown open soon after Fargie's departure, leaving naught but reek to heat her, and when the fire went down she would have been glad to cry back the reek. She thought the cold candle of her life was at the flicker.

THE stranger re-lit the fire, but there was no way she could conceive of heating that body on the box-bed. Then the grand thought came to her. "She strippit herself naked," Joanna said, "and lay at my feet and made me keep them on her, as if she were one of them pig bottles for toasting the feet of the gentry, and when my feet were warm she lay close to me, first on one side and then on the other. She was as warm as a browning bannock when she began, but by the time the heat of her had passed into me I'se uphaud she was as cold as a trout."

As to the actual birth, though this was Joanna's first child, she knew more about the business than did her visitor, who seems to have been in a dither of importance over the novelty of the occasion. She was sometimes very daring and sometimes at such a loss that, in Joanna's words, "she could just pet me and kiss me, and draw droll faces at me with the intent to help me through, and when she got me through she went skeer with triumph, crying out as she strutted up and down that we were the three wonders of the world.

The whole affair, Dr. John decided, must have been strange enough "to put the wits of any medical onlooker in a creel," and if he let his mind rest on it he would forget how to sleep as well as to practice surgery, so in the name of charity would I let him sink into the land of nod for a few hours while I thought out some simple explanation for my glenfolk.

He got his few hours, though sorely did I grudge them, for I was in a creel myself. When he woke refreshed I was by his side to say at once, as if there had not been a moment's interruption, "Of course, she was some neighbor."

There was a glint in his blue eyes now, but he said decisively, "There is no way out by that road, my man; Joanna is acquaint with every neighbor in the glen."

"An outside woman of flesh and blood," I prigged with him, "must have contrived to force the glen as, after all, you did yourself."

That, he maintained, was even less possible than the other. I was stout for there being some natural explanation, and he reminded me unnecessarily that there was the one Joanna gave. At this I told him sternly to get behind me.

He saw in what distress I was and, dropping his banter, came bravely to my relief. "Do you really think," he said in his helpful, confident way, "that I have any more belief in warlocks and 'strangers' than you have yourself? I'll tell you my conclusion, which my sleep makes clearer. It is that Joanna did the whole thing by herself, as many a woman has done before her. She must at some time, though, been in a trance, which are things I cannot pretend to fathom, and have thought a woman was about her who never came in. It cows to think of Joanna, even in her hour of genius, having such an imagination; that bit about nearly biting the bairn is worthy of Mr. H's. Spectrum."

"She no doubt got it out of that old story," I said.

"Ay," he granted, "that might account for it. And at any rate, it is of no importance, as we are both agreed that she was by her lonesome self. But what a pity for us to have let that joyous visitor go down the wind."

It was far from a pity to me. I was so thankful to him for getting rid of her that I pressed his hand repeatedly. I was feeling very young.

VI. Superstition and Its Antidote.

DEC. 26.—I got as far as the shieling two days behind Joanna's story and held a christening, this being the first at which I have ever officiated. The usual course is to have it in the kirk toward the end of a service, but in urgent cases it may be on the day of birth. There was maybe no reason for the precipitancy in this case, the child being lusty, but in the peculiar circumstances I considered it my duty to make her safe.

When I took her in my arms, by far the youngest child I had ever meddled with, I was well aware of my youthful presumption. I should have been warned before about the beauty of their fingernails. Yet I dared not let on that I was the most ignorant in the room, for I was the minister, and therefore to be looked up to. Also Joanna repeated her story, with side looks at me as if she had put me in a quandary, and the half-dozen present were already familiar with it and were all agog.

So, knowing how ill it fares with a minister's usefulness if he does not keep upside with his flock, I was bolder than I felt and told them in a short exposition that there had been no "stranger" in the affair. Otherwise some of them would certainly have seen her in the glen. They all nodded their agreement and thanked me for making it so clear, but I knew in my bones that they did not accept one word of my exposition, though they regarded it as very proper for a minister, especially one who was new to the glen.

This way they have, of heartily accepting what you tell them and then going their own gait, is disheartening to me, and at one time I thought of making the folly about "strangers" a subject of stern discipline from the pulpit. Fear did not enter into my reluctance, for I knew they would esteem me the more I hammered at them, but I drew back from the ease of superiority toward men and women whose simple lives have been so often more grimly fought than my own. It relieves me, therefore, to have decided that I may get through their chinks more creditably in another manner.

New Patterns Will Appeal to Dressmaker

By Clotilde.

THE charming model, made by pattern No. 2614, is just the thing for spring to complete an ensemble or to wear without a coat. The bias shoulders and other bias lines will be a real help in making the heavier figure appear more slender.

The dress closes under the left arm, and the neckline, high across the back, is cut in a V at the front and is finished with a scarf collar. This collar only goes part way around the neck, and ends in an unusual looking bow on the right side.

There are raglan sleeves, and you may make them either long or short. The long ones, as you see, are quite full where they are gathered and set into deep bands.

The skirt is cut in two parts and is circular. There are plaits each side of the center front and center back. The skirt is set on to a perfectly fitted hip yoke, and joined to the bodice under a removable belt. Lay the skirt on a table while laying and basting the plaits, and press flat when basted. But leave the bastings in until the dress is finished. The skirt, for size 36, measures about 2⅝ yards at the bottom.

A printed silk crêpe in black and white, with the upper part of the sleeves and bodice of plain white, or a blue and white print with white, will either one be lovely. Sheer woolens, crinkly crêpe, and novelty cottons are smart for this slenderizing model.

The smart slipon, sleeveless dress made by pattern No. 3071 is for junior girls, and who wouldn't at this age adore having this new peplum model? It has a capelet also, ending in rather an interesting manner in flared sleeves, with a prettily yoked front bodice. The skirt is circular, flaring gracefully at the bottom.

It isn't at all difficult to make, the little bodice having bound armholes, and the collar being stitched together on the shoulders, but leaving both the left shoulder seam of the bodice and collar open above a large perforation, for closing.

The collar is stitched to the bodice across the front, forming a yoke. The peplum must be entirely finished before being basted to the skirt, finishing the bottom with a narrow hem. Finish the bottom of the skirt in the same manner.

A skipper blue and white printed batiste will be both cool and fresh looking. Printed lawn, linen, shantung, and dimity are also both practical and pretty materials. For "best" wear a printed coral red and white crêpe de chine would be lovely.

The Sunday night frock, made by pattern No. 2624, has the modish frilled short sleeves and bias lines, as you can easily see. Upper and lower parts of the bodice are cut separately and joined—using a contrasting color for the upper parts will be chic. The bodice is cut with drop shoulders, and the short frilled sleeves set. This frill is made of the dress material.

The pattern chart shows just how the skirt sections are joined, and you must be sure and do the pinning, basting, and stitching from the top, towards the bottom every time.

The skirt is exceptionally graceful looking when finished. The left underarm seam of bodice and skirt are left open between notches, and finished for closing.

> 'Tis with our judgments as our watches, none
> Go just alike, yet each believes his own.—Pope.

By Mae Tinee.

GOOD Morning!

Now, praise be, here's where we can run with the pack! I honestly liked Ruth Chatterton in "The Rich Are Always with Us"!

As the Carolyn of this picture she is warm, alive, spontaneous—and she looks lovelier than I have ever seen her. True, the exaggerated accent is there; but once, I'm sure, she forgets it, and that's a start. Maybe some day she'll misplace it entirely. And won't that be a break—for Miss Chatterton!

She had a lot to be thankful for, this trip! Her blessings number a good story, splendid direction, one George Brent who is a leading man the girls will sigh for, and hand-picked supporting players who have been ideally cast. Be it said, by way of added encomium for the star, that never once does she try to hog the limelight. Graciously and unobtrusively she gives to every man and woman their due. The result of this sporting attitude is a splendidly rounded ensemble performance.

Story of a Loyal Wife.

The screen narrative, adapted from a novel by one E. Pettit, sings of the rich and loyal wife of a philandering husband who is herself besieged by an ardent and intrepid wooer. Julian loves Carolyn truly. He wants her more than anything else in the world. He's been aware of her husband's infidelities long before she has had the slightest suspicion that her Greg is carrying on. He's Johnny-on-the-spot throughout the bewildering maze of events in which the lady of his heart finds herself entangled.

The story is simply, logically and fascinatingly worked out and holds your interest every inch of the way.

After Miss Chatterton and Mr. Brent, Bette Davis takes third honors. She had the benefit of painstaking tutelage by George Arliss, with whom she appeared, you will remember, in "The Man Who Played God." And what that man has done for her . . .! She gives a crisply effective performance as—now get this straight—the heroine's best friend who is in love with the man who's in love with the heroine. An involved rôle, and Miss Davis gives it just the deft touch it demanded.

The picture is richly and tastefully staged and the women's costumes are exquisite. Lines are clean cut. Situations are potent. Laughs are many.

Bits aBOUTem.

CLARK GABLE, ROBERT MONTGOMERY et al. have competition. His name is SPANKIE and he toddles through the "Our Gang" comedies. Women are wild over him and even men have been heard to remark that there seems to be quite a fellow! . . . JACKIE COOPER has taken up rabbit raising as a hobby. . . . LIONEL BARRYMORE has been vacationing since he finished work on "Grand Hotel." And been traveling—around Los Angeles! Painting! "He made an oil painting on the docks at San Pedro, etchings in the Verdugo hills and a water color of wild flowers in the Mojave desert," proudly proclaimeth the press agent. . . . AL JOLSON is reported as saying he's done with the stage for good. He is to start work immediately on "Heart of New York," written for him by Ben Hecht. . . . JANET GAYNOR'S and CHARLES FARRELL'S next co-starring picture will be called "The First Year." Prominent in their supporting cast will be that fine character actor, Dudley Digges. . . . WARREN WILLIAMS is said to be an enthusiastic amateur criminologist when not acting for stage or screen. . . . Says the New Movie Magazine, "Guests of JEANETTE MacDONALD'S party for ROBERT RICHIE were startled by JACK OAKIE'S appearance in a dinner jacket and red sweat shirt. It was the tuxedo that threw them into a panic. They'd expected the sweat shirt." . . . SYLVIA SIDNEY will play the title rôle and GARY COOPER that of the young American officer in RKO'S screen version of "MADAME BUTTERFLY," some of the scenes for which will actually be made in Japan. . . . NORMA SHEARER'S next starring film will be "Smilin' Through," adaptation of the Allan Langdon Martin stage success that Norma Talmadge made as a silent. . . . Ninety-five of the films shown in Canada are made in the United States. . . . WILL ROGERS has stage fright every time he starts to act before the camera, AND they do say, can't be got down to work when there's anybody visiting the studio whom he doesn't like. . . . JOEL McCREA, it is whispered, is going places with TALLULAH BANKHEAD these days. . . . Says Photoplay: "Garbo and a friend put in an appearance at the Mary Wigman dance recital in Los Angeles. A young couple sitting near chewed gum so enthusiastically that finally Greta could endure it no longer and leaning over said, 'Listen, I give you ten dollars each if you go home.' "The young couple readily agreed, pocketed the money and lit out, while Garbo leaned back and enjoyed the concert in peace and quiet."

Chicagoland Music Festival Set for Aug. 20

By Edward Moore.

ONCE again it becomes the pleasant duty to speak of the huge choruses, the throb of drums, the golden blare of band music, the magnificent light effects that make up the Chicagoland music festival. Another one is coming. It will be on the evening of Saturday, Aug. 20, and like its predecessors, it will take place at Soldiers' field.

When music can draw together audiences of 115,000, the total capacity of the field, music is a powerful force in the community. It can be interpreted in no other terms. Music has done this and will do it again. With peculiar pleasure, therefore, THE TRIBUNE and other associated newspapers of the middle west announce their sponsorship of this summer's festival.

Those who have attended the Chicagoland music festivals in past seasons will remember how bands became as large as regiments, how choristers numbered themselves by thousands, how the huge field blazed and shimmered with lights, how the gigantic audiences thronged in for hours before the start of the program and thundered applause at every item. Just to be present was inspiring, was the experience of a lifetime.

Dances Will Be Featured.

The coming festival will be just as brilliant, just as inspiring. New features will alternate with old. Past festivals have set standards for this type of entertainment, but as nothing, not even the greatest of music festivals, can afford to stand still, every effort is being made to create new and better standards.

The dance, for example, will take an important part in this summer's spectacle, the first time that this art has found a place on the Chicagoland music festival programs. Here the three sides of the city of Chicago will be represented. From the north will come a large group to present its individual dances; from the west, another group with other dances; from the south, a third with its own. At the end the three groups will merge into one, with augmentations held in

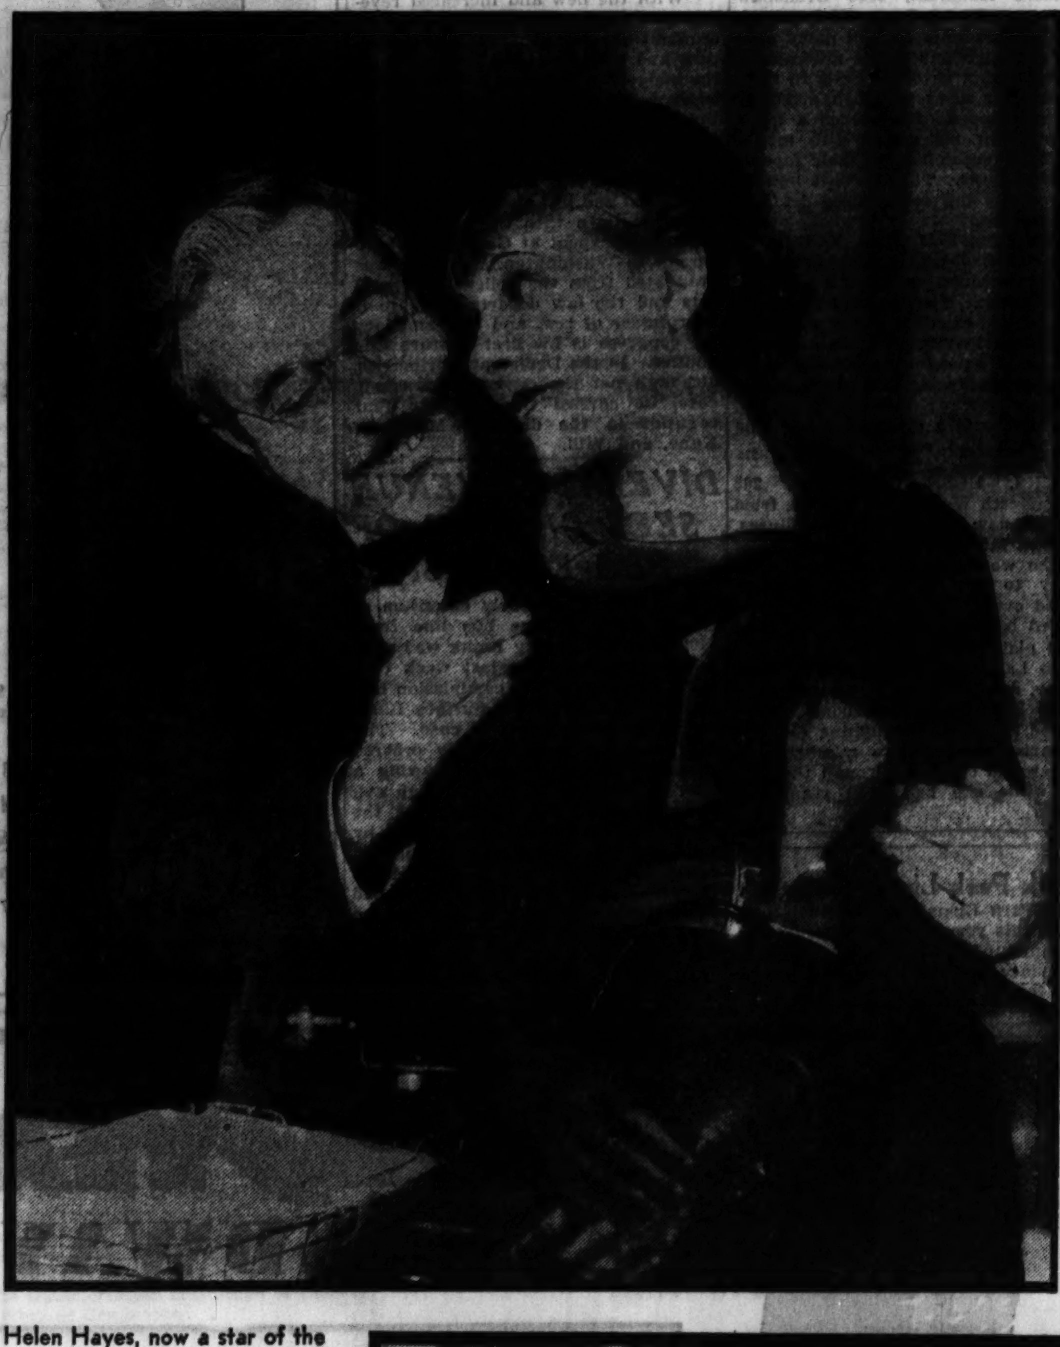
FROM HOLLYWOOD AND BROADWAY

Well, everybody looks pretty intense in this one. And "Sinners in the Sun"—(Oriental)—is the name of the movie in which these three, Carole Lombard, Adrienne Ames, and Chester Morris, are appearing.

We'll label this one "The Lean-to." Leaners—Robert Montgomery and Joan Crawford—as if you didn't know! Film—"Letty Lynton." It's playing over at the United Artists' theater.

Here is the versatile Miss Valaida, musician, dancer and singer, who is featured in the popular all-Negro revue, "Rhapsody in Black," which comes to the Apollo theater tonight for a return engagement. She is a striking personality in this entertainment, which has Ethel Waters as its star.



Helen Hayes, now a star of the screen as well as the stage, comes to the Harris theater tonight in the latest of her Broadway hits, a comedy called "The Good Fairy," written by Franz Molnar of Budapest and Vienna. This picture shows her in character, with Walter Connolly in the role of a Hungarian business man who thinks that she is the kind of good fairy he needs in his home.

Seraphic! All they need are wings! Eric Linden and Dorothy Jordan are appearing this week in "Roadhouse Murder," Palace.

"Devil Passes" as Comedy of Good and Evil

Study in Ethics with Old Nick as Hero and Six Stars in Its Cast.

By Charles Collins.

THERE are signs of a change in the spirit of the theater, reflecting a turn to the right in the current of the times. The world is in trouble—grinding, tedious, burdensome economic distress, requiring courage and patience and right thinking for its mastery — and the stage is undoubtedly reacting to the Zeitgeist, in the groping, instinctive way with which it follows the drifting moods of life. The whoopee age is over, the jazz age is shaking off its primitive fever, and the bawdy age is secretly pining for a spiritual bath. Or so it appears.

For example, here is "The Devil Passes," now at the Selwyn theater with a star spangled cast, submitting to playgoers a study in moral philosophy, involving such subtle stuff as the problems of good and evil. It gently and gracefully peels its modernists out of their shell of realism. It refutes its egotists, hedonists, and sensualists with their own actions.

It says, in effect: Deny God if you choose; mock at ideals as you wish; strike your poses of cynicism and selfishness and licentiousness to your hearts' content; but you will find, nevertheless, greater satisfaction in good deeds than in evil, and by their practice you will worship God and achieve virtue according to his will.

Tempter at Work.

This lesson comes from an authoritative source—a fellow whose experience in such matters is older than the hills. It is the Devil himself, walking the earth as a natural English clergyman, who issues this preachment, to the consternation of the worldlings, at a week-end house party. If a saint had come among them with this message they would have driven

Play Depicts Stock Crash of Fateful 1929

By Burns Mantle.

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

NEW YORK.—[Special.]—It has occurred to Milton Herbert Gropper, one of our younger playwrights who once furnished the late David Belasco with the comedy called "Ladies of the Evening," that a recalling of the events leading up to the murder—or rather, the panic—should provide an amusing play. So, he has written and produced a piece called "Bulls, Bears and Asses." It is, as it turns out, a well organized play and a sufficiently authentic picture of what happened that fateful fall of 1929 when papa lost his shirt, mamma lost her temper and the little fellow lost his chance of going to college.

But a doubt assails this reviewer as to its possible popularity. I find it hard to believe that those who went through the stock market panic and suffered will want to be reminded of that adventure. And I seriously question that any other public can be interested. Those who do not play Wall street hate Wall street. Those who do play Wall street hate and applaud it by the turns of their luck, but are not likely to be interested in a stage imitation of its activities. And those who neither play nor know about Wall street are, in the theater, either frankly uninterested, or a negligible minority.

However, "Bulls, Bears and Asses" is concerned principally with the adventures of the Charlie Moores before and after the crash. Charlie is a conservative clerk who has bought a bungalow, saved up $1,800, is wrapped up in his young son and is looking forward to a second child and a placid, comfortable middle age.

WEST SIDE OPENS TRADE EXHIBITION NEXT SATURDAY

Merchants Vie in Designing Alluring Booths.

OTTO F. PROFANT.

In a great blaze of electric light the Chicago West Town Chamber of Commerce Exposition will be opened at 6:30 o'clock next Saturday evening. Several hundred west side merchants will unlock their booths, a variety of amusements will start, and a band in every corner of the 20 acre plot will strike up a popular tune.

The exposition, to be spread out on the two blocks bounded by Madison and Adams streets, Laramie and Leamington avenues, is scheduled to run each evening through May 28 with the climax in the crowning of Miss West Town the final night. Headquarters are now open at 5104 West Madison street under the direction of Otto F. Profant, president of the West Town Chamber.

80 Per Cent of Space Sold.

"The basic thought back of this affair is the creation of new interest in and the stimulation of trade," explained Mr. Profant yesterday. "Well over 80 per cent of the available space has already been sold to merchants interested in presenting the best values in years for their customers. In addition the exposition is a precursor of the Republican and Democratic national conventions coming to the west side in June. It will show off what there is in this section of the city."

Exhibitors are vying with one another to prepare the most interesting and colorful booths in the exposition grounds. There is no limit to the work a merchant may put into dressing up his display, he may offer samples and souvenirs, but may not use noise making devices.

Mannequins parading on a runway will display the latest models in wearing apparel. Under a big tent will be an auto show and in another section an exhibit by west side manufacturers.

Twelve Girls Compete for Crown.

Lively interest in the selection of Miss West Town has been evinced for several weeks. Twelve girls, each sponsored by a business house or west side civic organization, are now in the running and each will receive an award the evening of May 28. The winner will be determined by the sale of season passes to the exposition, the candidate selling the greatest number earning the title of "Miss West Town."

Competitors for the crown are Miss Victoria Straubing, 134 North Central avenue; Miss Marguerite Becker, 3548 Pierce avenue; Miss Jean Mahanna, 344 South Cicero avenue; Miss Eunice Hirsch, 510 South Kedzie avenue; Miss Georgia Belanyi, 1151 South Cuyler avenue, Oak Park; Miss Dorothy A. Golden, 4715 West Adams street; Miss Frances Rezek, 34 South Central avenue; Miss Phyllis Alice Scanlan, 4314 West Van Buren street; Miss Alice Hammers, 4320 Wilcox street; Miss Joan Lenart, 5340 West Madison street; Miss Mildred Zoeller, 1039 North Lorel avenue, and Miss Bette Ruddy, 4703 West End avenue.

Tom Cody is chairman of the "Miss West Town" contest. Others assisting Mr. Profant with the plans for the exposition are H. J. Ruggles, Frank R. Campbell, C. C. Wedding, Charles G. Smith, Frank R. Campbell Jr., Henry Drewes, Bob Pritchard, F. J. Barlow, and Henry Hankermeyer.

British Old People's Home to Observe Anniversary

The seventh anniversary of the British Old People's home will be celebrated next Sunday afternoon by the Daughters of the British Empire at the home, 30th street and McCormick avenue, Hollywood. A musical program will be given by the Colonial Veterans' band. A Victoria day luncheon will be given by the organization at 1 o'clock Saturday afternoon at the Stevens hotel.

Church to Commemorate Laying of Cornerstone

Harvard Congregational church of Oak Park will commemorate the laying of the corner stone of its present church edifice 25 years ago with special services at 11 o'clock this morning. The Rev. C. Arthur Jevne will preach the sermon. This service climaxes a week of celebration of the silver anniversary by the various organizations of the church. William Pettigrew is general chairman.

CANDIDATES FOR TITLE OF "MISS WEST TOWN"

MISS FRANCES REZEK. MISS GEORGIA BELANYI. MISS JEAN MAHANNA. MISS PHYLLIS A. SCANLAN.

These are four more of the west side beauties competing for the title of "Miss West Town," to be conferred at the West Town exposition Saturday evening, May 28. An automobile will be presented to "Miss West Town" and there will be an award for every other contestant.

ROTINIANS TO GIVE BENEFIT PARTY WEDNESDAY EVE

4,000 Expected to Attend Affair.

THOMAS J. CODY.

One of the largest charity parties ever staged on the west side is predicted for Wednesday evening when the Madison Rotinians act as hosts to guests from all parts of Chicago and the suburbs. The affair is set for 8 o'clock at the Majestic ballroom, 5247 Madison street, with Tom Cody as master of ceremonies.

There will be dancing for those who want to dance, cards for those who like bridge, and a big program of entertainment throughout the evening, Mr. Cody said yesterday. Local broadcasting stations have promised the Rotinians the cooperation of well known radio stars and several major league baseball players have been invited to come and extend greetings.

Members of Committee.

Otto F. Profant, president of the Madison Rotinians, is assisting Mr. Cody as chairman of the affair. Other members of the general committee are J. A. Fetherston, chairman of program advertising; Al Moore, chairman of publicity; A. H. Kennedy Jr., chairman of the card room, and John M. Weiland, chairman of decorations. C. F. Kuehnle Jr., Robert Allen, Mrs. Christine Kline, Miss Maybelle Latimer, Paul Scanlon, Dr. Barnett Mindlin, Richard Daniels, Peter R. Convoy, John Harrington, Frank Chladek, and F. C. Straubing.

"From present indications there ought to be at least 4,000 persons here for the event," said Mr. Cody. "Tickets have been sold in every neighborhood in the city, proving that the depression hasn't made us forget all about entertainment. Miss Latimer, Mrs. Kline, and Mrs. Annabelle Coughlin are among those leading in ticket sales."

All of Proceeds for Needy.

All of the proceeds from the ball will be used to relieve suffering in the Austin community.

West siders who have already made reservations for large parties include Mrs. William Keller of Glen Ellyn, Mr. and Mrs. Kuehnle, Mrs. Nellie Convoy, Mrs. Allen, Miss Latimer, Mrs. Kline, Miss Alice Stuebner, Miss Isabel O'Donnell, Miss Betty Lehpamer, Mr. and Mrs. Profant, Nicholas Preib, Mr. and Mrs. Maurice Goldblatt, Elmer Maher, Mrs. Cody, Mr. and Mrs. Ray Coughlin, Mr. and Mrs. Al Clave, Mr. and Mrs. Joseph Fetherston, Mr. and Mrs. Al Moore, and Mr. and Mrs. Straubing.

Has 69-Lb. Specimen of Sail Variety.

Appreciating the doubts that accompany fish stories, Paul Gunthorp Warren, 156 Scottswood road, Riverside, is prepared to meet the skeptical glances of rivals with ample evidence of his success this spring while enjoying his favorite sport in the indigo colored Gulf stream current off the Florida Keys.

Mr. Warren has just received the shipment of a mounted sailfish, weighing 69 pounds and measuring 7 feet 8 inches in length, which he hooked during a ten day sojourn in the southland.

Certificate from Fish Club.

Accompanying the shipment was a certificate from the Miami Sail Fish club, sponsored by the Miami Junior Chamber of Commerce, which entitles the Riverside man to a membership in that organization.

Mr. Warren's catch is credited with having been the second biggest landing of sailfish for this season, the record being a 73 pounder. The big silver and blue colored fish of the swordfish species, took seven hundred feet of line, and there were forty-five minutes of thrills between the time it struck and was brought aboard the boat.

Help of Five Required.

Mr. Warren says the fish leaped above the water fifteen times while being pulled in, on each occasion spreading forth his sail. Efforts of the boat's captain, mate and three of Mr. Warren's companions were required to land the fish. One of the men held Mr. Warren's chair and another kept the fish pole in its socket. The fish was landed alive.

Mr. Warren, who has done much fishing in northern waters but who was making his first venture in deep sea fishing, says the supreme thrill he has experienced will not dampen his ardor for fishing of the ordinary variety.

I SAY, SERGEANT:

BY JAMES GAVIN.

TWO bridge games were played at the home of Mrs. Nellie Drayson, 5505 West Adams street. Her guests were Mrs. Rose Fishstein, 6970 Sheridan road; Mrs. Charles Beck, 367 Burlington road, Riverside, and Miss Margaret Neville, 410 Clinton avenue, Oak Park. Their game was played in the parlor. A burglar played his game alone. He opened the bidding by removing the screen. He finessed through the bedroom window, and made a little slam by taking three purses. Mrs. Drayson stopped a grand slam—her purse being in another bedroom.

Mrs. Henry A. Jost, 1226 North Edmer avenue, Oak Park, lost a diamond bracelet, valued at $700. She had attended a theater party and when she returned home she discovered the loss.

Three uniform caps, Nos. 1628, 1309, 1940 were stolen from Engine company 28, located at 2859 Loomis street. The firemen request that the culprits return them toot sweet.

JOHN REDEK, 426 North Harding avenue, hollered oooooh! He was coming out of the dining room when he ran into his sister, Agnes. She had a pair of scissors in her hand and the point stuck him in the left wrist.

Isadore Katzman, 4025 Grenshaw street, a senior at Crane High school, said the next time he will make sure there's enough gas in his automobile. He was taking several guests to their homes after a party when suddenly the car stopped. He walked a block for gas. On his return two men—with handkerchiefs over their faces—produced guns. They robbed him of $10 and his top coat. They let him keep the gas.

Ben Rosen, 3516 West Van Buren street, reports that somebody threw a brick through a window at 1652 Taylor street. They carried away the radio, fifty cans of olive oil, and twenty-two loaves of Italian cheese, valued at $15 per loaf.

August H. Moehle, 232 North Euclid avenue, Oak Park, was robbed of $14, his watch, and a diamond ring. The three men had revolvers.

MRS. ROSE GURRERA, 262 North Washtenaw avenue, tried a new remedy for her illness. It failed. A gypsy woman told her she would get well if she pinned money to her back. Mrs. Gurrera handed over $14. Sometime later she reached back to get the money. She found plain paper.

Miss Laura Camera, 1323 Edgemont avenue, decided to retire early for the night. Entering her bedroom she discovered her purse, containing $45, and her wrist watch, were missing. A burglar had crawled through the window while she had been reading a book.

Oak Park Lions' Outing.

Oak Park Lions will hold their first outing this year May 25 at Oak Hills, it is announced. This affair will take the place of the regular weekly luncheon.

DEMOCRATIC FOE CITES REID VOTE ON ECONOMY

Howell Assails Record of Congressman.

BY ARTHUR EVANS.

The wrecking of the federal economy bill program at Washington is being raised as a direct campaign issue in the 11th congressional district [Aurora-Joliet]. James A. Howell of Elgin, the Democratic nominee, in his battle against Congressman Frank R. Reid, Republican of Aurora, is using the congressional journal as a campaign textbook, and is scanning roll calls in the house of representatives for the votes his opponent is casting on measures to cut government cost, to reduce bureaucracy, and the army of tax eaters.

Congressman Reid's vote against the economy bill and his record as a dry are taken by Howell as his theme in his opening campaign utterances.

Must Cut Federal Expenses.

"A prudent legislator," says Howell, "would favor diversified economy legislation. With the government's deficit increasing daily, I am firm in the belief that unless federal expenditures are intelligently cut to meet government income, the return to prosperity will be indefinitely delayed.

"The failure of so many congressmen to support the budget bill, or their votes against it, failing to rise to a point of personal privilege to give reasons for opposing it, leads to the inference that either these men are blind to the necessity of economizing or are indifferent to their obligations as public officials.

"The vote of my opponent, Congressman Reid, against economy, and his stand for prohibition, emphasizes to the citizens of the 11th district that he is not concerned with the consequences of topheavy government costs or with the necessity of paying obligations already incurred.

Sees Boon in Repeal.

"I am of the opinion that the repeal of the 18th amendment and its enforcement laws, such as the Volstead act and the Jones 5 and 10 law, would curb the lawlessness that has plagued the country for a decade, and be a mighty factor in the solution of the unemployment problem.

"With the new and increased revenue that would be provided the government by legalizing the manufacture and sale of alcoholic beverages, the budget for the year could be painlessly balanced, at the same time returning to the people a portion of their largely curtailed personal liberty."

Howell, who is a native of Elgin, is married and has always lived in the old home town with the exception of the time he spent at Georgetown university in Washington, where he was graduated from the college of liberal arts and the law department. He is a professor of law, and his candidacy for congress is his first venture into politics. In the Democratic primaries, although not the organization candidate, he carried three of the four counties in the district—McHenry, Kane, and Will.

DIVERSEY AVENUE SEES CHANCE OF BUS EXTENSION

Possibility of an early extension of the Diversey avenue bus line from 6400 west to the city limits was seen in the announcement last week that the Illinois commerce commission had denied a motion of the Surface Lines for a rehearing of the case. The Surface Lines were recently ordered to install the extension, following a long series of hearings, at which evidence showing the necessity of the additional service was presented by improvement groups of the community. Representative Raymond T. O'Keefe announced that he had been informed by the commission that unless the Surface Lines take an appeal within the next 30 days they will be compelled to install the service immediately.

WHO'S WHO ON WEST SIDE

PHILIP E. SCANLAN.

Nearly 30 years on Chicago's west side have not dulled Philip E. Scanlan's active interest in its problems. At present he is giving much of his time and effort to the reëmployment of men and money campaign of which he is chairman for the 29th ward.

Mr. Scanlan is also busy as a member of the committee working on the West Town Trade exposition, to be held from May 21 to 28. He is a member of the West Town Chamber of Commerce, which organization is sponsoring the exposition. He is vice president of the Garfield Park Business Men's association, vice president of the Allied Florists' association, and a member of the following clubs: Oak Park Elks; West Town Kiwanis; Knights of Columbus, Barry council; Garfield Park aerie of Eagles; Central Lions club, and the Catholic Order of Foresters, Holy Family Court No. 1.

Mr. Scanlan was born in Clinton, Ia., and came in 1903 to the west side, where he has resided ever since. He lives with his wife and daughter, Phyllis, at 4314 West Van Buren street. Miss Scanlan is doing her bit in the West Town Trade exposition as a candidate for the title of "Miss West Town."

Following the races is one of Mr. Scanlan's favorite recreations. The care and cultivation of his flowers is another. His two jobs in life have been strangely different. For 20 years he worked as a railroad man. Now he owns a flower shop.

Builders' May Frolic.

Members of Circle chapter, Order of the Builders, will hold their May frolic June 3 at the Chatfield Arms roof garden. Hosts will be Robert Sander, Lester Millet, and Robert Kefgen.

VETERANS' BAND PLAYS TODAY AT HINES HOSPITAL

Hospital day will be observed today at Edward Hines Jr. hospital and again, as last year, bandsmen of Musicians post, No. 662, of the American Legion, have been invited to entertain the veterans. Harold Bachman will conduct.

The concert will start about 2 o'clock, following the serving of a chicken dinner to the bandsmen.

Middle west veterans of service under the globe, anchor and eagle will gather in Chicago June 4 for the annual Marine reunion and commemoration of the battle of Belleau Woods in the world war. As in former years, the rally is being sponsored by Marine post, but all former marines are invited to attend. Edward P. Dowling, 20 East Jackson boulevard, is chairman of the reunion committee. At the banquet to be held in the Auditorium hotel, Brig. Gen. Harry Lee, U. S. M. C., will be the principal speaker.

With Poppy day, May 26, drawing near, the Poppy association, 221 West Randolph street [Randolph 6865], requests that women who can lend a hand in selling poppies communicate with the association headquarters or the posts and camps in their neighborhoods. Many women are said to have responded to previous appeals, but the need for workers to make the day successful is in excess of the response thus far.

The Veterans' Poppy Day association is made up of United Spanish War veterans, and Veterans of Foreign Wars and the American Legion. The poppies, made in the hospitals by disabled ex-service men, are sold for whatever the buyers wish to give.

J. M. Hughes, chairman of the Poppy committee of Medill-Tribune post, No. 348, asks that women wishing to volunteer their services for Poppy day, send their names and addresses to him at Tribune Tower.

PIONEERS

MISS AMELIA SHARKEY.

Miss Amelia Sharkey, Glen Ellyn, is credited with having demonstrated that the field of drug store ownership and operation is not confined to the masculine sex. Six years ago Miss Sharkey received her degree in pharmacy at the University of Illinois. Four years ago she bought out her partner in the Glen Ellyn store. Now Miss Barbara Sharkey, 20, has decided to follow her sister's footsteps.

Miss Sharkey, a native of southern Illinois, says her original ambition was to study dramatic art and she progressed to the stage where she was given an audition at Carnegie hall, New York.

"I have discovered," she says, "that pharmacy offers an avenue for self-expression. Achievement such as I have had has meant working sixteen hours a day, seven days a week. I have had to give up social life and devote all of myself to my chosen career. But I would say it is decidedly worth while."

HOLD MEMORIAL SERVICE TODAY FOR ARTISTS

St. Stephen's Episcopal church, 3533 North Albany avenue, will hold its annual artists' memorial service at 4:30 o'clock this afternoon.

The service, which is held in commemoration of the American artists and art patrons who have died during the year, has become a yearly custom since it was started in May, 1929, by the Rev. Irwin St. John Tucker, the rector.

The musical program will be given by St. Stephen's choir under the direction of Miss Jane Ogden Hunter. George Goebel and Miss Betty Beechwood will be the soloists.

The program will open with "We March to Victory" by the choir. George Goebel will sing "My Task" and Miss Beechwood "My Redeemer and My Lord." Other numbers by the choir will be "Cherubim Song," by Bortnyansky, and "I Heard a Sound of Voices."

OBSERVES 80TH BIRTHDAY WITH 15 MILE WALK

It's All in Day's Work for Karl Westenberger.

Celebrating his 80th birthday last Tuesday by making his regular rounds as a house-to-house canvasser, Karl Clinter Westenberger returned to his rooming place, 1214 North Halsted street, to find that his landlord, Andrew Anton, had remembered the occasion with a bouquet of flowers.

KARL C. WESTENBERGER.

"To one who is advanced in years but still young in spirit," said Mr. Anton in paying tribute to his aged guest.

Mr. Westenberger, whose custom it is to walk fifteen miles a day at the occupation on which he depends for a living since leaving his trade as machinist, belittled the statement that his cheery disposition had made him many friends, eager to extend birthday congratulations.

"It is only common sense that keeps a person from becoming soured," corrected the octogenarian. "I read where some one the other day said it was the troubled times we remembered clearest. Not with me. Those are the times I have forgotten. The right sort of philosophy in meeting whatever happens is more important than what happens.

"Many of my daily contacts are among old friends and acquaintances. But suppose the dog barks and I am met by a slammed door. Common sense tells me I was a stranger and unexpected. Perhaps I arrived at a time of household discord.

"Why should I have expected a glowing welcome? As for the retort, 'no work, no money,' I can understand. Was I not out of work for eleven months in 1893 when I was young and strong and when two of my children died in one day? . . . But I am remembering that this is my birthday and that many more are ahead."

Mr. Westenberger was born in Germany and came to Chicago when he was 27 years old. He worked at his trade as machinist until he was 78.

NO. AUSTIN M. E. OPENS BIRTHDAY FETE WEDNESDAY

Two Ex-Pastors to Return for Anniversary.

THE REV. WILLIAM J. SCHUERMAN.

Fifteen years of progress of the North Austin Methodist Episcopal church will be celebrated this week with special services planned and participated in by all of the church organizations. The Rev. William J. Schuerman, pastor of the North Austin church for four years, will open the celebration Wednesday evening in the church auditorium, Waller and Potomac avenues.

The Rev. Joseph K. Dibden, founder of the church 15 years ago, will return for this service. It will mark the Rev. Mr. Dibden's first visit to Austin since 1918, when he left to accept the pastorate of the Mills Memorial Methodist Episcopal church in Port Huron, Mich.

The Rev. C. A. Bloomquist to Return.

Others who will take part in the Wednesday program include Dr. R. Scott Hyde, Methodist district superintendent, and the Rev. C. A. Bloomquist of the Glenn Ellyn Methodist Episcopal church, a former North Austin pastor.

On Thursday and Friday evenings a black face minstrel show will be presented with "Big Bill" Childs of radio fame as master of ceremonies. Old and new teachers, officers, and scholars of the church Sunday school will have a reunion at 9:45 next Sunday morning, after which the Rev. Mr. Dibden will preach the morning sermon on "Nehemiah, the Builder." At 3:30 o'clock in the afternoon there will be a homecoming rally with the Rev. Mr. Bloomquist as the speaker. There will be a tea at 5 o'clock and a combined rally of the Epworth and High School leagues at 7 o'clock. The Rev. Mr. Dibden will give a second address before the latter group on "The Goal of Life."

Men's Club to Close Celebration.

The celebration will close the evening of May 23 with an entertainment sponsored by the men's club. The motion picture "Fabiola," a story of Rome, will be shown.

The North Austin Methodist church was founded in 1917 in a store building by the Rev. Mr. Dibden, then a student at Garrett Biblical institute. The original membership of 13 has now increased to a congregation of more than 700 worshiping each Sunday in a modern stone edifice.

PIONEER LYONS CHURCH TO HOLD SPECIAL SERVICE

Congregation Had Its Start in Early Days.

Zion Evangelical Lutheran church, Lyons, will hold its annual "call of the hour" service next Sunday afternoon, the event being under the leadership of various societies of the church to create mission mindedness at home and abroad.

The church, of which the Rev. Martin Nickel has been pastor for nineteen years, represents an old landmark of early settlement days in the Lyons vicinity, its history dating back to pre-civil war time.

The present church structure on Ogden avenue, built in 1909, was preceded by a small frame building erected beside what was once the old plank road, pioneer highway from the southwest into Chicago. Mrs. Anna Meyers, who died two years ago at the age of 95, was the last of the members of that early congregation to be buried from the church.

Watches Set by Curfew Bell.

This is the church whose curfew bell has been heard on Saturday nights for a long period of years. So accurate was the curfew toll during the régime of John Schuenemann, a former sexton, that folk far out on the prairie were accustomed to set their watches accordingly.

The church had its beginnings in what was termed a "religious society." This group erected a chapel where a Sunday school was conducted and preaching services were held whenever feasible. Eventually, the community society was discontinued, and the Lutherans alone kept on with their work. In the fall of 1884, a church organization was effected and incorporated under the official name of Zion Evangelical Lutheran church, U. A. C. [unaltered Augsburg confession].

Brick Edifice Erected.

When it became apparent that the little chapel could no longer adequately accommodate the growing congregation the present brick structure of Gothic design was erected, and became a decided asset to the town and community.

The Rev. Mr. Nickel was preceded by only three pastors, the Rev. Jacob Burckhardt, the Rev. Paul Lavwig, and the Rev. John Schert.

The church is particularly proud of its unique education system, which is a combination of the Sunday school, the Christian day school, and higher education. Ninety-six pupils are enrolled at this time. Requirements of teachers in the school are eight years of Sunday school and day school religious training, two years of Bible class study, and two years of normal training.

English and German Services.

Zion Lutheran church for years has been a bi-lingual church, services being conducted both in the English and the German tongue.

Officers of the congregation are P. A. Graunke, chairman; A. O. Dierson, recording secretary; Bernard Petrowske, corresponding secretary; George W. Lange, treasurer; Gilbert Graunke, financial secretary, and Walter Dehnicke, assistant financial secretary.

St. Juliana Parish Band Wins Catholic Contest

The 15 piece band of St. Juliana parish, Touhy and Osceola avenues, Edison Park, recently won first prize in the annual Catholic band contest held at De La Salle institute. John A. Carney is director of the band. The members are: Forrest Fetsch, Stanley Pfister, Miss Rosemary O'Grady, Raymond Berresheim, Ernest Leonartz, Claude Ducette, Edmund Vosmir, Frank M. Perz, Daniel Stewart, Vincent Lewandowski, Bud O'Grady, Gerard Schneidwind, Robert Barrett, John Mountain, and John Manning.

GATEWAYS GROUP TO ROTATE ITS MEETING PLACES

James Mansfield Is New President.

James Mansfield, president of the village of Brookfield, recently elected president of the Western Gateway association, plans an innovation in the monthly meetings of the group, which includes nearly a dozen western suburbs located on or near the Chicago, Burlington and Quincy right of way. It is Mr. Mansfield's intention to shift the meeting place each month to the various towns. Heretofore, the meetings have all been held in La Grange.

Succeeds W. P. Saunders.

Mr. Mansfield succeeds Walter P. Saunders, president of La Grange, who served five terms as president of the association and who, though continuing deeply interested in the group's activities, wished to pass its leadership along the line of village presidents, all of whom are regional vice presidents by virtue of their office.

Ernest H. Wagner of Riverside has been elected secretary of the association, and John Killips of Lyons, treasurer.

Will Continue Harmony.

Mr. Mansfield says it is his purpose to continue the harmony prevalent among members of the association which seeks the betterment of the western suburbs. An immediate objective will be the formulating of plans for acquainting the public with arteries leading to the Chicago Zoological gardens when they open in 1933. An intensive drive for new members will also be launched. As in the past, the association will fight legislation deemed detrimental to the country towns.

200 CHICAGO BUSINESS MEN HAVE HOMES IN GENEVA, C. OF C. SAYS

Two hundred Chicago business men find Geneva, Ill., a place of residence, combining advantages of the city with the beauty and peace of the country, according to a booklet issued by the Geneva Chamber of Commerce, of which David M. Flynn is secretary.

In extending a hand of welcome, the chamber describes Geneva as possessing the quaint charm of a sturdy old English village, combined with the activities of a modern industrial center. It is pointed out that founders selected the beauty spot of the Fox river valley and that their descendants have added utility to that natural beauty.

In the business section the streets are 100 feet wide, and in the last five years $1,000,000 has been spent for paving. The majority of workers in a diversified line of manufacturing enterprises own their own homes, the booklet says.

The booklet calls attention to the fact that there are no old schoolhouses in Geneva, and that all school buildings are located off main traveled streets, thus avoiding traffic hazards for the pupils. The public library has 11,500 volumes. Geneva has nine churches. The Chamber of Commerce lays stress on Geneva's recreational features. With the Fox river winding through the very heart of the city, pleasures for all, in all seasons, are promised. Within the city limits in midriver is Herrington Island park.

HE'S SEEN SEVEN DEPRESSIONS AND THEY ALL PASSED

So Wm. Henry Dopp Says This One Will, Too.

BY ONEY FRED SWEET.

William Henry Dopp, 78 years old, 400 Kensington avenue, La Grange, figures the country has gone through seven depressions, varying in degrees of intensity, during the span of his own life. Mr. Dopp lists the present reaction as "No. 8," and while he admits it takes its place along with the 1893 slump, he sees three reasons why conditions are much better now than they were then.

"We are better off than in '93," says Mr. Dopp, "due to the federal reserve, the fact that we are a creditor instead of a debted nation, and because our relief work is well organized rather than being limited to mere soup kitchens."

Mr. Dopp had no inclination to pose before his interviewer as an expert economist, but, recognized as being peculiarly active in his mental processes for a man able to look back nearly eighty years, he was asked to present his theories on the depression subject. He objected, however, to the suggestion that his guess was perhaps as good as a host of others that had been made during the last two years.

No Guessing To Him.

"I don't feel that there is any guess about it," insisted Mr. Dopp. "The one thing these eight depressions have taught me, as the result of observation, is that they are psychological. Once confidence is restored, prosperity returns. We would have been started out of this depression before this had it not been for the performance of congress keeping industries in a state of uncertainty. I look for a change to come as soon as the political parties have made their nominations."

Mr. Dopp says the depression of 1857 is a vague childhood recollection of his, but he recalls that his father, pacing the floor, made him aware that times were troubled. Next came the ups and downs of the civil war period. Then 1873 when he was a college student and, like seventy-five per cent of his classmates, was obliged to shift ambitions to suit conditions. He also lists 1884 as a slump period.

Conditions Bad in '93.

"The panic of 1893," says Mr. Dopp, "had many bad features not present today. That was a time when even government bonds went begging for cash, and you couldn't sell a five dollar gold piece to the average person for a nickel because he didn't have the nickel. The country was flooded with foreign goods.

"Next came the financial troubles of 1907, then the slowing down in 1921 and, in 1929, we were called upon to pay the price of over speculation."

Mr. Dopp, engaged in the manufacturing of soap makers' and butchers' machinery in Buffalo, from 1885 to 1902, said his fortunes suffered as the result of business upsets, and that his family, like most others, is affected by the present depression.

"But the country emerged on every occasion, just as it will again," he says, "and those who kept their faith and were in a position to back that faith by investments profited hugely."

Many Opportunities Now.

"To have watched the depressions come and go, and to consider them all from the perspective of 78 years leaves one an optimist on America," says Mr. Dopp. "Such a time as this offers boundless opportunities for those with money to invest in common sense fashion."

There is one phase of economics however, which Mr. Dopp considers ridiculous and that is the age limit for workers as fixed by various corporations.

"Here I am at 78," he explained, "almost as vigorous of body as at any time of my life, and if I may say, even keener as to judgment, and yet thirty years ago, employers told me I was too old. Look at the leaders of today, and you will find most of them above sixty.

"What makes this age limit attitude most irritating is the fact that for years, when a fellow starts out in life, he is told he is too young. I remember after graduating from college how I heard that phrase on all sides. 'Go and get experience,' they told me. And at fifty, when I was thoroughly grounded for the teaching of science in college, a career which I had planned in my youth, I was informed that I was past the age limit."

BUSINESS MEN NAMED TO BOARD OF CHURCH CLUB

Kloeckner Church Choir to Give "Monkeyshines"

F. W. MRKVICKA HEADS 23D WARD BODY 7TH TIME

Installation Reception to Be Held Saturday.

FRANK W. MRKVICKA.

Frank W. Mrkvicka, 4201 West Cullerton street, elected president of the Central Improvement association of the 23d ward, will be installed in office at a meeting of the group Saturday evening. Dr. E. J. Lusk will be installed as secretary of the organization for the sixth time.

Other new officers are Charles Votava, vice president; Henry Zadek, financial secretary, and J. A. Stasenka, treasurer. On the new board of directors are President Mrkvicka, Secretary Lusk, Charles Votava, J. A. Stansenka, James Votava, John Adams, Henry Zedak, and James Jecmen.

Plan Installation Reception.

Charles Votava is chairman of the entertainment committee for the reception to be held in connection with the installation ceremonies at 4149 West 26th street.

The Central Improvement association, organized in 1925, has grown from a membership of 55 to 275. This membership comes from a territory bounded by 18th street on the north, Crawford avenue on the east, Ogden avenue on the south, and the Belt Line on the west.

Works for Lights on 22d.

Among its major achievements the group, either alone or in coöperation with neighboring organizations, obtained the Dvorak Junior High school, now in process of construction and the repairing of Keeler avenue. It supported the Crawford avenue bridge project and is coöperating with the 22d Street Parkway Business Men's association in obtaining a new lighting system for 22d street.

ELMHURST CLUB TO GIVE CONCERT TUESDAY EVENING

The Elmhurst College Glee club, John L. Rezatto conductor, will hold its annual Elmhurst concert in the college gymnasium on Tuesday night. The club will sing tonight at Immanuel's Evangelical church, 70th street and Michigan avenue. Glen Most will be bass soloist at the Elmhurst concert; Richard Elliott, euphonium soloist, and Waldemar B. Hille, pianist. Members of the quartet will be Henry Meier, first tenor; Leonard Weigel, second tenor; Frank Kroll, baritone, and Edwin Riske, bass.

This Week in the Garden

Monday, May 16.

Continue planting perennials in the border. Well established potted plants may be expected to make good plants by the end o the season and may furnish some bloom. Violas last longer during hot weather than the ordinary pansy. Potted amaryllis that flowered in the house should be plunged in a semi-shady spot in the garden and kept well watered until fall. As soon as vegetable seeds have sprouted and shown above the ground cultivation should begin. If the rows were well marked hoeing between the rows may begin even before the seeds germinate. There is a lot of satisfaction in being able to keep well ahead of the weeds. Keep the soil from covering the plants. Hand weed in the rows. Keep the garden edged up and in trim condition. Thin beans early to 3 to 4 inches; beets to 3 inches; carrots, 2 to 3 inches; lettuce, 6 to 12 inches; muskmelons, 2 to 3 vines to the hill; spinach, 2 to 4 inches; Swiss chard, 6 to 10 inches.

Tuesday, May 17.

Watch the roses to see that aphids and other insect pests are kept down. Root aphids are controlled with tobacco dust or by spreading tobacco stems over the ground beneath the plants. If house plants are badly infested with white fly, throw the plants away. Spray plants with nicotine when the insects are young, and keep on spraying about every ten days. Wash off scales which appear on the leaves of palms by using a brush dipped in soapsuds.

Wednesday, May 18.

Spray apples and pears as soon as the petals fall. Use arsenate of lead or other arsenical poisons for coddling moth and pear slug. Plant lice [aphids or green fly] appear on pear trees as soon as the leaves unfold. Spray with an extract of tobacco or kerosene emulsion. Plant gladiolus corms every ten days for a succession of bloom. Keep the different kinds labeled properly for future reference. All tubbed plants stored in the conservatory and suitable for outdoor decoration may be placed out of doors now. Bay trees are especially desirable for this purpose.

Thursday, May 19.

Watch the currant and gooseberry bushes for green fly. Stomach poisons will soon kill these pests, but do not delay spraying.

Keep the garden paths edged and tidy. Use a garden line to keep the edges straight. Gravel walks may be kept clean and free of weeds by carefully spraying with a reliable weed killer. Use this on a quiet day to prevent the liquid from being blown on the grass. Brick roadways may be kept free of weeds in the same way. Water new lawns as often as necessary, but do a thorough job of it. Use a fine spray instead of a heavy stream of water.

Friday, May 20.

Some of the more tender annuals may be planted in their permanent beds outdoors now. These include the bedding plants that were started in the greenhouse or hotbed. The castor bean is excellent for massing to hide a shed or poor view, but it likes full sunlight best. In front of it use fountain grass [pennisetum] and in front of that use foliage plant, such as coleus golden bedder. Lobelia is good for edging and also alyssum little gem. Try some of the fairy lily [zephyranthus] with viola Jersey gem. Plant tomatoes in good, rich soil. Plant a small plot of strawberries for home use. Keep the blossoms picked off the first year to throw the strength into plant growth. Mulch beds that will bear this year. Good clean straw is sufficient to keep the fruits from becoming soiled from contact with the soil. Plant food applied now should improve the quality of the fruit.

Saturday, May 21.

Don't hurry with sowing cucumbers, melons, squash, and similar plants, for they are at home in hot weather. A spoonful of nitrate of soda in 10 quarts of water sprinkled along the row aids leaf crops.

If the tulip varieties have become mixed, be sure to mark them as soon as they flower. Early tulips are now in bloom. Decide whether you can use any of them next season.

Get the pool ready for water lilies.

CRANE GLEE CLUB TO DEPICT NEW ROMEO, JULIET

Romeo and Juliet in modern interpretations—as Eugene O'Neill or Mae West might depict the famous lovers—will be presented for the entertainment of west siders at 8 o'clock the evening of May 25 in the auditorium of Crane Technical High school. Members of the Crane Tech Glee club, directed by Llewys Thomas, music instructor, will give the performance.

Irving Stein will have the lead as Romeo while Antony Pacelli will portray Juliet as a modern flapper. Other leading rôles are to be taken by Sheldon Ruttenberg, Joseph Vreuls, Arthur Clark, Warren Goldstock, Souren Chitjian and Tad Brown.

Northwest Federation to Wage Campaign.

Invitations were sent last week by the Northwest Federation of Improvement clubs to Mayor Cermak and other city and county officials representatives in the legislature from the 25th senatorial district, and to all northwest side civic and improvement groups to attend a massmeeting on May 26 in the Wilson park fieldhouse, Wilson and Milwaukee avenues, to launch a movement for a state-wide constitutional convention to consider reapportionment.

The invitations were sent out through John Klier, secretary of the federation, who announced that while the drive for a convention would be formally initiated at the meeting on May 26, the federation plans to create city-wide interest in the movement by appealing to civic groups in all sections of the city. These groups will be asked to sponsor similar massmeetings to crystallize sentiment in their respective sections.

Plan Loop Session Later.

The community gatherings are expected to climax in a downtown meeting to be addressed by state and city leaders, Mr. Klier said. The movement, it is expected, will have gathered enough momentum by that time to receive consideration from downstate leaders.

Richard J. Wuerst, chairman of the special committee of the federation which is working out plans for the massmeeting, pointed out that Cook county with a preponderance of the state's population, has only 19 of the 51 senatorial districts.

County at Mercy of Downstate.

"As a result of inequalities in apportionment and representation Cook county is at the mercy of downstate in revenue matters as in everything else," said Mr. Wuerst. "There has been a shift and growth in population during the last 30 years that has left many sections of the state, particularly Cook county, without proper representation. This should have been corrected in 1911. The legislature thus far has failed to make any effort to do so."

MRS. G. C. SIKES HEADS AUSTIN VOTERS' LEAGUE

The Austin League of Woman Voters has elected Mrs. George C. Sikes, 5740 Ohio street, to preside over its affairs the coming year. The rest of the new slate includes Mrs. Jessie A. Read, first vice president; Miss Grace Benjamin, second vice president; Mrs. John Van Wakeman, recording secretary; Mrs. Paul W. Richer, corresponding secretary, and Miss Jennie S. Allison, treasurer.

The 1932-33 board of directors is composed of Mrs. Harris S. Keeler, Mrs. Carl W. Miller, Mrs. Wiley W. Mills, Miss Catherine O'Rourke, Mrs. J. J. Rankin, and Mrs. Eliza M. Watts.

Mrs. Sikes announced last week that, by a recent ruling of the Cook County League of Woman Voters, women may join the league between May 1 and Nov. 1 for $1, half the regular dues.

Lecturer to Tell How to Train Subconscious Mind

Two important lectures are scheduled for the coming week at the Jewish People's institute, 3500 Douglas boulevard. Dr. Percy Ward will discuss the subject "How to Educate Your Subconscious Mind" at 8 o'clock tomorrow evening. On Wednesday evening Dr. J. S. Werlin of the University of Chicago will give an evaluation and summary of bolshevik Russian history.

CHORUS FOR COLLEGE LIFE REVUE

Officials of the war department will inspect cadets of the Austin and Crane Technical High school reserve officers' training corps regiments when they parade at 11 o'clock Wednesday morning at Merrick park.

As in former years, Col. A. V. P. Anderson, R. O. T. C. officer of the Sixth corps area, will review and inspect the regiments. The Austin regiment has been rated an honor school unit at the last two inspections, a distinction accorded to fewer than 20 schools in the entire United States.

Representatives of Columbus Park post, No. 606, of the American Legion will present 50 awards to the cadets recommended by Capt. Ora Jenks, instructor, as the most efficient and the neatest throughout the term.

After the inspection Col. Anderson will question the cadets on drill regulations and call upon certain details to execute various movements. This part of the inspection is planned to test the leadership of the various officers.

HOMEMADE AUTO THAT COST $10 STIRS BOYS' ENVY

Nickel Fills Gas Tank of Tribune Carrier.

An automobile, built in his own backyard at a cost of $10, is the prized possession of Billy Smith, 14, 4725 Saratoga avenue, Downers Grove. Billy has his brother, Robert, 22, to thank for the design, the assembling of parts and building the car by devoting evenings to the task for three weeks.

The first demonstration of the car brought Downers Grove folk to windows and doorways. The chassis is six feet long, painted sky blue, and the car can travel at a speed of 25 miles an hour.

Summing up the cost of the car, Robert Smith estimated the second-hand 2½ H.P. bicycle motor at $5. tin for the hood at $1.95, paint 20c, wheel from an old coaster wagon, $1.50.

Declines Offer to Trade.

Admirers among the boys of the village have offered to trade various possessions of their own for the miniature car, but Billy is too attached to it. The car not only serves for pleasure purposes, but aids him in delivering the TRIBUNE.

Billy says the gas tank can be filled for a nickle, and that he parks the car under the front porch at night. Billy has also known how it feels to have his car stolen. Recently, one morning he peered beneath the porch, discovered his loss and hurried to the police. The machine was found abandoned in Seely avenue. It had been stripped of its lights and battery. Billy thinks something ought to be done about these automobile thieves.

Screen and Griddle Used.

Mr. and Mrs. W. W. Smith, parents of Billy and Robert, say they knew something was going on evenings out at the barn, but had hardly expected a going automobile to be the result. Among the articles missed in the house during the building of the automobile was a piece of window screen, which later showed up on the radiator and a stove griddle, which was transformed into an axle base.

ST. WENCESLAUS CHURCH TO HOLD SPECIAL SERVICE

Next Sunday morning at St. Wenceslaus church, De Koven and Des Plaines streets, special services will commemorate completion of the remodeling of the historic edifice following its removal across the street. Final touches have been made in repairing the tower of the church which was built in 1865.

It is recalled that, although hungry flames lapped about the church during the Chicago fire, heat blistered its paint and sparks were blown against its roof, the edifice was spared.

"This little church that withstood the terrible flames is still standing, a stanch symbol of the efficacy of faith," says the Rev. Thomas M. Sampolinski, pastor.

W-G-N ARTISTS HIGH IN RANKS OF COMPOSERS

Salerno to Sing Their Works Tuesday.

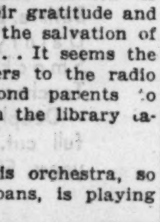
LAWRENCE SALERNO. [Theatrical Studio.]

Although not as generally known as it might be, it nevertheless is a fact that nearly all of W-G-N'S staff of musicians are talented composers. Lawrence Salerno, Neapolitan baritone, will demonstrate this when he appears with the "Troubadors" at 9 o'clock Tuesday evening, for every song but one is by a staff musician. Those represented will include Del Owen, Mrs. Gaston Du Moulin, Allan Grant, Fred Meinken, Carl Hoefle, and Salerno, himself, with "Under a Mexican Moon." Meinken, incidentally, wrote "The Wabash Blues."

There's going to be a hot time in the old town for the radio trade, what with more than 15,000 visitors expected for the 8th annual convention and trade show of the Radio Manufacturers' association May 23 to 26. The exhibits will not be open to the public, but will be unveiled for the public a bit later. New tubes, new short wave apparatus, new automobile sets, new loud speakers, new cabinet designs, ad infinitum!

Among the prominent speakers are none other than Harold A. La Fount, federal radio commissioner, who will talk on television, and Merle Thorpe, editor of the Nation's Business, whose subject is "How Is Business?" Well—

The Mother's day gift of the Harold Teen gang—changing the broadcast hour from 6:15 to 5:15 in the evening—has struck a responsive chord. Hundreds of mothers have written to W-G-N expressing their gratitude and saying the change is the salvation of their evening meal. . . . It seems the rush of the youngsters to the radio even was forcing fond parents to spread table cloths on the library table.



DORIS ROBBINS. [Maurice Seymour Studio.]

Herbie Kay and his orchestra, so popular with Chicagoans, is playing his first stage stand this week at a loop movie house. Not so with Doris Robbins, his attractive vocalist, who came for a four week engagement and stayed the season. She was featured in the stage version of "Whoopee." . . . Herbie takes to the road soon and will be in Dallas, Tex., this summer. . . . Get your ears tuned up, for Earl Burnett will be back at the Lincoln Taveren and on W-G-N beginning May 26. . . . Duke Ellington will follow him five weeks later.

Joe Sanders and Carlton Coon met during war days. The two buddies decided to form an orchestra. Their first, a four piece outfit, grew into the rampant Kansas City Nighthawks, who pioneered late dance music over the air a decade ago with programs which were pulled in by night owl DX fans everywhere. The Nighthawks have ridden from success to success, with legionsc of loyal fans everywhere.

Two weeks ago death took Coonie. Listeners usually thought of Joe as the mainspring; he it was who fronted over the air. But it was Coonie who worked backstage, who made contacts. Now it's a sad, lost Joe who does the "Laugh, Clown, Laugh" act at the College Inn, his famous clarion voice ringing out a popular chant as his fingers ramble over the ivories. He calls himself "the old left hand," but he's carrying on—and with a mighty fine orchestra, both sweet and hot.

Comes word now that the characters of the Thompkins' Corners sketch are coming to life in advertising comics. . . .

"Firmly entrenched at the Edgewater Beach until Sept. 15" will be good news to Charlie Agnew's friends. Charlie is adding two more pieces to his band for the beach walk season, making 15 in all. . . . Don Pedro will play for the Woman's Benefit association pageant Wednesday evening in the Stadium with an augmented orchestra of 20 pieces. Pedro fans will keep track of him this summer via NBC from Cincinnati. . . . And now, up steps George Devron, who plays at the Stevens, to challenge any and all bandmasters to a bout for the orchestral handball honors.

Old Maestro Bernie and all the lads have quashed rumors by announcing a long term contract to continue selling malt. They will be on W-G-N at 8 o'clock Tuesdays as usual, "unforgivable baritone" and all. . . . Jack Denny likes orchestra work because it gives one a chance to get acquainted with one's milkman. Including last night, he leads all others in appearing 12 times on the Wandering Dance Hour. . . . Joe Moss with 9 and Wayne King with 8 broadcasts complete the big three.

On the air Friday evening with Paul Whiteman's orchestra was Sis Gleason, Northwestern university freshman . . . winner of Paul's collegiate audition last week . . . daughter of Mr. and Mrs. H. G. Gleason of Wilmette . . . age 18 . . . height 5 feet 2 . . . weight 112 . . . brown eyed brunette.

EACH A QUEEN

A diamond queen is Jean De Lee (left), for she is the sweetheart in the baseball sketch having its premiere at 9:30 o'clock Tuesday evening over W-G-N. Ethel Shutta is the featured songbird with Jack Benny and George Olsen at 8:30 o'clock (central daylight time) on Mondays and Wednesdays over an NBC-WJZ network. In private life she is Olsen's queen and Mrs.

FEEDING TIME AT ZOO WILL BE BROADCAST BY W-G-N THURSDAY

The roaring of lions, snarls of tigers and the growls of the leopards will sound through your loudspeakers Thursday afternoon if you're tuned in on W-G-N at 3:45 o'clock. The occasion will be an hour broadcast from Lincoln park zoo, and the howls and growls will be produced directly in front of the microphone by the captive beasts at feeding time as an exclusive feature of W-G-N.

Feeding time, 4 o'clock, always has been a popular visiting time for Chicagoans at the big zoo in the north side park. Hundreds of visitors gather each day to watch the feeding of the animals in the big "cat" house. When the huge chunks of raw beef which form the principal part of the evening meal is tossed into the cages by the keepers, all of the animals immediately start roaring.

Special broadcast lines have been installed for W-G-N at the lion house, and Quin Ryan and Don Lang, the animal story man, will be there to describe the zoo buildings and the animals, fish and birds.

Mr. Lang will furnish technical information on animals, being familiar with the peculiarities and habits of every known beast. Floyd Young, assistant chief keeper at the zoo, and H. Otto Weege, superintendent of Lincoln park, also will assist in the broadcast.

Lincoln park zoo and its exhibits are known throughout the world. Chicago has one of the finest collections of animals, birds, and fish, and additions are being made each year to the zoo. The collection of apes is the best in the country, and a special house devoted entirely to this specie is maintained.

CRIMSON CIRCLE IS THRILLER FOR ENO CRIME CLUB

"The Crimson Circle," another Edgar Wallace thriller, will be offered in dramatic form during the broadcasts of the Eno Crime club over W-G-N and the Columbia network at 8:30 p. m. Tuesday and Wednesday.

The story concerns an unknown and mysterious blackmailer who terrorizes London under the sinister name and signature of "The Crimson Circle." After the blackmailer has eluded London's finest detectives, Inspector Parr of Scotland Yard and Frank Yale, a private detective, set to work to capture him, utilizing Parr's ability to reconstruct crimes by psychometric powers, that is, the ability to tell extraordinary things by sense of touch. The situation is further complicated by a series of murders, one of which mysteriously happens just as Parr and Yale are questioning a suspect.

Piano, 'Cello Program to Be on W-G-N Saturday

The two kings of the percussion and stringed instruments, the piano and the cello, will be featured by Herbert Johnson, and Olda Jirousek, in recital at 7:45 p. m. Saturday on W-G-N. This combination has been favored by the great composers, and some of their greatest masterpieces have been written for it.

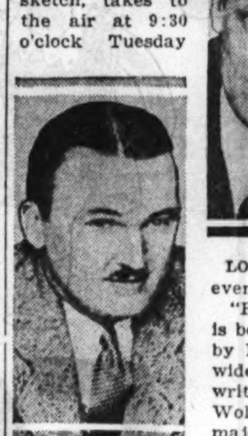
Sun Radio Headlines BIG LEAGUES OFF ALL OVER AGAIN IN W-G-N SKETCH

Tuesday Opening Day for Rookie Pair.

Major league baseball teams opened their title race a month ago, but there will be another official big league opening day when "Big Leagpers and Bushers," W-G-N's newest sketch, takes to the air at 9:30 o'clock Tuesday evening.

LOUIS WOLF.



PAUL FOGARTY.

"Big Leaguers" is being produced by Paul Fogarty, widely known writer, and Louis Wolf, a former major and minor league ball player. Fogarty is best known as the author of the popular song, "Betty Co-Ed."

Just Two Rookies!

The sketch is a comic drama of the experiences of two rookie baseball players with a major league club. The leading character, king of innocent humor and of a "fast ball" delivery, is Rube Appleberry, a lean and lanky left handed pitcher from Posey county, Indiana. Rube is on his third or fourth trip into the big leagues and he hopes to stick this time and scale the heights of stardom.

Rube's partner is a dapper little fellow, Tommy Malloy, fresh from college and trying with all his might to win a place in the regular lineup of Panthers from the veteran shortstop, Butch Grogan. Tommy is quite a ball player and just as bashful as Rube is forward.

Tommy has a girl, too, Betty Deering, who is constantly cheering for him to get ahead. Rube transfers his affections in every town his team visits.

"Mac" Is Manager.

The third outstanding character of the sketch is "Mac" McConnell, the manager of the Grays. Mac is the peppery, practical boss of the team who rules his men with an iron hand. He is modeled after the late Knute Rockne in type and is to resemble the famous Notre Dame coach, especially in his dressing room talks.

Paul Fogarty, the author, is cast in the rôle of Mac on the air sketch. Fogarty, incidentally, is the hero of "Fogarty's Football Pants," a famous Rockne yarn.

Rube Appleberry is played by Lawrence Read, a veteran stage actor. Gordon Sprague takes the part of Tommy Malloy, while Tom's sweetheart is played by Jean De Lee. A radio announcer, who breaks into the sketch at frequent intervals, detailing the play as the game progresses is presented by Bob Elson, W-G-N's sports announcer.

"Big Leaguers and Bushers" will be presented at 9:30 o'clock on Tuesday, Thursday and Saturday evenings.

Hours Changed for Three W-G-N Saturday Programs

SEE RADIO CZAR EMERGING FROM COPYRIGHT WAR

Air May Have Ruler Like Baseball, Movies.

BY MARTIN CODEL.

WASHINGTON, D. C.—[Special.]—Like baseball and the movies, the American broadcasting industry may soon decide to be regulated from within by a "czar" of its own choosing.

This is one reasonable inference being drawn in radio circles from the selection of Oswald F. Schuette, ex-newspaperman who won wide fame for leading the independent radio manufacturers in their battles against the so-called radio trust, to direct the copyright activities of the broadcasters.

Of course Schuette is not definitely slated to become the "czar" of radio, albeit in his new field he will virtually direct the policies of the organized broadcasters in their effort to combat the recent dictum of the American Society of Composers, Authors, and Publishers that all broadcasting stations must pay 5 per cent of their gross income for the privilege of performing its musical works.

Idea Is Not New.

The idea of a "czar" has long been considered in the radio ranks. In its scant twelve years of existence, broadcasting "just grew," and the broadcasters became more keenly aware than ever that they were suffering from lack of adequate leadership when the copyright owners made their demands.

The whole matter of a ruling power for radio, supported by the broadcasters at large but interested in no single station, company or group, may be brought to a head at the next annual convention of the National Association of Broadcasters in St. Louis next October.

In his new post, Schuette will be associated with the National Association of Broadcasters, which embraces about one-third of the stations in the United States and nearly all the better class stations. He will delve into the entire field of music with a view to determining the hitherto unknown factor in the copyright situation—just how much music belongs to the "public domain" by virtue of expired copyrights and how much is controlled under copyrights.

Schuette will also carry the fight to congress to secure recognition of radio, as a major consumer of music, in a new copyright law to replace the present law, written long before radio came into being.

Copyright Problem Serious

The copyright problem is unquestionably the most serious facing radio today. The latest demands of the American society, largest of several copyright pools, are tantamount to a 300 to 500 per cent increase over present license fees collected from radio. At present radio as a whole pays a little less than $1,000,000 to the society. The new schedule announced by the "czar" of the copyright owners, E. Claude Mills, would retain this fee and also would require all stations and networks to pay an additional 5 per cent of gross on all sponsored programs, or nearly $3,000,000 more.

BECKER TO TELL SURE-FIRE WAY OF CATCHING 'EM

Fishermen who are bothered season after season by the fact that the fish simply won't bite may find some consolation in W-G-N's broadcast at 9 o'clock tonight when Bob Becker, THE TRIBUNE's hunting and fishing writer, tells about unusual methods of fishing in many lands.

He will describe one practiced by various South American tribes of Indians, which involves the use of a secret root plant. When mashed up by the squaws and tossed into a pool it almost instantly causes all the fish to come to the surface quite helpless, making it an easy matter to gather in a fine string without any waiting between bites.

Becker's broadcast will take his listeners not only to Brazil but also for another kind of fishing to Florida and to Alaska for a few minutes with the salmon.

DR. J. G. GILKEY SPEAKS TONIGHT AT SUNDAY CLUB

Rachmaninoff's "Glorious Forever" and "Hymn to the Trinity" are music numbers to be sung by the choir of the Chicago Sunday Evening club at the service in Orchestra hall at 7:30 o'clock tonight. Arthur Kraft, soloist, will sing Schnecker's "The Angels Anthem."

Dr. James Gordon Gilkey of Springfield, Mass., will deliver the address on "Conquering Self-distrust." He is a brother of Dean Charles W. Gilkey of the University of Chicago chapel, and a leading preacher in the east. WMAQ will broadcast the services.

WAGNER CHOIR TO SING DURING GERMAN TRIBUTE

Chicago's tribute to Germany will be broadcast from the Merchandise Mart studios between 10:30 and 11 a. m. Thursday over an NBC-WJZ network and rebroadcast in Germany.

Dr. H. F. Simon, German consul general in Chicago, will be the principal speaker on the program and the Richard Wagner choir of 30 voices will sing under the direction of H. A. Rehberg. It is expected that one of the stars of the Chicago Civic Opera also will appear on the program.

Voice of the Listener

YOU'RE WELCOME!

W-G-N: Just a kindly "thank you" for your wonderful coöperation in broadcasting the description of my mother who was missing for three days. We feel that this was instrumental in our finding her the day of the announcement.

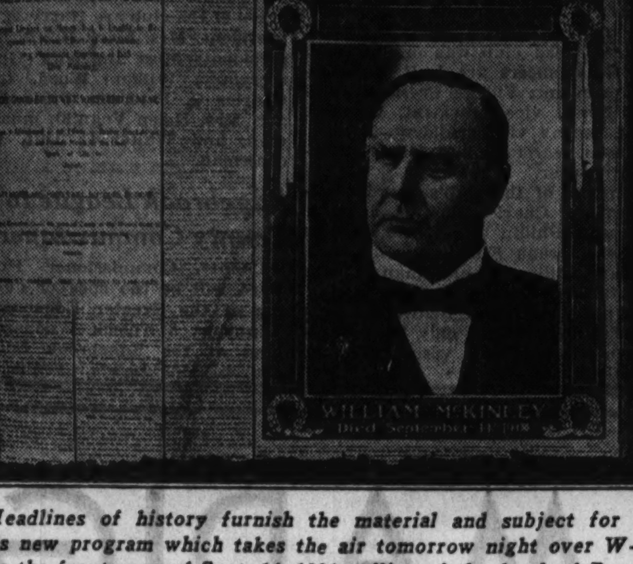
P. S.—Thanks to Pierre Andre who took great pains in pronouncing and spelling our name and giving the description explicitly.

BACK IN 1901



The Chicago Daily Tribune
M'KINLEY DEAD; ROOSEVELT PRESIDENT.
PRESIDENT M'KINLEY DEAD.
WILLIAM McKINLEY

Headlines of history furnish the material and subject for Quin Ryan's new program which takes the air tomorrow night over W-G-N. Here's the front page of Sept. 14, 1901, telling of the death of President William McKinley after being shot by an assassin.

HISTORIC EVENTS OF OTHER YEARS TO BE RECALLED

Ryan to Scan Famous Front Pages.

Headlines of Other Days," a brand new kind of radio program, will be inaugurated tomorrow night from W-G-N, and will be heard at 9:25 o'clock every evening except Sunday following the reading of "Tomorrow's TRIBUNE."

Quin Ryan, who has been broadcasting up-to-the-minute headlines and news stories from the next morning's newspaper ever since 1926, will hark back through the years every evening in the new five-minute feature and bring his radio listeners famous front pages of yesteryear.

Extra! Read All About It!

The program will open with the arresting utterance, "Headlines of Other Days." Then a crowd of newsboys will be heard shouting, producing a kaleidoscopic talking picture, "Extra! Extra! Extra! . . . War Declared . . . All About the Big . . . One Hundred Dead . . . Final Scores . . . Ocean Liner . . . President . . . Earthquake . . . Extra! Extra! Extra!"

The announcer will then read the date and launch into a concentrated presentation of an historic front page of years past. Samples of some of the eight column headlines the radio audience will hear are: "Kaiser Invades Luxemburg; Wars on Czar!" "Commodore Dewey Burns and Sinks Spanish Asiatic Fleet!" "McKinley Dead; Roosevelt President!" "Hoover Sweeps U. S.!" "San Francisco a Ruin; City of Dead!" "Chicago Destroyed by Fire!" "House for War—Vote Is 373 to 50!" and "Victoria Dies; Edward VII., King of England!"

To Recall Old Advertisements.

On some evenings of the week the ancient headlines will detour from historic events and swing into the advertisements and newspaper features of olden days, depicting costumes, prices and habits, calculated to bring back hundreds of quaint and comical memories to listeners.

It is a program designed to be historical, thrilling, amusing, and instructive, and written for all members of the family.

Kilmer Program.

Joyce Kilmer, the young poet soldier, will be presented on the "Minstrels of Our Time" at 10 o'clock Tuesday. Jack Boyle of the W-G-N dramatic company will be the reader.

ALLAN GRANT KEEPS IN SHAPE FOR PIANO BY BOXING, HANDBALL

ALLEN GRANT.

That physical fitness and good radio programs go hand in hand is one of the beliefs of Allan Grant, W-G-N staff pianist and composer. To keep himself in the pink of condition, Mr. Grant turns to his favorite sport every morning and dons the gloves for three or four rounds of boxing with a trainer at his club. In addition to this he takes long walks and plays handball. Some years ago he was an amateur boxing champion. After his workout in the gym in the mornings he may be found at the piano in his home engaged in a bout with the keyboard. He is busy with a new concerto for piano which he hopes to complete soon and present to the W-G-N audience.

In his program with Lawrence Salerno at 9:55 Thursday night, Mr. Grant will play two of his own compositions, "Nocturne in F Sharp Major" and "Valse D'Amour."

SHALL WE TRUST IN GOD? SUBJECT OF NOON SERVICE

Shall we trust in God? This is the question asked by millions and this is the subject which noted clergymen and educators will discuss on W-G-N this week in the noon program of "Midday Services."

Opening this series on Monday will be Dr. Charles T. Hull, rector of St. Paul's Church by the Lake, Episcopal. The speaker for Tuesday will be Dr. Andrew C. Zenos, dean of the Presbyterian Theological seminary. Wednesday the address will be by a representatve of the Catholic faith, the Rev. Stephen McMahon of the Church of the Little Flower. The Thursday speaker is Dr. L. Franklin Gruber, president of the United Lutheran seminary at Maywood. Dr. Claude S. Moore, executive secretary of the Ministers' Relief association, will be heard Friday. Bringing the series to a close on Saturday will be Dr. John L. Dickson, director of the services.

Neighborhood Theaters

"It's Tough To Be Famous" will draw movie-goers to the Paradise today. The tale concerns a captain of a submarine who has been decorated for bravery. The immense amount of publicity given him and his self sacrificing deed became a heavy burden on his soul. He is besieged by reporters wherever he goes. His romance and marriage reawaken public curiosity. The lad finally rebels, however, and thereby hangs the ending. Douglas Fairbanks Jr. and Mary Brian are the stars.

Mouthpiece of Underworld.

Warren Williams does good work as a shrewd and ruthless lawyer in "Mouthpiece," playing at the Marbro today. He is disillusioned when serving as state's attorney with what he regards as the unfairness of the law and goes from one extreme to another, ending finally as the "mouthpiece" of the underworld. A sweet and innocent southern belle [Sidney Fox] comes along and, though the man is made better by the romance, he does not win the girl.

A bored gold coaster of the feminine sex craves excitement and gets it in "Misleading Lady," also billed at the Marbro. Claudette Colbert is the adventure seeking soul. Other leads are taken by Edmund Lowe and Stuart Erwin. This one is amusing and well directed.

Warner Baxter in Daddy Rôle.

Warner Baxter plays papa, in "Amateur Daddy" at the Senate today, to a flock of cunning youngsters—all because of a promise to a dying pal. Marion Nixon is cast as the mother of the brood, with whom, in due course of time and after exciting events, the hero falls in love.

Also playing is "One Hour With You." It is light. It scintillates and amuses. Jeanette MacDonald, Maurice Chevalier and Genevieve Tobin make it so.

"The Wiser Sex"—Oh, Yeah?

Conclusive proof as to which sex is the wiser is offered by Claudette Colbert in the film at the Lamar in Oak Park which will run tomorrow. "The Wiser Sex" will show you how a maid may aid a man in distress. The story concerns a very honest district attorney, played by Melvyn Douglas, who is framed by gangsters. Lilyan Tashman plays the sweetheart of the gangster king [William Boyd].

The horrors of life in a fever infested jungle penal colony are shown with clarity in "Prestige," which also is to be shown at the Lamar. Ann Harding's mellifluous voice will carry you along over the bad spots. Adolphe Menjou is suave as ever in his rôle of villain. Melvyn Douglas has the male lead.

Meighan and Barthelmess.

The Crawford bills "Cheaters at Play" and "Alias the Doctor" today. The latter film with Thomas Meighan in the starring rôle concerns the disappearance and final recovery of a casket of jewels aboard an ocean liner. Charlotte Greenwood's antics provide some laughable episodes. "Alias the Doctor" is another tale of a self sacrificing medic, with Richard Barthelmess, Marian Marsh, and Norman Foster in the leading rôles.

NEW BATH CLUB VARIETY SERIES OPENS ON W-G-N

Irving Kaufman, versatile baritone and mimic; Willard Amison, popular tenor, and Roger White's orhestra will be presented in the new Bath club variety series opening over W-G-N and the Columbia network at 7 o'clock tomorrow evening. Kaufman will be starred in a program of novelty and rhythm every Monday, Wednesday, and Friday. Amison will be featured in a romantic quarter hour for the same period on Tuesdays and Thursdays. White's orchestra, well known in Manhattan clubs, Atlantic seaboard resorts, and Park avenue society events, will be presented during each program of the five times a week series.

QUIN RYAN MIXES POETRY WITH HIS SPORTS RESULTS

In his nightly "Sports Column and Review" from W-G-N at 6:15 o'clock, Quin Ryan is wooing the muse of poetry toward the field of sports. Every evening, when he has finished his reading of results, he comments in verse on some fact or foible of sport.

During the last week, in spoofing Jess Willard's proposed return to the prize ring, he wrote:

Jess Willard comes forth with a challenge again
And says he's a world beater still.
I'm sure that he'll conquer whomever he meets—
If the bout is enacted downhill!

In commenting on the fat golfers returning to the links after a winter season of putting on weight, he sang:

Some of the golfers I know are so fat,
When close to the ball they can't see it.
If they back up a bit for a study of it
They're too far to wallop or tee it.

Quin also answers questions over the air, settling arguments of sport fact and history.

MAXWELL ST. 'Y' TO GET $10,000 TO EXPAND PLAY

Executive Secretary Tells of Widened Program.

The new Maxwell street Y. M. C. A., opened last December in one of Chicago's most congested districts, is to share this year in the distribution of $100,000 now being raised as part of a $300,000 campaign to carry forward the community work program of the association. This was the announcement made yesterday by Ward C. Castle, chairman of the drive which is being pushed by Y. M. C. A. leaders throughout the country.

WARD C. CASTLE.

"The regular budget for the support of the seventeen Chicago departments of the 'Y' is $200,000," Mr. Castle, a resident of Hinsdale, explained. "The extra sum of $100,000 the board of trustees of the association deems absolutely necessary to carry on additional community work in the poorest sections of the city.

Asserts Branch Proves Value.

"Then departments will share in this sum, each receiving $10,000," he continued. "The selection of the Maxwell street department was made by the officers and trustees because in the few months it has been open, it has definitely proved its value in this district. Maxwell street is one of the areas of the city that has particularly felt the continued economic depression and we hope that the well wishers of the Y. M. C. A.'s social service program will visit this interesting department and see what can be done in only a few months."

When H. S. Prince, executive secretary of the Maxwell department, was informed that his "Y" is to share in these funds, he outlined the program he is interested in promoting. "Such aid as we may receive will be highly appreciated," he said. "It will enable us to start a summer school of recreation and education for children and adults; to continue a twilight program of activities now under way, and to expand our recreational leaders' course. Through the latter we are interested in developing those persons in the community who can carry on volunteer social service work."

Serves 600 Boys and Girls.

Mr. Prince further explained that more than 600 boys and girls of the neighborhood are now using the facilities at the Maxwell Street Y. M. C. A. This means the department is already overcrowded making it necessary to carry a good number of the activities into schoolyards and vacant lots.

Particularly active in the Y. M. C. A. emergency campaign are John V. Farwell, president of the board of trustees, and George B. McKibbin, president of the Chicago Y. M. C. A.; John S. Brocksmit, treasurer; W. J. Parker, general secretary; Cyrus H. McCormick, and William Francis. West siders assisting in the campaign are C. Ward Seabury, W. O. Lewis, and T. C. Thompson of Oak Park, H. G. Agnew of River Forest, William Lees of Forest Park, F. O. Hale of La Grange, and Floyd A. Ferguson of Park Ridge.

Chicagoland Music Festival Set for August

Larger Than Ever, This Great Fete of the People Will Draw Huge Crowds

By Edward Moore.

An eye-filling picture this. It will be followed by an ear-filling scene, a huge contest of massed singing between the Lions and Kiwanis organizations. Five thousand Lions will be seated on one side of the field, 5,000 Kiwanians on the other. Each will have its chance to outdo the other. The Lions will roar their own special songs, the Kiwanians will respond in kind with theirs. The applause of the audience for each will be permitted to act as the standards of judgment.

Two Thousand Negro Voices.

Or do you remember the marvelous effect that a chorus of 1,000 Negroes made while singing spirituals last summer? That chorus will be 2,000 strong this year and will be directed by five of the most noted conductors of the race in Chicago. And the mighty chorus, white and colored, which sang under the magnetic baton of Noble Cain? That, too, will be increased. Mr. Cain again will be present, and Victor Grabel will continue as general musical director of the festival.

So far—the time is still early—fourteen communities outside of Chicago have signified their intention of taking part in the festival. Several are newcomers—Auburn, Ill.; Paris, Ill.; East St. Louis, Ill.; Anderson, Ind., and Belvidere, Ill., among them. In addition, there are several musical organizations, bands, choruses, drum corps from Chicago and elsewhere that will make their first appearances on this occasion.

Bands Will Compete.

As in past seasons, there will be contests in all classes of musicians. The rules of the contest can be briefly summarized.

Bands are divided into classes A, B, C, and D. Class A includes adult bands of more than thirty players; B, adult bands of thirty or less; C, juvenile bands of more than thirty; D, juvenile bands of thirty or less. Each band will play one required number, one of a selective list, and the numbers required for the massed band.

The required numbers are: Class A, "Oberon" overture by Weber [Fischer edition]; B, "Hermit's Bell" overture by Maillart [Fischer-Ditson]; C, Menuetto from "L'Arlesienne" Suite No. 1, by Bizet [Fischer]; D, Bridal song from "Rustic Wedding," by Goldmark [Fischer].

The selective list includes: A, "Bohemia" overture by Dvorak [Fischer] and prelude by Carl Busch [Schirmer]; B, "Abu Hassan" overture by Weber [Ditson], and "The Black Man," by Sousa [Presser]; C, "Marche Militaire Française," by Saint-Saëns [Fischer], and "Figaro's Wedding" overture by Mozart [Fischer]; D, "Pilot Me" Paraphrase by Barnhouse [Barnhouse], and "Urbana" overture by Roberts [Fischer].

The numbers for massed band are three Sousa marches, "Stars and Stripes Forever" [Presser], "U. S. Field Artillery" [Fischer], and "Liberty Bell" [Presser].

Drum corps, adult and juvenile, will play one selection or overture in front of the judges' stand. They will be judged upon cadence, tone, attack, precision, military conduct, and maneuver. The use of the D crook and any bugle that can be sealed or locked in pitch will be permitted, but no extra credit for playing ability will be given for the use of such crooks. Each corps will be allowed fifteen minutes for maneuvers, and will be penalized for taking additional time.

Rules for Choruses.

Choruses, men's, women's, and mixed, will sing two numbers in the preliminaries, the required number and one chosen by the chorus. In the finals only the required number will be sung. All choruses will learn the Hallelujah Chorus from Handel's "The Messiah." This will be sung at Soldiers' field by the massed chorus. Judgment in the contests will be made on tone quality, correctness of pitch, tonal balance, attack, tempo, phrasing, and expression.

The required number for men's choruses will be "The Builder," by Cadman [Schirmer, All-Star Octavo series No. 82011]; for women's chorus, "Salutation," by Gaines [Fischer, No. 5540]; for mixed chorus, "Hail to Our Native Land," by Verdi [Ditson, No. 13192]. All choruses are asked to brush up for massed singing on "Tenting on the Old Camp Ground," "Battle Hymn of the Republic," "Tramp, Tramp, Tramp, the Boys Are Marching," "Old Black Joe," "Old Folks at Home," "Auld Lang Syne," "Home, Sweet Home," and "Sweet Adeline."

Vocal soloists must be over 16 years old. Each contestant will sing one number of his or her own choice not over three minutes long. The judges reserve the right to stop the soloists after two minutes of singing. Only piano accompaniment will be allowed.

Music Festival Near.

Another music festival, but of an earlier date, will be the annual series at Evanston, taking place this year during the week of May 23 to 28. Regardless of what may be the future of the Chicago Symphony orchestra, Mr. Stock and his men are taking festivals in their stride. They are returning this morning from a trip to Cornell college, Mount Vernon, Ia., where they have been going for thirty years; they will go on Wednesday to the thirty-ninth annual festival at Ann Arbor, Mich.; they will return next Sunday just in time to take up a dress rehearsal at Patten gymnasium in Evanston.

Four of the solo artists who appear in Ann Arbor are also booked for Evanston and will return from the Michigan city with the orchestra. They are Goeta Ljungberg, Beniamino Gigli, John Charles Thomas, and Chase Baromeo. It is Mme. Ljungberg's first trip to the middle west and therefore the first opportunity that Chicagoans will have to hear this soprano sensation from Sweden.

Mr. Stock is optimistic about the festival. He sends word that the chorus is the finest he has heard in his twenty-three years of association with the series. In fact, he adds, it is so good that this time the public is not to be admitted to the dress rehearsal on Sunday. Heretofore attendance has been permitted, but this time he prefers to let the group be heard in all its glory on the opening night.

In addition to the festival chorus of 600, there will also be the United German Male choruses under Karl Reckzeh on Thursday night, the Children's chorus under John W. Beattie on Saturday afternoon, and the University Glee clubs under Glenn Cliffe Bainum Saturday night.

The full list of soloists lists eight famous names. Jeanette Vreeland and John Charles Thomas appear on the opening program Monday night, May 23; Goeta Ljungberg, Jeanette Vreeland, Edward Molitore, and Chase Baromeo sing Tuesday night; the United German Male chorus and Edward Molitore on Thursday night; Percy Grainger with the Children's chorus of 1,500 grace the Saturday matinee program; and Dusolina Giannini and Beniamino Gigli sing singly and in duet Saturday night, the last program of the course.

The choral works are unusual, numbering as they do three famous works, performed in commemoration. The opening night Brahms' German Requiem will be sung in honor of the founder and director of the festival, the late Peter Christian Lutkin; Tuesday night, Haydn's "The Seasons" will be done in memory of the 200th anniversary of the composer, while on Saturday night, John Alden Carpenter's "Song of Faith," written for the Washington bicentennial celebration will be sung.

Music Notes.

Two child prodigies, Jeanne Celeste and Joan Dolores Halamicek, soprano and violinist, 12 and 13 years old, will make their first appearance in Chicago on Wednesday night. They are appearing at Orchestra hall for the benefit of Bohemian charities.

They are members of a musical family. Their grandfather, Joseph Halamicek, was a musical pioneer in Chicago and one of the early members of the present Chicago Symphony orchestra under Theodore Thomas. Their father holds a doctorate in music and their mother is a musician and instructor. She will be their accompanist in this concert. They were born in Iowa, where their parents had started a college of music, and now claim Hollywood as home.

The two have been making a concert tour on the Pacific coast, and have warm, not to say enthusiastic, press notices to mark the fact.

Among the other concert events of a fast waning season this week will be a piano recital by André Skalski at Curtiss hall; a sonata recital by Sol Nemkovsky, violinist, and Moissaye Boguslawski, pianist, assisted by Ruth Lyon, soprano; the annual concert of the Chicago Lutheran Teachers' chorus, George L. Tenney, conductor, and Margaret Lester, Edna Thiele, Walter Boydston, Leonard Huber, and Luke Gask, soloists, all this afternoon; a recital of Robert Yale Smith's songs by Glenn Drake, tenor, at Bush conservatory, the May program of the Chicago Artists' association at Curtiss hall, and a joint recital by Leola Aikman, soprano, and Samuel Thaviu, violinist, at Kimball hall, all on Tuesday evening.

The Aikman-Thaviu program is the third and last sponsored by the Society of American Musicians. The Chicago Artists' association program will present Charles Wakefield Cadman as guest speaker, Nelle Eberhardt as guest of honor; Louis Victor Saar, composer-pianist; Clara Edmunds Hemingway, composer-poet; Ethel Heide Wishover, contralto; Eugene Dressler, tenor, and a male quartet consisting of Paul Mallory, Fred Wise, Arthur Ranous, and George Lane.

A note from Saratoga, Cal., discloses that Frederick J. Wessels, former manager of the Chicago Symphony orchestra, was the director of the Santa Clara county blossom festival on March 26. In addition to the floral section, the program included a band concert, solo appearances by Arthur Johnson, baritone, and a festival ballet. There was an audience of 5,000.

The fifth annual Chicago High school music festival will be held in Orchestra hall May 26. Dr. J. Lewis Browne, director of music of the public schools, will conduct the program. Two hundred young men and women of the high schools will participate in the choral numbers, and an orchestra of 150 players will present the instrumental part of the program. Oscar W. Anderson will direct the orchestra. Mme. Arendt, soprano, and Arthur Kraft, tenor, will be guest artists. Jane Anderson will be pianist and Leroy Wetzel, organist. Works of unusual interest are planned.

Tickets will be sold at nominal cost to defray the expense of the concert, the highest admission price being 50 cents. The box office sale will open at Orchestra hall tomorrow.

Hugh Dickerson, bass, will be the soloist in Eric DeLamarter's "Vesper Antiphonal Service" at the Fourth Presbyterian church this afternoon. Dr. DeLamarter will also play an organ recital from the works of Bach, Bonnet, and Sowerby. Dr. Harrison Ray Anderson will deliver the exposition.

Traditional and modern Hebrew music will be played upon the theremin by Elena Moneak at Fullerton hall this evening. The concert will be part of a program to honor the memory of the late Prof. Boris Schatz, founder and director of Bezalel, the national art academy and museum at Jerusalem.

The Dance Guild and the Little Theater of the Dance are presenting a program at the Goodman theater this afternoon in which Ruth Pryor, Xenia Zarina, Edwina Mershon, Arthur Corey, and Edward Caton will be the participants.

In the Week's Events

Leola Aikman, coloratura soprano, will sing at Kimball hall Thursday evening of this week.

B'way Openings

NEW YORK, May 14.—[Special.]—Mr. Ziegfeld's revival of "Show Boat," with its original cast plus Dennis King, will be the leading event on Broadway next week. Here are the announcements of premières:

"There You Are" opens Monday night at the George M. Cohan. A musical show in the production and acting of which Hyman Adler is involved. Carl Bartfeld wrote the book and Tom Connell and William Heagney the lyrics and music. Besides Mr. Adler the players will include Ilse Marvenga, Berta Donn, Roy Cropper, Joseph Lertora and Adrian Rosely.

"Show Boat" opens Thursday night at the Casino. Mr. Ziegfeld has had the happy notion of staging this revival of the musical show which Jerome Kern and Oscar Hammerstein II. extracted from Miss Ferber's novel. At the time of its first presentation during the season of 1927-'28, "Show Boat" was hailed as one of the finest musical plays ever produced in this country. Many members of the former cast, including Norma Terris, Helen Morgan, Charles Winninger, Edna May Oliver, Eva Puck, Sam White and Aunt Jemima will take part in the forthcoming revival. Paul Robeson will sing the rôle of Joe and, of course, "Ole Man River," and Dennis King will sing the Gaylord Ravenal part.

"Yeah Man" opens Tuesday at the Park Lane. A Negro revue with Isabel Washington, Billy Mills, Edith Watson, Bill Cumby and Eloise Bennett among its chief players.

Play Depicts Stock Crash of Fateful 1929

"Bulls, Bears, and Asses" May Present True Picture, but Who Cares to Look?

By Burns Mantle.

When the market kept going up in 1929 and everybody was saying that any one was a fool who sold America short, Elsie Moore insisted on taking the $5,000 her aunt left her and going into the market. Against Charlie's wishes, not to mention his commands, she bought herself a membership in the conservative firm of Starr Inc. and began buying on inside tips. Inside and offside tips, in fact.

Charlie neglected his $75 a week job hanging around the Starr brokerage trying to get Elsie to quit gambling and go home and have another baby, so there would be some one for the Big Fellow to play with when he grew up. But Elsie wouldn't.

Finally, Charlie caught the fever, too. A day or two before the crash he drew out the $1,800 and bought a sheaf of those conservative blue ribbon stocks, the sure things that Mr. Starr was advising every one to "buy on the dips and sell on the bulges." The Moores go smash, as you might suspect, and come to distrust and almost hate each other. For two years they are separated. Then the depression brings them together. Charlie gets his old job back and everything is promising, if not exactly happy.

As for the rest of the motley crowd of investors making up the dramatis personae, most of them go broke comically. "My bank's in cloaks and suits, but it doesn't know it yet," announces Belber, when his last margin is wiped out. In the end all those who have salvaged a few dollars are in the market again.

It is the comedy reactions, divided among the Jews, the Italians, the Irish, and the plain Americans of the cast, that offer the most entertainment in "Bulls, Bears, and Asses." There are a variety of bit parts, all well played. The Moores are represented by Sally Bates and Hobart Kavanaugh. Louis Sorin is a hard losing Hebrew, William Roselle the spidery Starr, Robert Darrat a September optimist who shoots himself in October.

Mystery Comedy Revived.

Frank Conroy, actor, back from the cinema lots, has thought it wise to revive a play by the late Edgar Wallace which has never been done in New York, but was played in London some years back, and also in Boston. "The Man Who Changed His Name" it is called. A kind of mystery comedy, it conceals and reveals its threads of plot rather artfully. It is, in effect, exactly the sort of play Wallace could write over any week-end if the Crime club were sufficiently insistent.

There is skill shown in the assembly of such plays. Their chief weakness lies in their complete letdown at the end. For instance, in this one you are introduced to the Selby Clives at Sunningdale, England, the day Mrs. Clive is home from Scotland after having snitched an extra night and spent it at a hotel in London.

At this same hotel the Hon. Frank O'Ryan, who was by way of being or wanting to be Mrs. Clive's lover, had occupied an adjoining room, the communicating door of which Mrs. Clive had agreed to open on signal. And was Frank mad when the lady changed her mind!

Next day, rummaging among Mrs. Clive's papers, looking for a lease to Canadian lands O'Ryan is hoping to get from Clive, the would-be lovers come upon a legal notice informing the world that twenty years before Mr. Clive had changed his name. Next day they learn that he also had escaped hanging as the murderer of his first wife, her lover and her mother, by the narrowest possible margin.

Victims Had Been Warned.

The courts had refused to convict him because the evidence went to show that in each instance he had been particular to warn the victims against the particular poison or accident which eventually took them off. From that moment forward Mrs. Clive and Mr. O'Ryan imagine that they are suspected and that their killing has been subtly planned. Every statement Mr. Clive makes, every warning he issues, is twisted in their minds into proof that he has hatched a plot against them. They refuse to use the car he recommends, or walk where he suggests they walk. They dare not eat the food he dislikes or drink his drinks unless he drinks first.

This makes for amusing situations and brings Mrs. Clive to such an hysterical outbreak that the plot explodes. Mr. Clive is, indeed, the man who changed his name. But he had done that because he was not, in fact, the notorious murderer of the same name.

An amusing piece until the author, backed into a corner at 10:45, is forced to make that rather lame admission.

A Foolish Piece.

We have another fairly foolish piece, called "Broadway Boy," which will probably never trouble the playgoers of the back country. It is one of those obviously labored comedies in which a young lawyer, bitten by the theater bug, insists on being a producer to the sacrifice of his career and his rich Uncle Julius' regard.

I doubt if a really good play can ever be written about the show business. Writers are too close to their inspiration; too filled with their own prejudices and experiences; too convinced that everything interesting to them is also interesting to the public at large. What playwrights cannot get through their excited minds is that the public that supports the theater dotes on illusion. It wants to believe in the theater. It wants to believe in the mysterious fascinations of behind the scenes life. Expose the sordidness of business deals, rehearsals, petty jealousies and such and you distress this public and disappoint it utterly.

In "Broadway Boy" the hero muddles through the production of his third play against the machinations of the stage hands' union, the Actors' Equity, a painfully temperamental female star who gets drunk, and Uncle Julius' opposition. He wins out in the end and marries the understudy. But nobody cares much.

Acts in "Devil Passes"

MARY NASH.

SHE is one of the six stars who give "The Devil Passes," the comedy now at the Selwyn theater, its unusually brilliant cast. Among the successful plays to which she has contributed vivid characters were "Captain Applejack" and "The Command to Love."

Bach B-Minor Mass Event of Musical Year

Large New York Audience Give Rapt Attention to Stupendous Work.

By Joan King.

NEW YORK.—[Special.]—Contrary to the usual custom of turning over the halls of musical Gotham to luminaries of lesser light for the final days of the closing season, this year the major organizations are still offering entertainment to their followers. The performance of the Bach B minor mass, which has now become an annual occurrence under the baton of Albert Stoessel, was one of the recent impressive events allotted to the musical arena.

This tradition which Mr. Stoessel established some years ago, of giving the New York concert goers one complete uncut hearing of the great Bach work each year, is one which has come to be much treasured as a high light of the entire musical season. And each year, Mr. Stoessel's performance gains in authority. The 1932 reading reflected much credit upon the conductor and his choristers. A large audience gave the work rapt attention.

Soloists Well Received.

Mr. Stoessel's soloists were Jeannette Vreeland, soprano; Rose Bampton, contralto; Arthur Hackett, tenor; Robert Crawford, baritone; and Julius Huehn, bass baritone. The Oratorio society was augmented by the New York University Glee club and the orchestra, comprised of seventy players, boasted such well known soloists as Georges Barrere, flute; Cornelius Van Vliet, 'cello; Bruno Labate, Oboe d' Amore and Harry Glantz, trumpet.

Not only did the society's chorus meet the exacting demands of the music with splendid spirit but the soloists proved themselves aptly equipped to cope with the tremendous requirements of the work. Miss Bampton, who is a newcomer compared to those two standbys of oratorio, Mme. Vreeland and Mr. Hackett, offered some excellent examples of her ability. Mr. Huehn, who recently sang the rôle of the giant in the Louis Gruenberg and John Erskine opera, "Jack and the Bean Stalk," disclosed a youthful and fresh voice.

Concert Series Ends.

That brilliant series of five symphonic concerts at the Metropolitan Opera house, offered by the Musicians Symphony orchestra of 200, has came to an end. Eugene Goossens was at the baton and there were three soloists, Myra Hess, Harold Bauer, and Ernest Schilling. The word brilliant, is used advisedly when speaking of these concerts, and this last, perhaps the most brilliant of all, was attended by the largest audience. The favor with which the players of the new orchestra, comprised of those temporarily unemployed, many of whom are among the finest musicians of the city, have been reecived, was adequately attested by repeated cheering and recalls for conductor and soloists, throughout the evening.

The program included two works performed for the first time in New York, Vaughan William's early overture to the Aristophanes comedy "The Wasps," the "Danzas Fantasticas" of Turina, Beethoven's Eighth Symphony, Bach's concerto, and the variations from Tchaikovsky's third suite for orchestra. The three noted pianists combined forces in the back triple piano concerto. Their audience insisted on the last movement being repeated.

Financial, Artistic Success.

So successful have these concerts proved, both from a financial and an artistic point of view, that it has been announced that they will be repeated next season; employing the same orchestra and the Metropolitan Opera house. They will again be given at popular prices with invited soloists and conductors.

This series has had six conductors—Leopold Stokowski, Hugh Ross, Sandor Harmati, Sir Thomas Beecham, Walter Damrosch and Eugene Goossens. Soloists, who like the conductors, have given their services, have been Lawrence Tibbett, Jeannette Vreeland, John McCormack, Jose Iturbi, Ernestine Schumann-Heink, Myra Hess, Harold Bauer, and Ernest Schelling.

New Talkies Raining Down on Broadway

By Tom Pettey.

NEW YORK.—[Special.]—New talkies have been raining down in job lots on Broadway in recent days, despite reports of curtailed production in most of the movie factories. Some of the latest to arrive have been real pictures, and right now Manhattan is blessed with five hits, a record for the present season.

The five best bets are "Grand Hotel," "Symphony of Six Million," "Liebeskomando," "Young America," and "Trapeze." Two of these are imported productions. "Liebeskomando," a Viennese operetta, is included in the hit list because of its unusually fine music. "Trapeze" comes from Germany and features Anna Sten, Samuel Goldwyn's latest "find." It is a human story of three trapeze performers in a Berlin circus.

"Young America" is the current feature at Roxy's and is the work of Frank Borzage, director of "Bad Girl," "Seventh Heaven," and "After Tomorrow." The film deals with problems of home life as viewed by two boys.

Eight New Talkies.

Eight brand new talkies, several of them undoubtedly hits, are moving in as this is being written. Topping the list is "The Cry of the World," which is having its world première at the Vanderbilt theater. The cry is described as "a pictorial record of the trends and drifts of the world during the last fourteen years, particularly as they have affected the American people." John Barrymore is returning in "State's Attorney" and a special reserved seat première has been arranged for this picture, which has in its cast Helen Twelvetrees and William Boyd.

"The Strange Case of Clara Deane" moved into the Rialto, and "The World and the Flesh" is the attraction at the Times Square Paramount where, incidentally, for sixty-five cents one may see a recent $6.50 musical show on the stage. The Cameo is still playing Soviet pictures, the latest being "Soil Is Thirsty." "Congress Dances" will be along late in the week for a special opening at the Rivoli, and a new French comedy, "Il Est Charmant," is on at the Fifth Avenue Playhouse.

Film Experiment.

A film experiment is being undertaken in Brooklyn. It is a movement to provide wholesome and interesting motion picture entertainment for children and the first performance was held at the Carlton theater under the auspices of the Motion Picture bureau of the Federation of Catholic Alumnae. The program was varied with newsreels, a short educational film, and two feature films selected from the approved list of club reviewing groups.

The films were "Puss in the Boots," an operetta, and "Disorderly Conduct," based on the efficiency of the police in the protection of life and morals. Children attending were from 3 to 16 years of age. An admission fee of fifteen cents was charged. The movement, said to have gained considerable headway in other smaller cities, will be tried out in forty Brooklyn chain theaters. It is planned to give the shows on Saturday mornings, or early afternoons every two weeks.

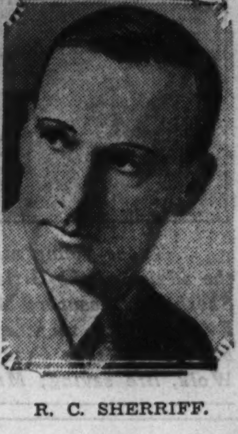
HOLLYWOOD.—Every would-be playwright must have inspiration of some sort and I suppose not a few, particularly in England, have been trying—since R. C. Sherriff's "Journey's End" attracted attention—to duplicate or approach his success.



R. C. SHERRIFF.

Sherriff, a modest Britisher, who appears to be about 33 or 34 years old, is here for four months, to write a scenario from Remarque's novel, "The Road Back."

Sherriff was not unlike countless others who believe they can dramatize successfully events they have lived. But his play was unlike thousands of others.

He says he is not a writer, because he feels like putting things on paper only when those things present themselves.

"It would be impossible for me to sit down and say: 'I'm going to write a play,'" he said. "I must have an idea first."

No Gambler.

Sherriff didn't "chuck" his position as a building inspector for a London insurance company until his play had been running for several months and was an assured success.

He said he didn't feel like gambling, and so held his job until demands on his time prevented him from doing it well.

Since Sherriff has written another play that didn't last long. He spent ten months on it and, after paying commissions, income tax, and other expenses, had 40 pounds left—less than $4 a week for his work.

"Journey's End," however, was and still is, paying royalties. It has been estimated that he made more than a half million dollars from it.

Publishes Novel.

A novel, "Fortnight in September," has been published abroad and here also, but Sherriff doesn't know how well it is selling.

His chief complaint is that he must pay so much to the government in income tax. Money earned in America is subject to a tax in England as well as in this country.

Drama at Goodman.

The Barnum Players, a group that has acted for the benefit of many charities, will present for the first time and for one performance only, a three-act drama entitled "Not For Sale," by James Moran, a newspaper man, at the Goodman theater next Tuesday evening.

Jean Harlow May Lose Identity as "Platinum Blond"

HOLLYWOOD, Cal.—Jean Harlow may possibly lose her identity as the "platinum blond," and if she does she'll be delighted. She thinks "this platinum blond business has been overdone," anyway.

JEAN HARLOW.

Her next screen part will be the title rôle in "The Redheaded Woman."

She thinks it's quite a distinct departure from rôles she's had in the past, although in some respects it is the same.

Jean refused to dye her hair red because she was afraid the subsequent bleaching would harm it, perhaps make it coarse. She insists that her hair is natural and that she doesn't touch it up.

A red wig makes her look much younger than she is. [She's 21 and has been since March 3.] She's doing her blond tresses differently now; they used to be fluffed up, and now she combs them straight back. She appears more mature now, less hoydenish than some of her rôles have shown her.

Among other discoveries, she likes plain food and her favorite dish is spare ribs and sauerkraut. She doesn't care much about clothes, either, and leaves the purchase of them to her mother.

One marriage and divorce is enough for a while, thinks Jean, intimating she isn't in love and, of course, isn't thinking about another marriage.

She wonders what she'd do with her time if she weren't in pictures. Before she was "discovered" two and a half years ago and given that rôle in "Hell's Angels," she spent most of her time in school.

And to answer the eternal feminine question, she was wearing a one-piece mustard colored wool crêpe dress, a small, tight fitting yellow hat with a black feather sticking up from one side, and a rather mannish sports coat of small gray and white stripes.

Opera Fan Mail

VITTORIO TREVISAN, noted basso-buffo of the Chicago Civic Opera company, has received 271 letters and messages from Chicago admirers congratulating him on his plan to give "Don Pasquale" as an operatic comedy in English. Many of the letters were from supporters of the Civic and Ravinia Opera companies. In substance, many of them thanked him for seeing to it that Chicago's operatic prestige would be continued this summer.

Veteran Star.

Robert Loraine, who appears as the Rev. Herbert Messiter in "The Devil Passes," at the Selwyn, was considered at the height of his career when he strode the London stage as a youthful and dashing D'Artagnan in Dumas' "The Three Musketeers." His best remembered American performance was as the star of Shaw's "Man and Superman."

"RECEIVES 17 REPLIES ON BUNGALOW AD"

"In January we determined to go after new business in rentals and in real estate. We selected the Tribune Want Ad Section exclusively to carry our messages to the public. The advertising began to click at once. For example, an ad offering to sell a bungalow brought 17 replies. The house was sold."

"Devil Passes" as Comedy of Good and Evil

Study in Ethics with Old Nick as Hero and Six Stars in Its Cast.

By Charles Collins.

him away with a shower of the arrows of derisive epigram, but when their good old pal, the Prince of Darkness, speaks up in this manner, they are shaken to their boot-heels and eager to grant the point.

This unorthodox Devil, acted with austere grace by the distinguished Basil Rathbone, puts each of his flaunting realists to an appropriate test. To the actress he presents a breach of contract that will disrupt a play in rehearsal and break a poor young author's heart. To the novelist he offers a posthumous masterpiece by the late Joseph Conrad, which he may publish under his own name. To the rector who is an embittered atheist he gives an opportunity for churchly advancement by preaching a sermon on faith. To the kept woman who yearns for true love he provides, by his own seductiveness, a sentimental reason for betraying the man to whom she owes her loyalty. To the egotist he suggests a means of holding his mistress against her wishes.

Devil as Moralist.

Each test is appropriate to the expressed desires of the subjects of the Devil's experiments, and is adroitly handled. And in each case the Devil's work is rejected. Much to their surprise these people, who have boasted of their freedom from conventions and ideals, are unable to accept these diabolical gifts of their desires.

They find, according to the slogan from Dr. Johnson's writing on the title page of the play, that "the practice of virtue is commanded." Moreover, in his defeats, the Devil is satisfied. He gives the others to understand, at the end, that the stirring of good impulses through evil temptations is the special job of work for which he was sent into the universe.

The charm of "The Devil Passes" is that it refrains from the pulpit-pounding, evangelistic manner in pointing its moral and adorning its tale. It is, on the surface, a casual comedy of British manners, written with grace and humor. In a word, it has charm. It is a highly civilized fantasy that successfully maintains an air of realism, and although its theological argument may be finespun and its story somewhat inactive, it is effective stuff for the theater.

Diana Wynyard.

The scene of the game of "Truths," suggested and conducted by the devil-surate, develops quietly into a decidedly engrossing episode. The passage that contains the sour rector's nervous breakdown, after he has stood up in his pulpit [offstage] to proclaim his religious creed as fiddle-dee-dee, is thrilling and contains magnificent acting by Robert Loraine. The clash between the heroine and her two lovers —the middle-aged egotist and the young Devil—puts emotional fire into the last act.

It might be well to make special note of Diana Wynyard in the rôle of the free loving young woman who carries the romantic interest of this morality comedy. Not only because she is a new figure to American playgoers; not only because she is an excellent actress in a cool and fragrant vein of realism, but also because she has the kind of face that fills a thousand cinema palaces with admirers when its close-up image is thrown upon the screen. She may easily be the next Greta Garbo—and she is now on the verge of an experiment in the Hollywood studios.

Moliere of Broadway

Ethical implications in line with my suggestion that the stage seems to be turning over a new leaf may be found also in George M. Cohan's new play, Confidential Service," now at the Grand Opera house. Back of this thin and chatty fable I seem to see Mr. Cohan in meditation at his writing table, saying to himself:

"So the sexy, hot mamma stuff is the theatrical fashion of the times, is it? Well, I'll give it to them, with a new slant. I'll show up the cheating husbands and wives. I'll write a comedy that deals with adultery as a cheap, furtive, lying, and utterly miserable form of amusement. My pair of cheaters shall be teased, ridiculed, annoyed, embarrassed, and double-crossed until they are ready to scream at the mere mention of a love nest."

The sexiness of the modern stage is one of the things, I suspect, that has transformed George M. Cohan from a merry Yankee Doodle Boy into an immature Moliere, commenting with a certain sourness upon the manners and frauds of the times. In "Confidential Service" he has sought to revenge himself with laughter at the adultery motif. His vengeance would be more apparent, however, if his laughter had been louder and gayer.

As an actor Mr. Cohan has grown beyond his own powers of playwriting invention. It is time for him to begin reading other men's manuscripts. He is ripe for a rôle bigger and richer than any he has written or will write. When he finds it he will achieve complete recognition as our First Comedian.

In Vaudeville

Leo Carrillo—The dialect comedian of "Lombardi, Ltd." and other plays, whose recent screen work attaches an "in person" label to his headline activities.

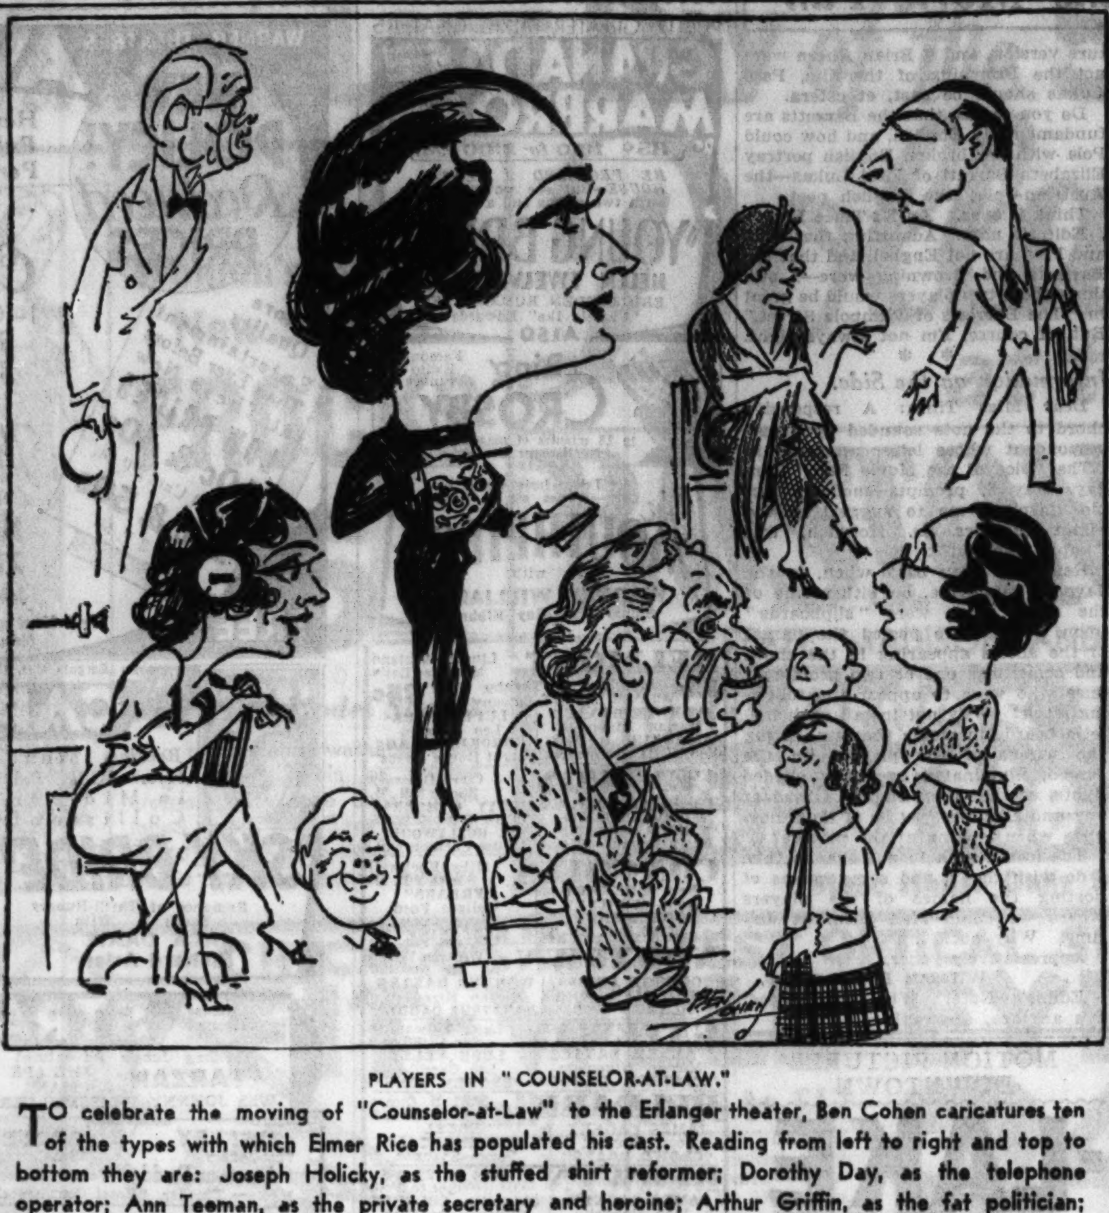
Roxy Theater Ensemble—Twelve singers from New York's Roxy theater, where their music has been a standard attraction for five years.

Albertina Rasch Dancers—The ballet girls from the most recent Ziegfeld "Follies," offering several of the numbers from that entertainment.

Ray Huling and His Seal—Said to be the most celebrated of the trained animal acts.

Round-Up of Law Office Characters

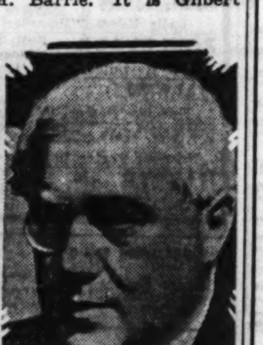


PLAYERS IN "COUNSELOR-AT-LAW."

TO celebrate the moving of "Counselor-at-Law" to the Erlanger theater, Ben Cohen caricatures ten of the types with which Elmer Rice has populated his cast. Reading from left to right and top to bottom they are: Joseph Holicky, as the stuffed shirt reformer; Dorothy Day, as the telephone operator; Ann Teeman, as the private secretary and heroine; Arthur Griffin, as the fat politician; Thomas Shearer, as the investigator; Sue Moore, as the vampire; Edwin Gilcher and Pauline Towe, as the counselor's stepchildren; Harry Mervis, as the lovelorn clerk, and Mae Berland, as a Portia.

Molnar Writes Stage Hits for Two Continents

GILBERT MILLER, who enjoys the international theatrical status once occupied by Charles Frohman, has become to Franz Molnar what his predecessor was to Sir James M. Barrie. It is Gilbert Miller to whom Molnar turns for practical advice, and it is through Miller that the Hungarian genius projects his unerring appeals to the admiration of American playgoers.



FRANZ MOLNAR.

Every good Chicago first-nighter remembers Molnar's romantic play, "The Swan," an intimate picture of life and love in an old-world court. It became a study in realism because Gilbert Miller, cosmopolite, knew his subject, staged the play with consummate art, and entrusted the story to a cast that represented the pick of the English as well as the American stage. The result was a success which quite eclipsed the Vienna and Budapest triumphs.

Again, two years later, Gilbert Miller showed European producers what might be done with a Molnar comedy when he staged "The Play's the Thing" in America, with Holbrook Blinn in the rôle of the playwright, popularly believed to be Molnar's sly portrait of himself.

The author of "The Good Fairy," which will be seen at the Harris theater for two weeks beginning May 15, is essentially a man of the world in the continental sense of the word. He knows the possibilities of every chef in every worthwhile restaurant in Budapest or Vienna. He is a wonderful host and, like Gilbert Miller can maintain a running fire of table-talk in various languages.

Molnar was born in Budapest in 1878. His wealthy parents gave him every educational advantage. He graduated from the universities of Geneva and Budapest. At the age of 18 he began writing for Budapest newspapers. How he became a dramatist is best told in his own words

"While a student at the university," he recently confessed, "I found the classes so overcrowded that I was reluctantly obliged to spend most of my time at the Café Central. There I continued the study of criminology and human statistics. The Café Central fairly dripped with not only excellent wines but extraordinary human data—human material no university could supply. I felt I had to give the world the result of my studies, so I began a series of daily articles on the subject for the 'Pesti Hirlap.' That was in 1896. It was in the same newspaper and at about the same time that, much to my amazement, several of my poems and short stories first appeared.

"In 1893 I set to work and wrote 'The Blue Grotto.' At first it surprised me a little that no manager would even read the play, much less take it. But that didn't matter, because a friend of mine put his apartment at my disposal, and even supplied me with a stage. There was always a packed house at the performances of 'The Blue Grotto'—actually from twenty to thirty souls bravely determined upon the uplift of the stage, the return of the romantic theater, death to realism!

"I didn't venture further as a playwright until ten years later. The experience taught me that long intervals between plays is the better part of the playwright's wisdom. Beat my head as I will, I can think of no more important details in my life. Only this, that although I am 54 years old, I am still as ardent as when they ejected me from the university, a student of criminology."

"Laugh Parade."

Ed Wynn's show, "The Laugh Parade," is starting its final week in New York. Its run began Nov. 2. The star will take his revue on tour next autumn.

Twin Sisters and Quads in New 'Scandals'

IN George White's eleventh "Scandals," at the Civic Opera house beginning May 22, Chicago playgoers will see six sisters. They are the Gale quadruplets, the only set appearing on the American stage, and the Loomis sisters, 16 year old twins. The Gales—Joan, Jane, June, and Jean—made their debut in Mr. White's musical comedy "Flying High," but the Loomis sisters have never before this appeared in a Broadway show.

Only 19 years of age, the Gales began to dance when they were 10, and showed such a remarkable aptitude that the finest teachers were engaged to instruct them. Their first experience came in community revues, and they won statewide fame in California. Three years ago they made their professional debut.

The girls smile, talk, and think as a unit. They have the same inflection of voice, the same likes and dislikes, and dress alike in every respect. All are brunettes with the exception of June, whose color is of a slightly lighter shade. For this reason June is known as the odd member of the foursome. The mother, Sadye Gale, is their chaperon and business manager.

The Loomis twins were born in Kansas City and came to the theater by a strange meeting. Their mother had taken them on a shopping tour when they were but 5 years old, and the proprietor of a lingerie shop was being regaled by their singing when the manager of a playhouse chanced to walk in. He asked their mother if she would consent to allow them to appear on the vaudeville bill the next day.

Except for a two year stay in California in "pictures" they have been on the vaudeville stage ever since until George White saw them. He promptly engaged them for his "Scandals."

Peggy the Manager.

Peggy Fears, the former chorus girl who made her debut as a producer this season with "Child of Manhattan," by Preston Sturges, is planning an intimate revue in which Queenie Smith will be seen next season. Robert Garland, dramatic critic of the World-Telegram, will probably stage the dialogue and action of the revue.

Other plans of Miss Fears for next season include appearances by Helen Menken in "Saint Wench," John Colton's play.

Miss Hayes in 'Good Fairy'; New Playbills

"Rhapsody in Black" for Apollo; Trevisan Stars in Operatic Comedy.

HELEN HAYES will add luster to the Chicago playbills at the Harris theater this evening with "The Good Fairy," a comedy by Franz Molnar, distinguished Hungarian dramatist. This admirable actress, who brought "Petticoat Influence" here a year ago, has been one of the hits of the New York theatrical season in this fantasy, and she is coming to Chicago under the management of Gilbert Miller, with the Broadway cast intact.

The play gives Miss Hayes the rôle of a quaint little girl who works as an usher in a motion picture theater and believes that it is her mission in life to be a "good fairy" to every one she meets. It has been staged with success in Budapest, Vienna, and Berlin and has duplicated its European vogue in this American version.

Franz [or Ferenc] Molnar has been a contributor to the American stage for the last twenty-five years. His first hit, "The Devil," established George Arliss as a star in 1908. The long list of his American productions includes "The Swan" and "The Play's the Thing." The latter piece gave the late Holbrook Blinn the last rôle of his career.

Miss Hayes won her first laurels when she was in her 'teens with William Gillette in "Dear Brutus." She rapidly became an ingenue star and a brilliant comedienne. In "Coquette" she established herself as an emotional actress. She is one of the most popular and gifted actresses of the contemporary stage and is paralleling her career with success on the screen.

The company that will support Miss Hayes in "The Good Fairy" includes Walter Connolly, Evelyn Roberts, Ruth Hammond, Paul McGrath, Salo Douday, and Jack Lynds. The engagement is limited to two weeks.

"Rhapsody in Black," Lew Leslie's all-Negro revue with Ethel Waters as star, will begin a return engagement at the Apollo theater tonight. This revue, which contains fine choral singing and orchestral music, had a successful run at the Garrick theater several months ago. Delay in plans to send it to Paris for a summer run permits its return to Chicago.

Miss Waters' auxiliaries, including the gifted Valaida, the dancing Berry brothers, Florence Hill, Eloise Uggams, Dusty Fletcher, Geneva Washington, and Avis Andrews, remains unchanged. "Rhapsody in Black" has been generally accepted an attractive, playgoing novelty.

"Don Pasquale," with Vittorio Trevisan as its star, will be staged in English as an operatic comedy at the Blackstone theater tomorrow night. It is a comic piece out of the standard opera répertory and the title rôle has been identified with Mr. Trevisan's many years with the Civic and Ravinia companies.

The management promises stage direction that will free the farcical situations of the libretto from the slow traditional pace of the opera houses. Mr. Trevisan will be supported by William Miller as Ernesto, Florence Tennyson as Norina, Emery Darcy as Malatesta, Martin Albrecht, Harrison Clark, Ann Jordan, and James Harding. The production is under the management of James Beck, an impresario of comic operas.

"A Church Mouse"—This attractive comedy, adopted from the Hungarian, will move from the Adelphi to the Playhouse tonight to begin the fourth week of its Chicago run. Louise Groody and Ernest Glendinning are the co-stars of the cast. The play has had a successful engagement in New York with Ruth Gordon and Bert Lytell in the central rôles.

In "Show Boat" Revival.

Edna May Oliver has left Hollywood to resume her original rôle in "Show Boat," to be revived at the Casino, New York [the renamed Carroll], on May 19.

Young Actress Who Remembers Old-Time Stars

THAT useful book "Who's Who in the Theater" reveals that Helen Hayes, star of "The Good Fairy," is very young indeed, despite the fact that she has been for several years one of the undisputed "first actresses." The list of her rôles given in "Who's Who" might cause one to assign her to the generation of Lillian Russell unless one notices that her early parts were played at the ages of 5 and 6 and 8. The long list indicates not so much a long life as a busy one.

Her career began so early that Miss Hayes does, in point of fact, actually remember Lillian Russell and other old timers, too—John Drew, Lotta Crabtree, Lotta Faust.

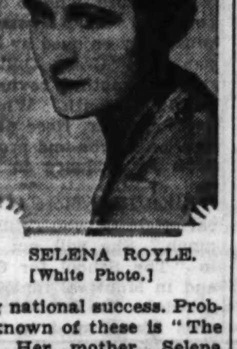
Her first personal encounter with one of these great figures of the theater occurred when she was 8. She had just arrived in New York and was waiting to see Lew Fields when the door of his inner sanctum opened and out came the manager-comedian accompanied by the renowned brunette beauty, Lotta Faust. She was gorgeously gowned in a sweeping creation of black velvet, her hair was crowned by a black picture hat with billowy plumes. Miss Hayes remembers that she moved with a swish of petticoats, that she had about her a faint scent of spice roses, and that the wide eyed little girl actress, Helen Hayes, sat gasping at the beauty that was Lotta Faust.

It was when "Bab," the comedy in which Miss Hayes was starring some years later, went to Boston that she met Lotta Crabtree, star of an earlier day. Miss Crabtree, after seeing the performance, invited Miss Hayes to tea. The very young actress spent the morning doing some hasty reading on the history of the American stage so that she might be ready for her hostess and equal to a possible conversational emergency. But she had no opportunity to use her crammed knowledge. Miss Crabtree was not in the least concerned with the good old days.

Some of Helen Hayes' most cherished memories are concerned with John Drew. At the age of 10 she was given a rôle of a child in "The Prodigal Husband." Drew took a fancy to the little blond girl.

Born to Act

SELENA ROYLE, who is George M. Cohan's leading woman in "Confidential Service," at the Grand Opera house, had two famous parents. Her father is Edwin Milton Royle, who, after completing his education at Princeton, Edinburgh, Scotland, and Columbia Law school, harkened to the call of the stage and began as actor, but became one of America's leading playwrights and more than a score of his plays have been presented, many attaining national success. Probably the best known of these is "The Squaw Man." Her mother, Selena Fetter, is remembered as an actress of beauty and charm.



SELENA ROYLE.

After her schooling Miss Royle attended the American Academy of Dramatic Art in New York. Her first stage appearance was in her father's play, "Launcelot and Elaine." She later played in "Peer Gynt" with the Theater Guild, "Rust," "Yellow," "Thunder in the Air," and in the Player's club star revival of "Milestones." She has played in stock companies in San Francisco, Brooklyn, Denver, Providence, Grand Rapids, and Dayton. Miss Royle was also the Portia in the Moscovitch production of "The Merchant of Venice" in New York two years ago.

Adopted Child Brightens Home for Film Star

Tempestuous Lupe Gives Gary and the Countess Some Uneasy Moments

By Rosalind Shaffer.

HOLLYWOOD.—[Special.]—Miriam Hopkins' adoption of Baby Wilson in Chicago brings to the fore the fact that a great many Hollywood homes are brighter and merrier because of the faces and laughter of little adopted children. Miriam is only one of a great number of Hollywood foster parents. The last year has seen a number of adoptions, the most recent being the adoption of three children by Wallace Beery and his wife Rita.

MIRIAM HOPKINS.

Neil Hamilton and his wife adopted Baby Patricia some eighteen months ago when she was a wee mite born into a cold world.

Harold Lloyd and his wife Mildred adopted a sister and playmate for their little Mildred Gloria, when for a while it looked as if she would have to grow up without any blood sister or brother of her own.

It is notable that the Lloyd adoption came to them through the hands of one Mrs. Louise Sullivan of Pasadena, who in fourteen years has placed more than 168 orphans in homes, as a memorial to a son she lost during wartime. Mrs. Sullivan has five of her own.

Another notable case was the adoption of little Alexander Hayes, now known as Yukio, by Sessu Hayakawa and his wife. The child is a son of Ruth Noble and Hayakawa, and is to grow up in Japan.

Table Near Gary's.

LUPE VELEZ.

They do say that Bert gave Lupe some lovely diamond and ruby trinkets. However, while Lupe managed to make Gary uncomfortable, what was everybody's astonishment when she walked in one night on both Gary and Bert with Johnny Weissmuller at the Central Park casino.

John is the rage since his hit in "Tarzan," and Lupe couldn't have done better for her purpose. The local tattlers are all buzzing with it, and wondering what next. Gary returned to Hollywood, and met the countess at the train when she arrived a few days later. It seems quite serious at the moment.

Salary Cut, No Bonus.

NANCY CARROLL.

When Paramount sound news reel men shot the picture of the king of Siam recently, they were obliged to wear formal clothes, at 114 in the shade. Then the king anointed the statue of the first king of Siam with sacred oil from a fly-spray gun.

Historiette

SALLY EILERS, or, to be exact, Dorothea Sally Eilers, was born in New York Dec. 11, 1909. Her father is Irish and her mother Jewish. With her family she moved to California when she was 6 years old, but later returned to New York, where she attended high school for a while. Then she went back to Hollywood, where she graduated, studied art and worked in an art store.

SALLY EILERS.

It was none other than Jane Peters, now known as Carole Lombard, who persuaded her to "go into pictures." Miss Eilers made her screen debut in "The Red Mill" with Marian Davies and later had a tiny part in "While Paris Sleeps." She has been creating quite a furore lately by her clever characterizations, of which "Bad Girl" is the outstanding.

Red is the natural shade of her hair, but Fox wanted her to become a blond and so she did. For this concession to the powers that be, her husband, Hoot Gibson, from whom, says report, she is at present separated, refused to speak to her for three days.

She loves sports clothes and blue is her favorite color. She has a passion for shoes and hats. Her hobbies are swimming and tennis.

Miss Eilers is 5 feet 3 inches tall and weighs 108 pounds.

Chicago, May 12.—It was at about this time last year that you favored your readers with an interesting series of sketches of the careers of various stars popular in musical comedy and light opera years ago.

Why not treat us to some more of these sketches, covering some of the following? Harry Bulger, Richard Carle, Joe Cawthorne, Jess Dandy, Dave Lewis, William Norris, Frank Moulan, Joe Howard, Victor Moore, Bert Williams, Nat M. Wills, John Slavin, Mabel Barrison, Mabel Hite, Grace Van Studdiford, Anna Held, Cecil Lean, Joe Whitehead, Joe Coyne, Oscar Figman, William Rock, Rogers Brothers, George Sydney, Joseph Murphy, and Chauncey Olcott.

I would particularly like to see a sketch about Richard Carle, my favorite comedian, whose productions of "The Chaperon," "The Storks," "The Tenderfoot," "The Spring Chicken," "The Mayor of Tokio," etc., were considered the last word in entertainment about twenty years ago.

H. S. STORRS.

New Operetta on Careers of 'Mikado' Men

Gilbert and Sullivan as Characters in Show They Helped to Write.

NEW YORK, May 14.—[Special.]—Milton Aborn, impresario of Gilbert and Sullivan revivals, is planning for the more or less immediate staging of a play with music that should arouse the G. and S. fanatics. It is called "The Savoyards"—that being the slang name for people who perform in or make a hobby of the Gilbert and Sullivan repertory—and it will tell a story that begins when the last curtain fell on the London première of "The Gondoliers," in London, Dec. 7, 1889. Miss Willson Whitman is the author. The lyrics are excerpts from the famous ditties of Gilbert, and the score is a melange of the equally famous compositions of Sullivan. All of which sounds like a happy idea.

The Theater Guild's plans for next season involve a play by John Howard Lawson called "The Pure in Heart," and Owen Davis' dramatization of "The Good Earth." The organization will send Shaw's "Too True to Be Good" on tour next fall, but Beatrice Lillie will be missing from the cast. Gossip runs to the effect that Miss Lillie—or Lady Peel in the society columns—will be associated with Clifton Webb and Charles Butterworth in a revue to be staged by Max Gordon.

Six Broadway premières are scheduled for the week of May 23, as follows: "Bridal Wise," a comedy with Madge Kennedy as star; "Heigh-Ho, Everybody," a play satirizing radio broadcasters, with Joseph Santley and Edna Hibbard in the cast; "Christopher Comes Across," a farce to be staged by Brock Pemberton; "A Thousand Summers," a drama by Merrill Rogers with Jane Cowl as its star; "Words and Music," an intimate revue, and "On the Make," a play by Roger Gray.

Ina Claire, who has not graced the stage since her revival of "Our Betters" in February, 1928, will return to the footlights on May 29 in Cleveland as guest star of Robert McLaughlin's production of "Reunion in Vienna." Other restagings of recent Broadway successes will follow, with other leading players—"Blessed Event," with John Gallaudet in place of Roger Pryor; "Whistling in the Dark," with Percy Helton in place of Ernest Truex, and "Mourning Becomes Electra," with Alice Brady as Lavinia.

Billy Rose, who is optimistic on account of the 33 weeks of amazing prosperity enjoyed by his touring company in "Crazy Quilt," talks about putting another revue into rehearsal within a month. Whenever any one speaks to Mr. Rose about the depression he laughs and produces his bankbook as evidence to the contrary.

Ethel Barrymore is another theatrical celebrity who refuses to "feel the pinch." She will not bring her tour in "The School for Scandal" to an end in Montreal tonight, according to schedule. She announces that her business is too good to be abandoned.

The Voice of the Movie Fan

This Fascinating Mr. William.

Dear Miss Tinée: Not since the late Rudolph Valentino has a screen personality so captivated me as has the fascinating Mr. Warren William.

It seems to me he has all the attributes necessary for making a tremendous success in sound pictures—acting ability, intelligence, a sensitive, mobile face, splendid physique, grace of movement, charm of manner, a delightful sense of humor, and, last but not least, an exquisite speaking voice that runs the gamut of all emotion.

I was attracted from the time of his first appearance on the screen in "Honor of the Family," and on the strength of his work in that and the other pictures in which he has appeared I went to see his first starring vehicle, "The Mouthpiece." To say that I was carried away by his perfect impersonation of his rôle would be putting it mildly, for not only did he put the story across by his fine acting but also by his facial expressions and the beautiful inflections of his voice.

May he keep up the good work and be fortunate enough to be given stories worthy of his exceptional talents.

Editor's note: Now that's what I call a good sendoff!

Roles Not for Pola and Paul.

Dear Miss Tinée: I have always valued your criticisms and enjoy your reviews, but one of your Sunday columns was a keen disappointment to me. I refer in particular to "Bits About 'Em," wherein you made the utterly ridiculous suggestion that Pola Negri resembled gorgeous Katharine Cornell, and that in the event Miss Cornell could not be induced to film "The Barretts of Wimpole Street" perhaps Pola Negri could make a picture version, and if Brian Ahern were not the Browning of the film, Paul Lukas should be cast, et cetera.

Do you realize that the Barretts are fundamentally English, and how could Pola with her broken English portray Elizabeth Barrett or Paul Lukas—the Austrian—play the English poet.

Think it over. An Ex-Tinée Fan.

Editor's note: Admitting that Pola and Paul are not English and that the Barretts and Browning were—I still think these two players would be great in "The Barretts of Wimpole Street." But, of course, I'm not always right.

Information on the Side.

Dear Miss Tinée: A responsive chord to the note sounded by a correspondent whose letter appeared in "The Voice of the Movie Fan," Sunday, May 8, prompts—modesty forbids inspires—me to suggest re the plaint of Mrs. D. Horwich, this "happy thought":

Remember way back when, in the days of vaudeville, on either side of the stage there were "slipboards" upon which were posted the names of the actors appearing in the show, and sometimes one or two prominent ones who were to appear the following week? Why not install such bulletin boards in movie theaters, listing the names of the players on the screen, illuminated by softly shaded lights, so that they might be read at any and all times, yet be of no annoyance when looking at the picture?

The idea I seek to put over is this: I do wish they'd find some means of posting the names of the players where we could read them at any time. Why not?

Appreciatively yours,

WILLIAM B. DELANCEY.

Editor's Note: Why not, indeed! It's an idea, anyway!

Capitol Hill Is Swarming with 'Hearing Bugs' of Both Sexes

By Genevieve Forbes Herrick.

WASHINGTON, D. C.—[Special.]—Capitol hill is swarming these days with "hearing bugs." They come in both sexes, but the female of the species—well, you know the rest of that sentence. Like the man who went to the funeral just for the ride, they fly to committee and subcommittee hearings for no reason at all except, perhaps, an overamount of leisure and an underamount of entertainment.

Unlike the lobbyist who concentrates on the hearings where he has an ax to grind, the "hearing bug" flits about with energetic impartiality from a hearing on the tax bill to a hearing on immigration, or maybe it's irrigation—he doesn't bother to check up.

The short selling hearings brought out a lot of socially prominent bugs, wives of some of our wealthier senators and representatives, aristocratic cave dwellers, ordinarily so aloof to "that official set," and even the spouses of several cabinet members. Last week the government put on a good show with beer, babies, and bonus all having hearings. But the crowd deserted the triple bill when news sped about the corridors that Gaston Means was about to tell all, over in another building.

Choose Working Girls.

I see by the papers that Representative Thomas R. Amlie, a Wisconsin widower, has married his children's governess. While dancing debutantes are smiling at bachelor diplomats and wealthy widows are dining congressional widowers the working girl is quietly changing her name to Missus. Representative Timberlake, a Colorado Republican, married the head waitress in the restaurant where he dined.

Bob La Follette persuaded Rachel Wilson Young, his father's clerk and later his secretary, to become the wife of the junior senator from Wisconsin. Another Wisconsin congressman, Representative John Schafer, took his secretary, Elsie Webster, for a bride. New York's La Guardia married his secretary. So did Senator James J. Davis of Pennsylvania.

It begins to look as if the only foreign diplomat of the many who used to transport their entire staff to fash-

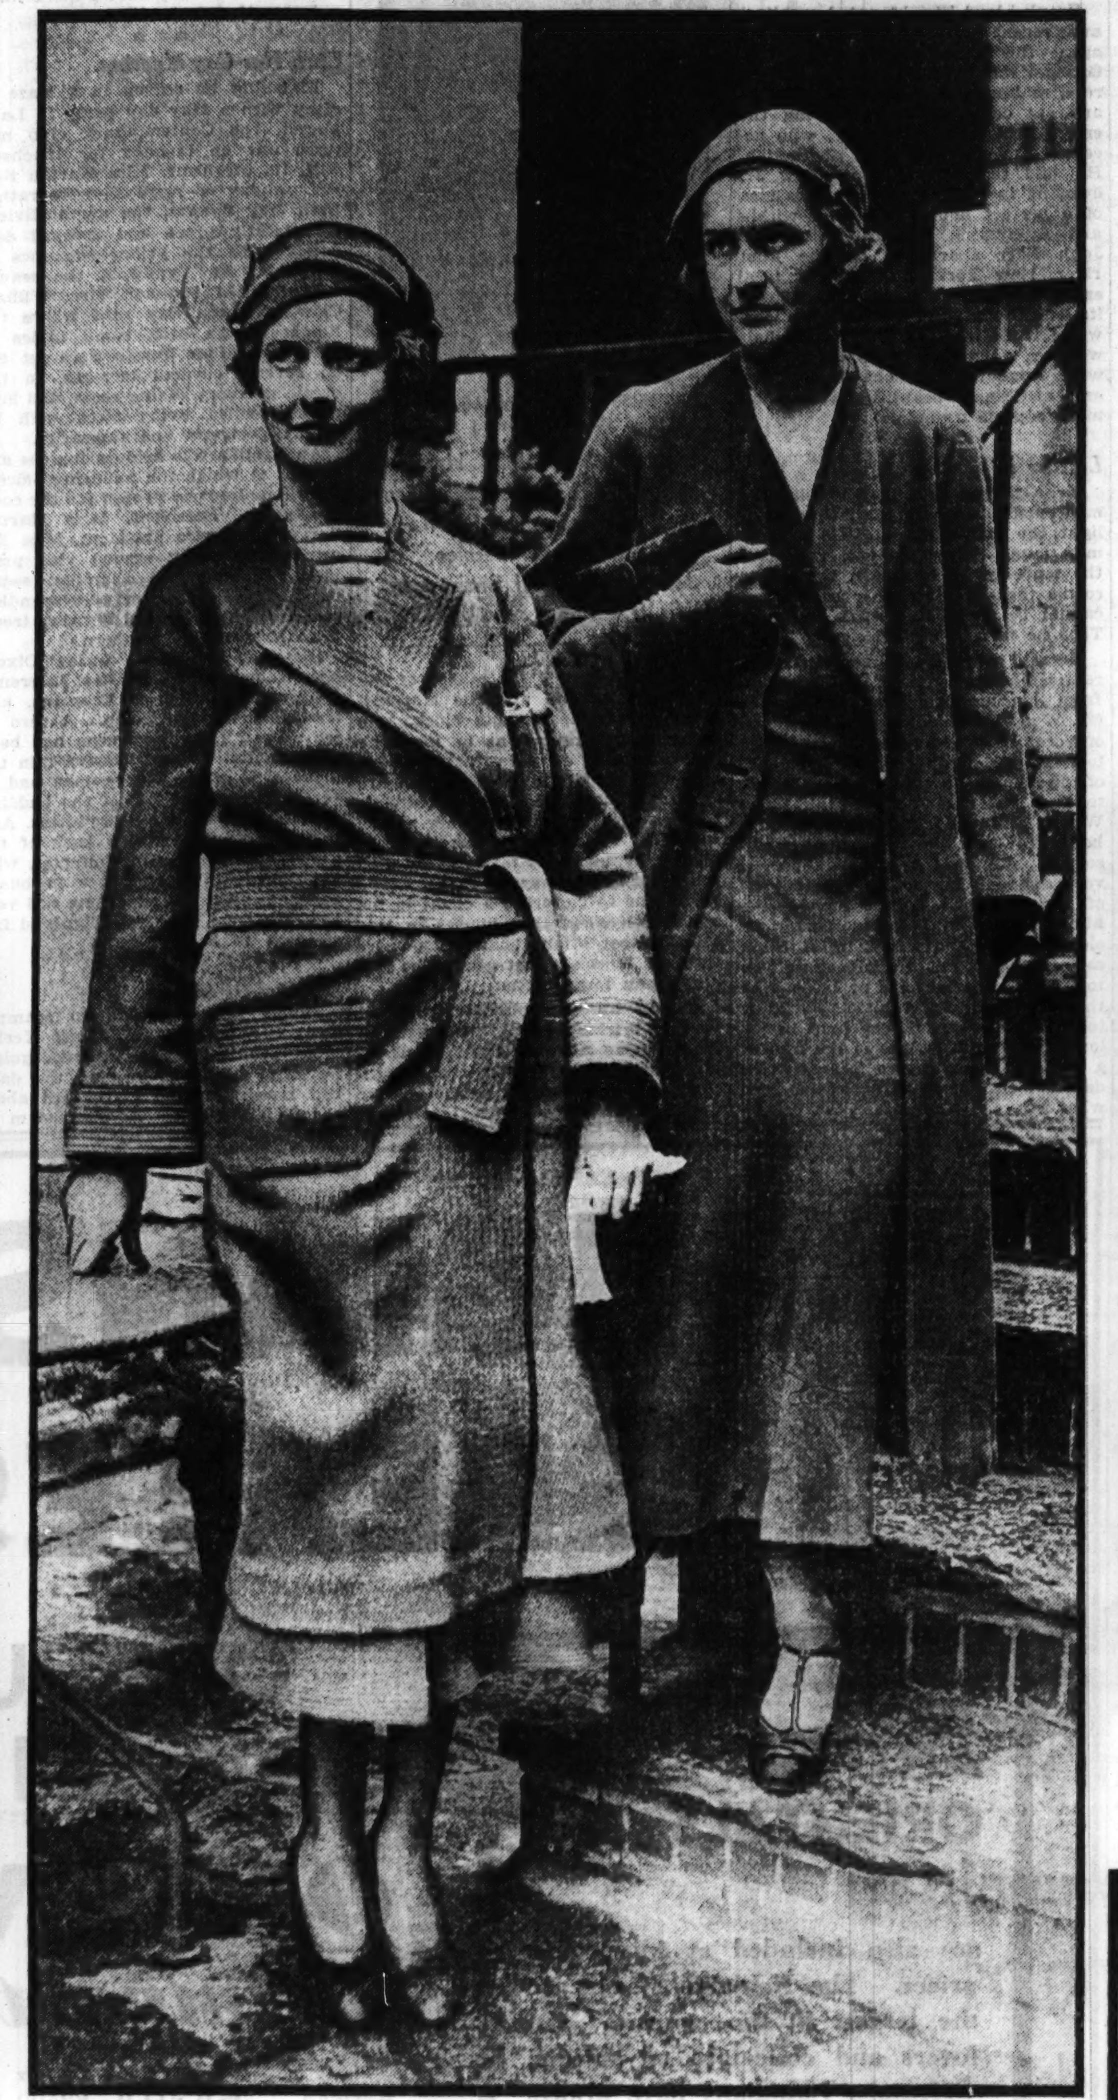
CHICAGO'S JUNIOR LEAGUERS



Mrs. Edward A. Fargo Jr. of 27 Bellevue place and Mrs. John D. Ames of 42 East Elm street were among the Junior League members who on Monday attended the annual meeting, which might have been a sort of fashion show, so smartly gotten up in their new spring outfits were the young women.

Changing Times Give Opportunity to Enjoy the Old Time Quiet Pleasures Once Again

Here Are a Husband and Wife in Chicago Who Go to Chic Little Dances by Themselves—And Are Still Smiling.

By Cousin Eve.

SKIPPING along with a friend at the end of a perfect day, I noted her happy face. One does not see so many nowadays. It was all because she was dining en ville with her husband. Alone they would go afterward to some play, and then on to do a little dancing after that, always solo. It was for this reason she was radiating such a lot of joy.

"We have these parties every few months," she said.

It made me think of Mr. and Mrs. Albert Simms of New Mexico, the former Ruth Hanna McCormick, serious, politically minded. When she recently passed through Chicago, shortly after her marriage, several dinners were given in their honor. From one of these they withdrew quite early—an engagement. Mrs. Simms confided they were off for a bit of a dance at the Bal, which was charming, too.

What a life! The world is up to all kinds of queer capers these days! Unmoved, one hears of dukes who part with Romneys and Reynoldses, and of earls selling castles ancestral and grand; of Austrian archdukes letting their shooting boxes and Russian generals taxi driving in the crowded streets of Paris. One motors in England in a country dotted with historic houses where one may dine and sleep. Paying guests, "P. G.'s," are everywhere the order of the day. All this seemed interesting, vaguely practical, though far away.

Takes Paying Guests.

Now we have it next door. On our own gilt coast. I have admired a beautiful, sunny house so often, with its chatelaine. Almost a palace, it stands wide, many windowed, for hospitality, pleasing living, and a certain elegance and pride of life. Great financial changes in the last few weeks, and now that this charming, charitable woman, once called the wealthiest in Illinois, has met the issue by taking in a few paying guests there is great excitement over the whole matter in a close little community. These are the social facts at this time. Changes, momentous matters.

Social things are very quiet these days. Dress is in its simplest forms everywhere, and often of yesteryear or the year before that. As for jewels, they are taboo, in bad taste, and not worn. Too many people are suffering. Yet life was never before such an adventure and most of the people one knows are terribly game about what has bitten them. They make no outcry and go on their way, pernaps, joking a little more than usual.

As a matter of fact, friends see more of one another now than ever and are more devoted. We are living in marvelous times and the ones who get no thrill out of them must be blind, deaf, and also a bit dumb.

But there is still a social procession

GothamSociety Prizes Its Fun More than Title

By Nancy Randolph.

NEW YORK.—[Special.]—Strange, indeed, are the ways of Gotham, and any one who says we are not a gullible lot is mistaken. For some days now there has been "a pother" about one "Prince" Michael Romanoff, whose proper name is Harry Gerguson and who came, originally from around your way. Held on Ellis island as a stowaway from France, the "prince" escaped into New York and, having been recaptured, is to be deported immediately.

However, the newspaper writers are distinctly wrong when they say that the "prince" deceived all New York society for many long months. True, at first the "prince" did take in a few people. What helped was his decidedly Oxford accent. It took in all the members and the officers of the British Universities club in New York some years ago, and if they couldn't recognize a spurious Oxford accent from the real thing, it must have been an excellent imitation.

Gotham Likes to Be Amused.

After a while the "prince" was exposed, but far from causing society to banish the man, it had decidedly the opposite effect. Every one along Fifth and Park avenues knew very well who "Prince" Michael Romanoff was, but the fellow is so distinctly entertaining that New York cradled him to its bosom and called him "prince" with an amused smile. I admit that I, for one, always liked "Mike" Romanoff, though I knew he was a rascal. Gotham loves a title, but it admires an amusingly impudent fellow even more.

On the other hand, consider a real prince. While "Prince" Michael Romanoff was being wined and dined and swaggering about the best hideaways of town, with evidently all sorts of money, Prince George, a real member of the Romanoff family, slaved to earn a living.

As the "prince" is short and thick-

When Chicago Was Young

By Herma Clark.

Letters from Martha Freeman Esmond to her friend, Julia Boyd of New York.

Chicago, April 1, 1880.

DEAR JULIA:

Will and Orrington Lunt have just started downtown, after lunching together here at our Rush street house. Will has been drawing up some papers for Mr. Lunt, and they came here from Will's office. Young Martha said as they drove off, with Mr. Lunt waving his hat in farewell greeting: "I used to think when I was a little girl that God must look a good deal like Mr. Orrington Lunt, and I still think so."

I was pleased that she appreciated what a fine man she had been listening to at table. Mr. Lunt is a wonderful character and has a beautiful face, his hair, now quite silvery, forming a halo about his head. The Lunts live in Evanston, which is really a child of Mr. Lunt's, for he founded the town. He felt that its natural beauty and its nearness to Chicago made it an ideal location for a college. He helped to obtain the charter for the town and the university, and to write into both provisions which safeguard the young people of the town, for Evanston has no saloons, which makes it a fine place for a residence.

Will and Mr. Lunt were speaking today at the table of the bill Mr. Joyce of Vermont has just introduced into congress advocating a commission to inquire into the liquor traffic. Both Mr. Lunt and Will hope it will pass, for they feel it may help to curb the growing evil of intemperance. Mr. Joyce said in the house yesterday that the use of intoxicants costs the American people in two years enough to pay the national debt. He calls the liquor trade the curse of our nation and thinks the best efforts of good men and women should be directed to rooting it out.

Mr. Lunt [to return to my subject] is a Maine man, and was one of the very early residents of Chicago, coming here in the early '40s. He prospered in the grain business and bought a good deal of real estate, which has been the foundation of so many Chicago fortunes. The Lunts are cultivated people and have spent much time abroad. After the civil war they went to Europe and remained some years for the education of the children.

They returned in time to pass through the experience of the fire of 1871, which destroyed all the buildings from which Mr. Lunt derived his income. But, like many other ambitious men of our city, he refused to be daunted by disaster and began amid the ruins of the city to lay the foundations of another fortune. He didn't neglect to help others in the time of calamity, and even while he was struggling to rebuild his own property he was giving financial help and wise counsel to the Relief and Aid society, the Methodist Church, and Northwestern university.

After a time the Lunts decided to move out to Evanston, their house in the city having been destroyed by the fire. It was natural that they should go out there, for Mr. Lunt had given much time and thought to that suburb; but we do miss them in town. They have a beautiful home on Lake Michigan in Evanston, which has become a center of influence. Distinguished visitors are always entertained there, and because of Mr. Lunt's connection with the university [he has been vice president of the board of trustees ever since its founding], the college spirit pervades it, and the atmosphere is inspiring.

Will says Mr. Lunt is one of the most liberal men in Chicago. He has been president of the Chicago Bible society and the Chicago Orphan asylum, and every good cause counts on him for support; but he is so devoted to his church, the Methodist, that denomination is probably most generously remembered in his gifts. I remember hearing that, just before he left for Europe in 1865, he made a gift of 157 acres of land to Northwestern university. It has increased enormously in value since then, so that the university is becoming quite rich. I heard a Methodist preacher say once, when it was announced that Mr. Lunt had made a large donation to some Methodist church: "I wish it would cloud up and rain Lunts!" And it would be refreshing if we did have more such citizens.

Last week we attended the silver wedding of Dr. and Mrs. Hiram W. Thomas. Dr. Thomas is one of the great preachers of the country, I believe it is conceded. He is pastor of Centenary church, one of the popular churches of the Methodist denomination over on the west side. The whole town, it seems to me, turned out to this anniversary celebration, for Dr. and Mrs. Thomas have many friends in all walks of life.

He told humorously of his early days when he was courting the young lady who later became his wife. He said his father-in-law elect had no use for Methodist ministers, and, by a curious fate, there were three young Methodist divines who were in love with his daughter. Papa-in-law particularly disliked the idea of having young Hiram Thomas for a son-in-law, saying he would never amount to anything, the red headed upstart! So there was nothing for it but to elope, which they did, and they seem never to have regretted it.

I often wonder if I could have endured the nomad life of a minister's wife. But there are compensations, I suppose. Dr. Thomas told some of their adventures. He said that when they went to his first pastorate, out in Iowa, the country was new and money far from plentiful, so that for the first four years his pay was $300 annually. [I suppose he receives three or four thousand dollars now.] But, he went on, they had

Mrs. William K. Meyers and Miss Betty Jane Norcott helped elect the new officers last Monday, and Miss Norcott also took the minutes of the meeting in shorthand, which she has been studying all winter. Mrs. Meyers is the former Pauline Wolff.

(Tribune photos.)

Mrs. Alfred M. Wolfe (left) had finished taking in the luncheon money and counting the members as they entered the annual meeting of the Junior League, and Miss Dorothy Schmidt had just turned over the gavel to Miss Atkin when this picture was taken. Miss Schmidt is to go to California as a Chicago delegate to the national convention May 21.

Doumer's Death Saddens All French Society

A Thirty Day Period of National Mourning Is Now Being Observed.

By May Birkhead.

PARIS.—[Special.]—A sudden setback has occurred in the social season caused by the tragic death of the French president, Paul Doumer. Through respect a thirty day period of national mourning will be observed in France and many Americans as well as French will postpone charity affairs and entertainments.

Ganna Walska had issued invitations for a big luncheon at the Theatre des Champs Elysées, where the foyer and stage make a spacious and picturesque setting for large scale social functions. She has canceled 200 invitations and was present with a small party at the Trianon Palace hotel for a luncheon in Versailles when Albert Lebrun was elected president.

Uusually crowds and well known personalities throng this hotel and also the Hotel des Reservoirs when the French chamber of deputies and the senate unite as one assembly to elect a president of the republic, both caravansaries entertaining normally with much mundane éclat.

Elected on May 13.

Many remarked that the ill-fated President Paul Doumer was not only the thirteenth president of France but was elected last year on May 13. The day then was like midsummer and brilliant personalities of diplomacy, art and letters were everywhere in evidence.

But this year the temperature was cold and there was much restraint owing to the widespread grief. Prince and Princess Achille Murat and the Belgian and Argentine ambassadors, as well as many political figures, were seen at the Hotel des Reservoirs. An American songstress stopping incognito at this hotel is said to be Mary Garden, who usually arrives there about this time of year.

Luncheon guests at the Trianon Palace were André Citroen, automobile manufacturer; Gen. Campbell of the American embassy, Jeff Dickson of Paris, the London prize winning impresario; Princess Lotfellah, the duke of Leeds, Alexandre Millerand, a former French president; Baron Edouard de Rothschild, Jacques Rouches, recently appointed director of the opera; Lord Tyrel, the British ambassador, and others.

moving on. Last week was full of pageantry. First, the crowded Stanley-Elting wedding at St. Chrysostom's. That was lovely, perfect in every effect, yet restrained. Massed ferns and callas all over the chancel, candles, and a group of young and lovelies. Instead of maids they were recent brides, with the exception of Constance Hasler. As I remember them, they were Elsa Osborne, Josephine Galitzine, Hortense Henry Kelley, Ghita Watson MacLallen, Corinne Brewer McLaughlin, and they wore simple frocks of sea blue lace with big leghorn hats and garden bouquets.

Young Barbara Stanley, maid of honor, was wearing the same model in yellow — sweet, tall young thing. Helen Stanley and Victor Elting Jr. have since childhood had a romance, and may it always continue! The slender bride, maidenly and radiant, wore a plain sheath of white satin with a long train and tulle veil, which went on and on long after she had passed to the altar. A pearl Juliet cap held her black wavy hair closely and she carried calla lilies.

The ceremony was followed by a large reception at the Casino of a very charming and rather informal character. The bridal party and families stood in line in the fountain room, and there were many relatives on both sides: Mrs. Philip Stanley from Pasadena, the bride's grandmother; Mrs. Dudley Rutter, her aunt, and on the groom's side the large Elting and Winston connections: Mrs. Philip and Mrs. Howard Elting and their children; Mr. and Mrs. Bertram Winston, Muriel Winston, Mrs. William Baum, Mr. and Mrs. Hampden Winston, Mrs. Thomas Grover, and Mme. Tagmose and her daughter.

The buffet in the center of the ballroom was all sugar wedding bells, white roses, and bride's cake, as well as an elaborate tea with salads and aspics. All the guests were enchanted when the bride and groom came out together, and, sitting informally on the emerald satin side seats, had supper with their friends.

Victor Elting Jr. has his father's profile and is a splendid looking man. He is taking his bride to live in Iowa.

Not one elaborate costume do I remember at our most fashionable spring wedding! Mrs. Rockefeller McCormick was in severe black hat and frock, as was Mrs. Wallace Kirk, whose little hat had a white knit crown. Mrs. Watson Armour wore a flowered print, and Mrs. Laurence Armour beige and sable.

There were lots of charming young children at this wedding. Mrs. Carter Harrison was there, home from the south; also Mrs. John A. Spoor, Mr. and Mrs. Edward Swift, the Henrys, and the Perrys. The wedding presents are very many and very handsome and I am hoping for a private view before the packing and shipping to the new home in the west.

Festival at Fortnightly.

Another beautiful party of last week was the annual May day festival of the Fortnightly. May day has been celebrated by the Fortnightly with music and flowers since its beginning, fifty years ago. And such a long list of north shore members sent great branches of feathery yellow forsythia, pink and yellow stocks, huge jonquils, and narcissi that I cannot remember one of them. But Mrs. Edward Shumway, Mrs. Charles Schweppe, and Mrs. John Gary arranged the flowers in the most divine manner, the great music room, gray and flame hangings, being filled with branches of forsythia.

It was the induction into office of Mrs. William Baum as president. And the program was sung by the famous Reynolds girls of Dixon, two handsome sisters, Mrs. John Ralston and Mrs. Douglas Harvey, who sang like nightingales—very often with charming heads close together, a perfect blending of voices. Indeed, Mrs. A. C. Callahan said it was a flawless artistry, and she knows. A very distinguished audience was in attendance and the next day in the same place the Friday club had its last meeting and May festa, which was a fashion show called "Pomp and Circumstance."

The program lies before me. On violet paper, it has the form of a dance program with cord and pencil —and does one fancy any one costume, or period from the '60s onward, one may make notation, as at Patou's, or Lanvin's, or wherever. Mrs. Parmalee McFadden was chairman of the event, and the room was very different from the day before. There was a stage with black velvet draperies at the north end from which sprouted a runaway down the middle. Facing this were spotlights, and guests hectic with anticipation sat in close rows, or stood or sat on the floor along the lines of march.

Gowns of Other Years.

To great martial chords the curtains parted and out came Mrs. Chalmers in charity ball splendor, white satin and pearls of long ago, closely followed by Miss Helen Gilbert in a sage green Worth costume of heavy silk with panniers, plaitings and all, embroidered in bands of silk flowers of every color of the rainbow. Belonging to Mrs. Arthur Meeker's mother, Mrs. Murray, it had been kept as an example of elaborate dress of a remote Chicago day.

Some of the costumes were stunning. Out skipped Mrs. Charles Dempster in a rich, swirling flame satin with bertha of beautiful lace and vast Carmen hat. Down the runway she danced with dangerous grace; then Mrs. Walter Kirk tripped forward showing tiny feet in a crisp green taffeta and silver lace Lucile frock of the war period, short and chic. Mrs. Arthur Bissell's act called, "When Arthur Asked Me," showed a flowered mulle in many ruffles and much lace, a huge black hat with white feathers and a cape.

Mrs. Walter Brewster swam in, in her noble old blue bathing suit, long sleeves and long black stockings, and Mrs. Edward Brewer must have ransacked the world to find the long nightie and cap, long sleeved. made of sheeting and with a neat row of buttons. She carried a candle and was called "Bonne Nuit" and made way for Mrs. William Hubbard in heavy black brocade and portentous hat, looking too amusing and roguish for words as she demonstrated her sable finery. Mrs. Chauncey McCormick, Mrs. Joseph M. Patterson, and Mrs. John Winterbotham wore garden dresses with trains and were a croquet party at Lake Geneva of the long ago.

Wigs and Bustles.

Mrs. Charles E. Brown, with a green satin bustled dress, wore also a waxen nose and a waterfall of black hair, and she squeaked poetry of the '60s in the funniest voice, while Mrs. John Farwell was "High Life in Lake Forest." Mrs. Crans Baldwin was a graceful equestrienne and danced in and out in inimitable style with a gold laced riding habit.

Mrs. David Cook Jr. held most elaborately a foolish little parasol over a huge hat, and the two Peggys, Hambleton and Bissell, were bridesmaids for Julia Follansbee, who was the bride. In black wig and long tulle veil and bridal costume of long ago, she was the final number and climax of a very gay and diverting frolic. As she turned to retire from the runway a rough blast of wind flung wide the windows, blew off the bridal veil and threatened the black wig in an impromptu comedy act that added uproar to the gayety.

There were two large tea tables. Mrs. John V. Farwell III. was pouring tea at one, and the characters of the fashion show, all in costume, mingled so that they could be seen and admired intimately. Mrs. William A. Nitze is the newly elected president of the Friday club, and I almost forgot to say that the number, "A Bicycle Built for Two," where she and Mrs. Weber Linn appeared wearing bloomers and shoving a huge two seater, was one of the thrills of the day. John McCutcheon, home tanned and well from Treasure Island, was the only man there, and quite the hero of the hour.

A Diverting Party.

The Arts and Industries dinner last week was a diverting bit of a party, very well attended. At the Congress hotel its director, Miss Norma Stehle, had the amusing idea to stage it in the baroque Louis BV. room, the occasion being a discussion on modernism in dwellings, by moderns and others, the idea being, sans doute, that all the moldings, carvings, gilt, ormolu, brocade and latticed mirrors would inflame the moderns to battle and thus provide a Roman holiday for 200 guests.

Frank Lloyd Wright, noted architect and recent autobiographist, was to open the discussion, and Alfred Granger was to follow, but Mr. Wright rose, making a few rhetorical passes, and sat down suddenly, leaving the entire field to Mr. Granger, who accepted the challenge with distinction. He said that the William Clow Jr. dwelling in Lake Forest was his idea of a perfect house, delightful within and interesting outside. Also, the John Farr apartment on the East river, New York, was another ideal establishment on strictly modern lines, its long living room on the river, with white walls, shelved with books half way up, no moldings, no curtains at wide windows, its objects of art, ancient Chinese, beautiful and rare, all made a perfect whole.

Letting in the Light.

Mr. Granger said that to him the modernistic idea was the letting in of light; the good building of the day admits much light. He rather decried the tendency to openness, that is, to rooms that open to other rooms and cannot be closed and made intimate. That he termed unlivable.

He said a great deal more that was reasonable, and paused. Whereupon from his ambush sprang, tigerlike, Mr. Wright, who, with a great arsenal of vocabulary and much charm, tried to route Mr. Granger. Developments of the evening brought other architects to their feet and finally Frank Lloyd Wright affirmed that he could build a house to look like any client whatsoever. Which led my neighbor, a very amusing lawyer, to say that all of Mr. Wright's houses looked like himself. Mr. Wright being of supreme elegance and the wearer of a black satin stock, I felt an immediate yen to see his Imperial hotel at Tokio. And then Mr. Wright's architectural fancy took flights where it was hard to follow him—"architecture is the soul of a people"—architecture is a spiritual development—spiritual aspiration, and what not.

Ernest Grunsfeld Jr., maker of the Adler planetarium and the Marshall Field Garden apartments block, was easier to understand, as he made no claims to being a portrait painter with bricks and stucco, and with much fire and lucidity discussed the architect's relation to his client. Another at the speaker's table, Mr. Holtzman, rose finally and, evidently taking issue with the amusing fantasy of Frank Lloyd Wright as to picturing a client in his house, remarked that houses in this country so often changed owners that the houses might always be giving wrong impressions.

During all this play of wit and verbal brickbats Col. William N. Pelouze was sitting blandly as chairman, unmoved. I was sitting with some very entertaining people and we were all entranced with the party. But the next day at the wedding we had it pointed out to us by a ruthless critic that "the debate was utterly footless and arrived nowhere."

Do any debates ever arrive anywhere? They only help us, perhaps, to make up our minds. For example, I am now perfectly sure I don't want a house that looks like me.

Club Has Gay Meeting.

Finishing its season in a blaze of glory with a May day party in Lake Forest, the Contemporary club motored out on Monday for luncheon with its president, Miss Martha Sarver. A day of April showers rather than May flowers, the north Riviera was faintly green and sprayed delicately with the yellow branches of forsythia. At Wyndwold, the beautiful estate of Mr. and Mrs. William Clow in Green Bay road where the luncheon was held, small tables to seat ninety-four guests were set out on several covered terraces, in the breakfast room, dining room, and long yellow walled living room with its family portraits and tapestries.

An election was held during the afternoon at which the following officers were unanimously chosen for the coming year: President, Miss Martha Sarver; first vice president, Mrs. Edward E. Everett; second vice president, Mrs. Harold Eldridge; secretary, Miss Ruth Lester; corresponding secretary, Mrs. McDoel Wyman; treasurer, Margaret R. Sanborn.

Directors are Mrs. Wesley Dixon, Miss Naomi Donnelley, Mrs. Lawrence Wilson, Mrs. Charles Yeomans, and Mrs. Madeline H. Tripp. A giro to see several famous gardens had been planned, but owing to heavy rain the jaded eyes of the city women had to be content with vistas of the budding fruit trees over at the Brewsters. And then the formal garden back of the Clow house, Italian in character, with cypresses and cedar trees in bushy sequence sheltered an oblong and very beautiful pool, blue as indigo and fascinating to behold.

Off to Holland.

People are beginning to scamper away here and there. James Keeley is at sea, sailing to Holland, going, he says, to avoid hearing the daily bad news: "Have you heard about the So and Sos?" At Rotterdam he has a small auxiliary yacht waiting, manned by five Hollanders, who will run him through all the Dutch canals and down the Rhine and back. It is the season of tulips in Holland, and thousands of acres are laid out at this season in an incredible glory of color. Mr. Keeley expects to be back in no time at all.

One thing that really delighted me last week was the Tatterman marionettes at the Goodman. Clever, chic, witty. There was Red Riding Hood's granny in bed, soliloquizing, a la Eugene O'Neill, of the loved ones. The one she had poisoned, those she had driven to destruction. Enter an engaging wolf. Grandma laments like a good Republican: "First it was Cal, then it was Herbie Hoover, now it's the Wolf." The master of ceremonies, the tap dancing, and the long haired pianist were all marvelous. Also the scene from grand opera in English, the baritone singing "I had a donkey and he would not go," in a temple scene that had six more pillars than in the Civic opera's "Aida."

If one could have been in several places at once, Alice Gerstenberg's dramatization of "Water Babies," given Saturday afternoon, was something not to miss. A Sunday performance followed and both were jammed, not even standing room being left for the many friends of the author.

Editor Goes to China.

Henry Luce, editor of Time, went through last week en route to China, staying over a day or so with his charming bellemere, Mrs. Frederick Haskell, at the Lake Shore Drive. He picked out his own dinner party, which included the Barney Goodspeeds for good measure, and then was off with his sister's husband for the rising sun.

Some very high up Chinamen are doing the honors for China and have arranged to show Henry Luce all the sights. After which he passes into Japanese hands and sees things from the Japanese point of view, scenery and so on. And then he becomes the guest of Russia, and that interesting character, Joseph Stalin, for quite a piece, and will probably, with that excellent mind of his, see scenery plus.

In any case, late in July he plans to meet in Berlin Mrs. Henry Luce and babes, nurses, governess, and chauffeur, they having already sailed for Europe to spend the intervening time in Switzerland. Henry Luce is editor not only of Time and Fortune but of a new unit called the Architectural Age, thereby keeping employed some close friends of his.

BLANKETS for Wedding Presents

Of course you'll have to send her a present. And deciding what to buy is always such a problem — it must be something that will make a nice showing alongside of the other presents — something that will last a long time — and something that will conform with your 1932 budget. Nothing could be more appropriate than a Kenwood blanket, especially if you wish to please the bride.

Interest of Club Women Centered on Convention

Annual Meet of Ill. Federation Opens Tuesday

Resume of Year's Work, Future Plans, Elections to Fill Three Days.

By Roberta Nangle.

MORE than eight hundred delegates from women's clubs all over the state will arrive in Chicago tomorrow for the thirty-seventh annual convention of the Illinois Federation of Women's clubs, which will open on Tuesday and continue until Friday at the Hotel Sherman.

The convention means three days of reports and discussions of district and departmental business of interest to every woman's organization. There will be reports of the closing year's work and plans and suggestions for next season's schedule. On Thursday new officers will be elected, and on Friday morning at a meeting of a new board of directors, a new president will take the place of Mrs. Mary A. Wall, whose two years of fine service in that office will end after she has presided at the last session of the convention. The nomination for the next presidency is to be given, we understand, to Mrs. William F. Farrell, a former vice president of the federation, who, as chairman of club institutes, has made a success of a new department during the last few seasons.

Club Ethics

By Maude Swalm Evans.

THE committee chairman was sitting in the lounge working a crossword puzzle when the longtime member and the ex-president greeted her.

"Do tell me a word that means caterpillar hair," begged the committee chairman. "It begins with s and ends with a."

"Seta," answered the ex-president with the promptness of one familiar with puzzle words.

"Thanks," replied the committee chairman. "Just see how easy it was and yet I couldn't guess it. I wish crossword puzzles had never been invented."

"I don't see why you bother with them if you feel that way," commented the ex-president.

"Each member of our committee has pledged to earn money for the children's home and my husband who is a crossword puzzle fan and intent on making me one, too, has offered me $10 for doing a puzzle with the help of the dictionary and the thesaurus, only. I must do it within an hour and it must be a puzzle that appears in our evening paper some day this week."

"What has that to do with the one you're working now?" asked the longtime member.

"This is the one I couldn't get last night. I thought working it would make tonight's easier. Maybe you girls know some other short cuts to puzzle solving," she added hopefully.

"A man sat next to me in the car going home the other night who had a short cut," recalled the longtime member. "When he'd finished doing the crossword puzzle he offered his paper to me saying he had the same paper delivered at his home, but always bought one in town so he could work the puzzle on the way out."

"Why didn't he take the paper home and save the price of another?" asked the committee chairman.

"Because he and his wife always did the puzzle together after dinner, so he confided, and if he did it ahead of time he could say the answers quick, later on, and she'd tell him how smart he was, and he got a big thrill out of her thinking he was smart, for he wasn't at all. He was dumb, so he said."

"There you are," the ex-president told the committee chairman. "Buy a copy of your evening paper and study the puzzle on your way home and maybe you'll get the ten dollars and a thrill to boot."

set, so the real prince is tall and—well—skinny. Society is familiar with the sight of George on the main floor of a Fifth avenue department store. His ready smile flashes for his host of friends, and after answering the questions of a horde of shoppers from Brooklyn and the Bronx, George goes home, dresses, and dines on Park avenue.

We all call him "mon prince," but we don't do it with an amused smile. This real Romanoff deserves no end of praise for the way he has put all thoughts of past glories behind him and settled down to earning his living.

New Club Planned.

We do hear that Mrs. Evelyn Marshall Field is likely to turn over her lovely town residence at 4 East 70th street to a now-forming club, which promises to be quite the snootiest of the lot, not excepting the River and Brook. The idea for the club has existed some time, and it is to be called the "In Town Country club." In other words, it is to be a sort of permanent nineteenth hole. When the fairways of the many fashionable country clubs are sere and brown and under snow and ice, the members will gather at the "In Town Country club," indulge in all sorts of athletic sports to keep them in form for the coming summers, and perfect their technique in the matter of elbow raising.

It is certain that Mrs. Field will not occupy her house, for she recently leased the apartment far over on East 86th street, which was formerly the residence of Mrs. Nicholas Biddle. Mrs. Field is more interested in the great estate she purchased some time ago on Long island between Brookville and Syosset. The colonial mansion, gardens, stables, and pool are nearing completion at present, and Mrs. Field dashes back and forth from town almost every day.

Wedding of the Week.

Yesterday's swanky wedding gave a fillip to the week distinguished by the opening of Belmont Park. Out at Westbury, L. I., in the Church of the Advent, Laura Hazard Holmes, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Duncan Argyll Holmes, became the bride of Austen Townsend Gray, who is the son of the more famous Austen Gray of New York and Newport.

Barbara Holmes was her sister's maid of honor, with her tiny cousin, Laura Hazard Leonard as flower girl. Among the bridesmaids were Jessie Hazard Leonard, Mrs. Henry Parish II., Mrs. Robert Leeson, Eleanor Schley, and Elizabeth S. Polk.

Austen Gray was his son's best man, and the ushers, garnered from a noted Harvard crop, included such lights as J. Gordon Douglas Jr., Francis P. Kinnicutt, William T. Wetmore, Dwight F. Davis Jr., John R. Fell Jr., James D. P. Bishop, Ogden Phipps, Barclay Kountze Douglas, Granville O. B. Ulman, and Kenneth W. Pendar.

Snuff Boxes Are Coming Back Into Favor in London

Many prominent London men recently have been observed carrying them. Some produce them with a defiant flourish, declaring snuff has medicinal advantages, particularly in combating colds.

Clergymen are among the most regular snuff takers. It is something like a custom among them, for in the 18th century almost every pulpit in England had its snuff box. Hardly a bishop, or vicar, began preaching without first dipping into it.

Snuff always has been provided, moreover, at the main door of the house of commons

AT DRASTIC RE-PRICINGS

Four Painters Unite in One Exhibition at Studio Galleries of Increase Robinson

Work of Raymond Jonson, Richard M. Crisler, Elise Donaldson, and Edgar Britton at Studio Gallery.

By Eleanor Jewett.

SEVERAL of the smaller galleries are hung with interesting and fresh exhibits. Perhaps the gallery where competition is keenest among several delightful one man groups is the studio gallery of which Increase Robinson is director, in the Diana Court building at Michigan avenue and Ohio street. The work of four painters is being shown there. Raymond Jonson, whose magnificent abstractions in oil were seen in the same gallery earlier in the spring, offers a number of superb drawings.

Faced with their splendid skill, one wishes fresher terms of appreciation could be coined to spare adjectives already grown gray in service. No newer words coming obligingly to mind, one must content oneself by stressing the power of Mr. Jonson's practiced hand. One must hush the voice of conscience, which insists that a long paragraph full of southern graciousness were none too much for this array of virile yet sensitive drawings, and leave Mr. Jonson with the best part of a lengthy comment unspoken. The truth is that his work speaks so loudly for him no lesser voice is needed to bring into focus the unique qualities of his magnificent execution.

Turning, then, from this most inspiring part of the studio gallery program we find ourselves rubbing shoulders in the same room with a number of vivacious and jolly water colors by Richard M. Crisler. A debonair self-portrait gives the key to much of the amusing, haphazard frivolity of these charming pictures. Mr. Crisler is a determined modernist but keeps his independence and remains original. You will like his rather flustered tiny landscape in delicate though troubled colors, and you will like better the dark toned landscape. You will like his flower paintings, a rich orchid for one, that is fascinating in its richness of color. Humor peeps even into the railroad yards, where a tiny figure waves a frantic flag high above the rails.

Charming Water Colors.

The second half of the exhibit comprises the water colors of Elise Donaldson, and the water colors, with an oil or so for balance, of Edgar Britton. Miss Donaldson is from Virginia and her pictures are nearly as charming as her soft, southern accent. Neither the one nor the other is forced or affected. Both are natural, both are friendly.

She gives us Chicago in a homely aspect. Little scraps of life that include children in a park, or Negro workmen resting on a bench; the far glimpse of a Jewish synagogue or the nearer view of a quaint old Polish church; these are her subjects. A French flavor permeates her color; it is soft, tinged with gray. It misses being our hard, brilliant Chicago atmosphere and takes on something of the wistful softness of the air along the Saine — which brings up the thought: Is color atmosphere? Of course not, but color as assuredly carries atmosphere.

Many of Miss Donaldson's water colors are of scenes in or near Jackson park. "Fishing in the Rain" is among the finest. She plays a joke on us in a different type of scene, "The Little Matisse," a girl peeping at a picture, the canvas complete to each last detail in the Matisse technique which has made his modernist reputation.

Flower and Fruit Studies.

Edgar Britton paints a brighter picture. His colors are definite and solid. The soft element noticeable in Miss Donaldson's medium is absent from his palette. His several nudes are not particularly important, one feels. They serve as so many delicate foils to the surer brilliance of his flower and fruit studies.

His "Daisy," a single white touch against the warm petals of a bouquet of other flowers, is effective. Possibly the best of his paintings, from every standpoint, is the "Arrangement in Brown and Gray," a beautifully complete and satisfying harmony of color and composition.

This exhibit will continue through May and it will be followed in June by an extremely decorative exhibition of flower paintings. The flower pictures will represent the work of many well known Chicago artists, conservatives as well as modernists. The exhibit will be by invitation. The result should be immensely successful. There are many painters of all schools of thought who are capable of bringing something new to this most picturesque of subjects.

Oils by Dorothy Loeb.

The Walden-Palmolive gallery is showing oils by Dorothy Loeb, who is a member of the Provincetown artist group, the New England Society of Contemporary Art, and the Sur-Independents of Paris. With those affiliations Miss Loeb could not well help but be modernist. She is. Her exhibit probably will prove of interest to many who are keen about Chirico and Leger and others of those artists who have blazed the trail Miss Loeb is painstakingly walking.

If one looks for verve, for brightness and freshness, for decorative qualities or practiced drawing, one will be disappointed. This little exhibit is but another showing of dull, heavy, and mannered pictures whose birth could not have caused a single pang. The emotional fount which put them forth was lacquered with overmuch familiarity with the modernist masters; and the tears that it ran are sawdust.

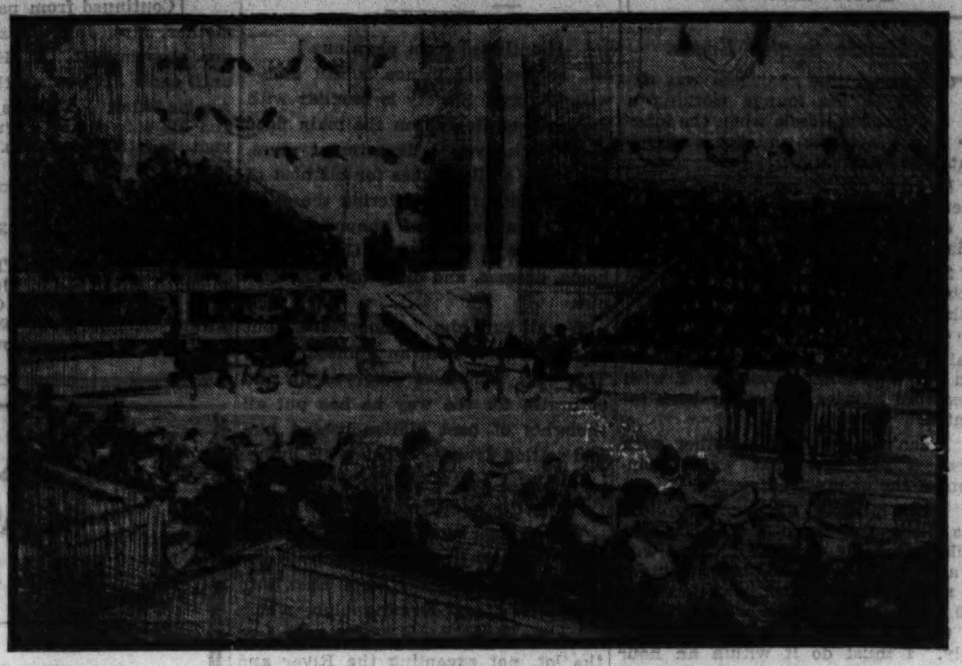
Camera Club Show.

The Chicago Camera club, 137 North Wabash avenue, has on exhibit its annual professional members' show. There are on the walls a great many prints of intriguing quality.



"THE STOCK SHOW," by Beatrice Levy, a drypoint in the First International Print exhibition near its close in the print galleries of the Chicago Art institute. Miss Levy has cleverly caught the atmosphere of the arena during Chicago's annual horse and stock show. The etching will interest those who are familiar with that spectacular affair.

The "Pastorale," by Harry C. Phibbs, is lovely, warm in quality. "The River Road," by W. F. Wienecke, president of the club, is thoroughly delightful. "Pyramid and Palm" and "The Alcazar: Seville," by Raymoth, are well done and interesting.

Albert B. Pacini offers a tranquil moment in "Homeward the Ploughman," sensitive in treatment and full of the feeling of the hour just before dusk. Shirley High shows "Forest Preserve," good in execution, and "Moonlight," the moon over a lake behind the tall finger of a pine, which reminds one of the wooded lakes of Michigan at night.

Probably the finest pieces of photography in the exhibit would include at the top of the list George Henry High's "Cousin Betty" and Dr. Maximillian Kern's "Seidenberg." Seidenberg is the first cellist in the Chicago Symphony and Dr. Kern gives us just a cross cut, a keen and dramatic episode of sensitive hands touching, with the delicacy of a poised butterfly, the bow along the strings of the instrument. It is a beautiful and gracious picture. Mr. High has an equally sensitive and delightful print, although naturally his finished portrait must be different in its appeal.

"Flowers and Butterfly," by John Skara, is an effective decoration. It is unusual as a photograph and must rank among the best in the show. "Flamingo," by M. J. Kelly, is an interesting composition, well worked out. "Dream Cloud," by A. W. Moline, and "Buckingham Fountain," also by Mr. Moline, are of value.

L. B. Mayo has a nice study of summer in his horses by a fence, and Paul D. Meyer has an excellent print in "Goldfish." Alfons Weber has an intriguing still life in his arrangement of fencing masks and foils. Dr. Poundstone must be reckoned among the strongest of these exhibitors with his beautiful "Lake of the Hills." W. C. West is another contributor who adds to the value of the show with his print, "Tranquility," sheep and lambs in a meadow.

The exhibit is extremely good and well worth a visit by all camera fans.

News of Art and Artists.

Word from Joseph Birren gives us the news that he and Mrs. Birren have set off on an extended motor trip to search out the trees of various states. As we know, trees have become Mr. Birren's favorite theme for the picturesque and decorative canvases with which he delights and surprises us each year.

Mr. Birren has a definite schedule of tree hunting on this trip which will take him to Utah and Idaho, then on to Seattle and back to San Francisco and Los Angeles, Santa Barbara, Santa Fé, and New Mexico. He does not expect to be home before next October. It sounds like a most entrancing voyage of discovery and we wish him and Mrs. Birren a safe and happy journey.

Last Tuesday the Arts club opened a showing of two loan exhibitions, the one of sculpture by Charles Despiau, from the collection of Frank Crowninshield, and the other of drawings by sculptors, privately owned by Chicagoans.

An exhibition of recent painting by Frank V. Dudley opened last Friday in the Hoosier gallery, 211 West Wacker drive. It will continue through June 1.

The Allerton House gallery opened last Sunday an exhibition of water colors by Charles Turzak, who has exhibited before in various galleries, including the studio gallery and the All-Illinois Society of the Fine Arts corridor gallery at the Stevens. The exhibit is delightfully gay and pleasing to the eye. It is fresh, sparkling and original. Mr. Turzak has a whimsical touch and an abrupt sense of the value of suggestion which are fascinating. He conveys infinite detail in a curve and far distance in the flash of a white vacancy.

He is a delightful modernist, playing with patterns and colors like so many prisms. The shadows of beauty tremble and splash; the scale of colors strike one on the other; the swift and vigorous finish of his execution sharpens the beauty; we are forced by the piled up evidence before us to credit him with a versatile and practiced talent.

A gayly decorative modernist arrangement is his still life of wooden penguin, fish-globe and bird. Silvery water and boats like birds gleam in "Skyline and Yachts." A swift and vigorous impression of the Buckingham fountain in play is vastly intriguing. Powerful and thoroughly masculine is the study of the steel mills.

Across the ocean we go to the little mountain village where the "Czechoslovakian Funeral" is taking place. The casket is, according to the village custom, out of doors, and near it is the bench on which sit the bereaved family. Other mourners stand. Backed up against the house are the lodge brothers in their uniforms waiting to serve as pallbearers and carry the coffin to its mountain top resting place.

There are several other Czechoslovakian scenes which are fascinating. The women getting the watermelons is possibly the best sketch in the show. Here Mr. Turzak has used the force of suggestion and the beauty of the rounded line with the greatest success. Look, too, at the beauty of the coloring, the deep shades in the women's skirts, the light green of the fruit and the red in the headkerchief. Several little landscapes are most charming. A still life, "Mineral Water and Magnolia," is brilliant.

Capitol Hill Swarms with 'HearingBugs'

ionable Newport for the summer who can afford to go there this season is Count Szechenyi, the Hungarian minister. But he's to put up at the home of his mother-in-law, and she's a Vanderbilt. The Szechenyis, by the way, do not want their daughter, Gladys, to be called countess. It's plain "Miss" for her.

Smart Folk Are Collectors.

If you would be truly smart here in Washington you must collect something—anything—just so you collect. Here are a few of the more celebrated collections and collectors:

Mrs. Hoover has scouted all over this part of the country after authentic old furniture.

Dolly Gann has a fine collection of elephants, china, silver, ivory, jade, which is a pleasant way of showing her love for her brother's G. O. P., isn't it?

When he's not pondering over affairs back in his native Chile, Ambassador Cruchaga is poring over his stamp album. He's got some good ones, too.

Mrs. Keyes, writing wife of New Hampshire's Senator Keyes, has a duo-collection—fans and dolls.

Mrs. Borah, wife of the chairman of the senate foreign affairs committee, has one of the most famous oriental collections in this country—a terrapin dish with handles of jade, a rice set of silver with carnelian handles, tapestries, and priceless porcelains of the Ming period. O, I nearly forgot, she has an opium couch of teakwood.

Chief Justice Hughes reads his Blackstone in a room hung with Dutch masters. His house formerly belonged to Jan van den Bosch of Holland.

You should see Sosostris Sidarouss Pasha, the Egyptian minister, beam when you ask to see his collection of porcelains. They are exquisite and rare.

Arthur Vandenberg, junior senator from Michigan, has a valuable library of books on his favorite historic figure, Alexander Hamilton. Two of the books he wrote himself.

Hostesses at the capital can send out their invitations in smaller envelopes these days, since the departure of the socially sought after but long named naval attaché of the Italian embassy, Capt. Nobile Luigi Notarbartelo dei Duchi di Villarosa. And every single syllable had to be included, for Washington is like that.

Asheville's Flower Festival to Start Month from Today

ASHEVILLE, N. C.—[Special.]—The Rhododendron festival, principal celebration of the summer months in Asheville, will be held June 15, 16, and 17. Many visitors from Chicago and other points in the middle west attended the colorful event last year.

A floral parade of decorated floats, the rhododendron pageant, and the coronation of the king and queen, with 1,000 persons in costume taking part, the King Jesters' night, a Mardi Gras event, the Rhododendron ball presentation of state sponsors in the persons of girls costumed to represent the state flowers, a miniature parade of baby floats, a terrapin Derby, and other events are on the program this season.

Recent arrivals at the Grove Park inn include: Miss Henriette Underwood, Mr. and Mrs. M. C. Hess, Mr. and Mrs. R. C. Gleason, Mr. and Mrs. S. P. Cummings, and Dr. C. G. Haldos of Chicago, and Mr. and Mrs. C. G. Littell of Kenilworth, Ill.

Guests at the Asheville Biltmore hotel include: Mr. and Mrs. S. C. Sheppard of Glen Ellyn, Ill.; Miss Emma L. Weise of Park Ridge, Ill., and Mr. and Mrs. A. E. Butler of Evanston; H. Brook Jones of Ridge Farm, Ill.; Mrs. S. J. Williamson of Chicago, Mr. and Mrs. W. D. Webster of Hubbard Woods, Ill., and Mr. and Mrs. W. I. Brockson of La Grange, Ill.

Britain's Upper Classes Attracted by Police Force

An admiral's son on the metropolitan police force is working for $15 a week, and a jailer at one of the London police courts owns a fine motor car and motorboat.

The son of a well-to-do vicar is a modest policeman in a southern London suburb, with his small salary supplemented by a handsome paternal allowance.

Newport Colony Has Social Additions

NEWPORT, R. I.—[Special.]—Many additions are being made to the colony this summer. Col. and Mrs. Ralph Isham have been here looking for a house for the season. Mr. and Mrs. Carroll Dana Winslow and Mrs. Livingston French will again occupy the Wood houses on Cliff terrace.

Dr. and Mrs. Alexander Hamilton Rice will be at Miramar on May 20 for a stay of six weeks before sailing to pass July and August abroad. They will return later in the summer to finish the season at Miramar.

Baroness Ingeborg von Finckh and her grandmother, Mrs. Heinrich Renjes, were the guests of Mr. and Mrs. Henry Howard at Gray Ledge. The engagement of the baroness to John Babcock Howard was announced some time ago and the wedding will take place here in July.

Mrs. Drexel Dahlgren is soon to open her Bellevue avenue estate. Others here include Mr. and Mrs. Leonard Thomas, Mr. and Mrs. Bradford Norman, Mrs. W. Storrs Wells, Mrs. Virginia Scott Hoyt, and Mr. and Mrs. William T. Aldrich.

When Chicago Was Young

met with loving kindness and good will, which meant more than money.

Dr. Thomas came to South Park Avenue Methodist church eleven years ago; then became the pastor of the First Methodist church; then went out to Aurora. Now he is at Centenary, which is one of the finest churches in the city. There were supposed to be no presents given for this anniversary, but I noticed that there was a check from "Long John" Wentworth, and that Clark Norris of La Moille, Ill., a pretty little town where we sometimes visit, had sent some lovely linen.

Among the people we saw and chatted with were Moses Wentworth, J. Young Scammon, Dr. Sarah Hackett Stevenson, Mr. and Mrs. Charles ReQua, the Misses True, and Mr. and Mrs. George B. Swift.

Do you remember my telling you about our splendid contralto singer, Miss Jessie Bartlett, who has made such a hit with the Chicago Church Choir company in "Pinafore"? She sings the part of Buttercup. She was married last night to Will J. Davis, who has been managing the company. Every one is interested in this romance, for both are so well known.

We were discussing this noon the question of electricity—whether it will ever take the place of gas in private houses. Will thinks it will, and he compares the feeling about it to that of the criticism gas itself had to meet at first. He says people were just as skeptical about that when it first was introduced.

"Why," says Will, "Sir Walter Scott wrote back to his home in Scotland from London: 'There is a madman here proposing to light the streets of London with smoke.' And it is said that the insanity of an old gentleman in England was established, and his confinement in an asylum secured, by his own testimony before the commission which was examining him, that he believed in gas as an illuminating agent." It seems strange, doesn't it?

Will went on to quote the ridicule ocean steamers met at first. Lord Brougham offered in the house of lords, he says, to swallow whole the first steamer that crossed the Atlantic! Finally, Will told of the disheartening struggle Morse had to obtain recognition for his invention of the telegraph. His application to congress for aid in 1837 met with howls and jeers. He was refused letters patent in England and obtained only a useless brevet d'invention in Paris. Yet Morse lived to see the complete success of the telegraph, and was probably the most decorated American of his time. And so the world goes on! We shall probably be using electricity in our house some day.

We all send love and good wishes to you.

Your affectionate friend,
MARTHA FREEMAN ESMOND.

Footnotes.

The name of Orrington Lunt, whom Martha eulogized in 1880, is preserved in the Orrington Lunt library of Evanston and in the street names of Orrington avenue and Lunt avenue. Miss Cornelia Gray Lunt, a daughter, still lives in the old home built by her parents. She has no rival in the affections of Evanstonians.

Longfellow Quotations.

Mrs. W. K. Harrison of Elmhurst, Ill., writes: "There is not much in Longfellow's poems that I do not love. I wonder if anything could be more dramatic and thrilling than what followed John Alden's pleading with Priscilla in behalf of Miles Standish. It is too long to be printed —what I am sending you—but it helps pass a dark, drizzly day to copy some of it."

Mrs. W. G. Davis of Chicago sends as her favorite:

"The very tones in which we spake
Had something strange I could but mark!
The leaves of memory seemed to make
A mournful rustling in the dark."
(From "The Fire of Driftwood.")

Mrs. B. F. Bushee, Chicago, writes: "For fifty years my parents lived in one place on the near north side, east of Michigan boulevard, and I knew well many of the old families. Among these was Judge Gary, who presided at the trial of the Haymarket rioters. In earlier days the lake was within a block and a half of our house, and we watched with regret the gradual filling in of the land and the demolishing of old landmarks in preparation for the widening of Michigan boulevard to its present proportions. But I have lived to appreciate the improvements."

Alice Branton Smith of Scales Mound, Ill., writes that her home is one of the oldest in Illinois, but is in a good state of preservation. This house has been in the possession of the Branton family since its erection, and was known in early days as Branton's Tavern. It is seven miles from Galena.

Benjamin B. Felix, apropos of "The Elegant Eighties," writes: "My first bicycle was given me on my eighth birthday, and though I have always known I was among the first riders, I did not suspect that there were so few at that time. I think you will enjoy a description of it: Large wheel in front, of course, with a small one behind. The wheels were ordinary wood with iron tires. The front wheel was 36 inches in diameter and the back one about eight. The pedals were wood spools; the back bone triangular cast iron, which had a most awkward way of bending out of shape because it was not stiff enough to stand the 'drag' of the back wheel. Handlebars wrought iron, with wood handles.

"But the seat was the gem of it all—cast iron, with an open work 'Otto' [the name of the maker's son] in the center. When you got off that seat you were branded like a western calf."

L. G., Ohio, sends a Spoonerism: "Have you ever heard of the bishop who, in introducing a new clergyman to his congregation, said: 'I am sure he will be a shoving leopard to his flock,' when he meant to call him a loving shepherd?"

Wife of Bolivian Appalled at Change in U. S. Home Life

WASHINGTON, D. C.—(AP)—Señora de Abelli has come back to her native United States—but not, she contends, to the country she left fifteen years ago.

It's a strange new land that the American wife of the Bolivian minister has found in its place. For now she claims that its homes, once centers of family life, have become only places in which to change clothes.

So back to the mansion which Señor de Abelli's father built 50 years ago in Bolivia she will take her children, Luis Dante, 7, and Crystal Eloise, 4, to visit their grandmother.

And, though she wants them to be educated in this country, she hopes they will grow up and marry in South America where, she says, the people, like their lives, are "more real."

"I was a pre-war girl," she says. "I married and went to Bolivia in 1917 when we weer still a nation of homes.

"Returning here recently, I was appalled at the divorce, the broken homes, the boys and girls rotating from boarding school to summer camp and back again with only occasional glimpses of their parents.

"Life in Bolivia, with its respect for the home and family life, is far preferable to me now."

'World Switchboard' Will Be Ready for Service Next Year

LONDON.—[U. P.]—Conversation from London with a telephone subscriber anywhere in the world will be possible next year when Bitain's newest and largest telephone exchange is opened. Work on the exchange is now in progress, and when completed will be known as "the switchboard of the world."

Great Britain's telephone service, after many years of backwardness as compared with the United States and the larger European nations, has recently gone ahead rapidly. In the last five years the overseas telephone service has been extended to 24 countries in Europe, and the whole of Europe, with the exception of part of the Balkans and Russia, can now be reached by telephone from here.

There also has been a great extension of the use of the telephone in the London area, where there are now 150 exchanges serving 730,000 subscribers, an increase of 40 per cent in five years.

English Dean Declares Christ Laughed Often

LONDON. — [N. P.] — Despite the fact that the Bible not even once suggests that Christ ever laughed, Dean Inge, the gloomy but famous dean of St. Paul's cathedral, thinks that He did laugh.

"We are told on one occasion that Christ wept," declared Dean Inge preaching at St. Mark's church, "but we never have been told that He laughed. Personally, I am convinced that He did laugh—and frequently."

Dean Inge added that the note of fear which was very pronounced throughout the New Testament had been almost abandoned by the Christian religions.

Schools Unite in Study Course for Ministers

Pastors' Institute Will Discuss Religion and Methods of Modern Science

By the Rev. John Evans.

PASTORS of Chicago churches as well as many from over the country who are puzzled by the implications of the "new science" as related to theology will be interested to hear the announcement of the divinity school of the University of Chicago and the Chicago Theological seminary. These seminaries, located on the Midway, have united to offer a "pastors' institute" during the first week of August.

DEAN SHAILER MATHEWS.

In making this announcement Dean Shailer Mathews of the divinity school of the university and President Albert W. Palmer of the Chicago seminary point out that many pastors are inquiring, for instance, about the relation of psychiatry to the "cure of souls." In answer to those inquiries the heads of the two schools will secure for the institute such widely known leaders as Drs. E. J. Chave and Edmund S. Conklin to tell the pastors what psychology can do for troubled and sick minds.

Classes and discussion groups will also discuss the use the preacher can make of the Bible as interpreted by modern historical scholarship, together with general pastoral problems in the present complex social order. Among the lecturers and instructors for the institute are Vice President Frederic Woodward of the University of Chicago, President Albert W. Palmer, the Rev. Dr. Justin Wroe Nixon of Rochester, N. Y.; Robert Cashman, business manager of the Chicago seminary, and Professors A. E. Holt, H. N. Wieman, S. J. Case, and W. Hubert Greaves.

The summer institute will be in addition to the regular summer quarter of the two seminaries. As usual there will be several hundred students present carrying on studies toward advanced degrees. The purpose of the institute, according to the announcement, is to give pastors an opportunity to "brush up" on current trends in religious thinking and church practice.

"Conquering Self-Distrust" is the subject of the address which Dr. James Gordon Gilkey, educator, preacher, sociologist, and writer, will deliver before the Chicago Sunday Evening club tonight. Dr. Gilkey, a brother of the dean of University chapel, is pastor of the South Congregational church in Springfield, Mass. Clifford W. Barnes will preside and give the informal Bible talk at 7:30, and the club choir will present a Rachmaninoff program at the main meeting. Charles R. Holden will take part in the service.

A special feature will be a program at 7 o'clock by the Lindblom High school chorus, consisting of 100 boys and girls.

His eminence, Cardinal Mundelein, will celebrate solemn pontificial mass in the Holy Name cathedral at 12 o'clock noon today. The Rt. Rev. Msgr. C. J. Quille, pastor of St. Ita's church, will be the assistant priest, with the Very Rev. Msgr. Philip F. Mahoney, rector of Quigley seminary, and the Very Rev. Msgr. James J. Horsburgh, archdiocesan director of the Propogation of the Faith, as assistant deacons. The Rev. J. J. O'Mara will be the deacon of the mass, with the Rev. Harold Sieger as subdeacon, and the Rev. Patrick J. Hayes as master of ceremonies, the Rev. Donald Temple as subdeacon of the metropolitan cross, and the Rev. Gregory M. Cloos as notarius.

The Cathedral choristers, directed by the Rev. Edwin V. Hoover, will sing Pietro Yon's Veni Creator mass, accompanied by the Cathedral Symphony orchestra and Prof. Albert Sieben at the organ. They will also sing the sequence: Veni Sancte Spiritus, by Yon and Hoover, and Refice's Domine Calvum Fac Georgium.

The Rev. Arthur J. Kelly, S. J., will preach the sermon.

The services will be broadcast over stations WCFL and W9XAA with the Very Rev. Joseph P. Morrison, rector of the cathedral, as radio announcer.

The Very Rev. Joseph P. Morrison, rector of the Holy Name cathedral, will lecture on "The Mass" at the May meeting of the Holy Name cathedral Converts' league, which is to be held on Thursday evening at 8 o'clock in the Cathedral assembly hall, 11 East Chicago avenue.

Father Morrison has sponsored the Cathedral Converts' league since its original inception as a parochial activity of the Holy Name Cathedral parish. The particular feature of each meeting is a lecture on some topic of outstanding Catholic interest, and the attendance has been extended to include any Catholics of the archdiocese of Chicago, convert or otherwise, who wish to hear the lectures. The Rev. Gregory M. Cloos is the spiritual director.

Defensive Play! Making Small Cards in Your Own Hand and Partner's Hand Take Tricks.

By Charles True Adams.

LAST Sunday we took up the question of defensive play and went into the conventional leads in some detail. You will remember that conventional leads are those leads used before the dummy has gone down. In other words, the first lead of the hand. All leads thereafter are governed by deduction, observation, and, in some cases perhaps, by intuition. We can, however, give some general rules covering subsequent leads.

When playing against a no-trump it is generally well to return your partner's lead unless you have some particular reason for not doing so. The advantage of returning your partner's lead is that he has led from his longest suit and so it probably is the easiest to set up. The main object of the opposition is always (when playing against no-trump) to try to make the small cards of a long suit good by being able to lead it a sufficient number of times to clear that suit. If, on the other hand, your partner has led to your suit it is usually your longest suit and you have again the same reasons for continuing with that suit. When returning a lead of your partner's suit you should always return your highest card of that suit. If for some reason or other you are unable to return your partner's suit, lead your own best suit, and when so leading observe the same rules as to the card led as you would observe had you made an initial conventional lead of that suit. If you have no suit of your own, your main hope is to lead a suit that your partner can take, so lead a suit which is weak in the dummy. If your opponent has any strength it is in his own hand, and you are therefore following the old saw of leading through strength up to weakness.

Another thing should be kept in mind when playing against a no-trump contract: It is your opponents' hope as well as your own to make up long cards [i. e., small cards in long suits]. Therefore, when the dummy has a long suit attempt to take out any other entries there may be to that dummy. The long suit in the dummy will do the declarer no good if you can stop him from leading it after it has been cleared. In this connection you should also attempt to keep control of the long suit in dummy until declarer has no more of that suit. In other words, if you have an ace and several small of dummy's long suit, don't play that ace until you have given declarer a chance to get rid of all of that suit in his own hand. Then unless the dummy has other entries you can effectively block the declarer from using the good dummy tricks.

When playing against a declared suit you should return your partner's lead [generally] if he has led a king or a queen. Do not return his lead of a lower card unless you have reason to believe it is either a fourth best lead or a singleton. In general, when not returning partner's lead the best strategy is to lead up to weakness in the dummy. If the dummy holds a void suit or a singleton, it is well to lead trumps to stop a cross ruff between declarer and dummy.

It is well to force declarer's hand whenever possible. By forcing declarer's hand I mean to put the declarer in a position where he is forced to trump. Since the declarer has a long trump hand it is usually of great value to force him to use the trumps. On the other hand, never, unless the dummy happens to have a long trump hand, allow the dummy to trump. Whenever dummy trumps declarer is able to throw a losing card from his own hand unless he is forced to follow suit. And in this connection never lead a suit which can be trumped either by declarer or by dummy, allowing either hand to discard.

There are certain conventional signals between the opponents that should be kept in mind and are of great value if carefully used. A discard of a seven or higher card shows strength in the suit. A discard of a lower card shows weakness. (Some people start with a six instead of a seven.) A discard of a high card followed by a lower card of the same suit asks partner to continue playing that suit. In following to your partner's suit the play of the seven or a higher card is considered an encouraging card and asks partner to continue playing that suit. On the other hand, when wishing to discourage partner a lower card is played.

While all rules are made to be broken, it is well to follow the time honored maxims unless some particularly good reason has shown itself for deviating from the rule in question. In general: Second hand low and third hand high and when the declarer finesses through your hand, cover with an honor the vast majority of the time.

The rule of eleven is extremely useful to both the partner of the leader and to the declarer in placing the outstanding cards of a suit when the fourth best lead has been made. By subtracting the number of spots on the card led from eleven, the result obtained shows the number of cards higher than the card led are not in the hand of the leader. If, for instance, a five spot is led, you take five from eleven, which gives you six. This means that there are only six cards higher than that five spot that the leader does not hold. By counting the cards higher than the five in the dummy and your own hand you can see whether the declarer has any cards higher than the five, and, if so, how many. As an example, let us suppose the leader, who is our partner, leads the ♣ 6. The dummy holds the 10, 9, 8, 2 of clubs and we hold the K, 7, 4. Now, six from eleven leaves five. Since there are three cards higher than the six spot in dummy and two in our own hand, we know that the declarer has no card in clubs higher than the 6. Therefore, if dummy plays the 2 we can put on either the 4 or the 7 in perfect confidence that we will take the trick, unless we are playing at a trump declaration and declarer is able to trump it. Going further we can see that our partner must hold the A, Q, J of the suit. All the declarer can hold is the 5 and the 3, or one of them or none.

It is because of this very Rule of Eleven that many advanced players will occasionally lead third or fifth best to fool the declarer as to the location of the cards of that suit. Of course, they may also deceive the partner and they only deviate thus from the conventional lead when they think it will avail them more to deceive their opponent than to inform their partner.

Disillusioned Helen Living Quietly in Italy

Rumanian Ex-Queen Waits Wearily in Exile for a Chance to Visit Son.

FLORENCE, Italy.—(AP)—Helen, the disillusioned ex-queen of Rumania, has returned to her modest abode here, a bit better off financially than before her visit to Bucharest, but with no appreciable improvement in her relations with King Carol.

PRINCESS HELEN.

Her ex-husband neither welcomed her to his capital nor went to the station when she departed.

She receives news constantly, however, of her son, Crown Prince Michael with whom she spent most of her five weeks in Bucharest. She corresponds affectionately with the boy and worries over what she considers "the bad influences" to which he is subjected.

Living with Her Sisters.

Helen has been living here in the villa of Count Spalletti, where her mother, ex-Queen Sophie of Greece, resided until her death in January. Her sisters, Princesses Irene and Catherine, are with her.

Helen thought, before she went to Bucharest, that she had this problem solved. She had planned to buy a villa owned by an American, expecting to pay $60,000 for it. This was only half the real value of the place.

Forced to Cancel Purchase.

She had gone so far as to agree to the purchase. Then suddenly she had to cancel the deal. She told the proprietor that the Rumanian court had promised her the money, but the legislature cut the item out of the royal appropriations.

Helen, in this instance, as in others, was the shuttlecock of two parties in Rumania, one wishing her return and the other her absence. The former faction, friendly though it was to her political cause, defeated the $60,000 project, thinking her financial straits would force her to a reconciliation with Carol.

Gandhiites Employ Deaf Mute to Plead Cause in Bombay

BOMBAY.—(AP)—A deaf and dumb man was arrested here while he was trying to address a crowd of Gandhi's disciples by signs.

The police had to use signs to question him.

They said they learned he had been given a red shirt, blue trousers, a tricolored cap, an illegal congress flag, 15 cents in cash, and was then sent out to preach the doctrine of Indian independence.

Australia's Most Romantic Soldiers Hold a Reunion

SYDNEY, Australia.—(AP)—Australia's most romantic soldiers, members of the Camel corps, who took part in the desert campaign against the Turks during the world war, have held a reunion, the first since the force was disbanded in 1918.

Many of these former camel soldiers now own their own camel teams carrying freight to and from the huge cattle ranches on the fringe of the central Australian desert. In these parts there are great numbers of wild camels, progeny of the animals which Afghan teamsters brought to Australia half a century ago, and when captured young they are easily tamed.

These Australians claim that they excel the Arabs in handling camels.

Greece Given Church Gold.

ATHENS.—(AP)—The archbishop of Athens, in order to strengthen the national gold reserve, has offered the government all the golden vessels in the churches except those having archaeological value. Citizens are invited to do likewise and have their names written in the "Golden Book."

Mexican States Fast Becoming RoadConscious

High Speed Highways Are Projected to Get Tourists from United States

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

MEXICO CITY.—The spirit of road building has taken possession of northern Mexico. This perhaps is due to the fact that these states, being closer to the United States border, have received a clearer vision of the importance of directing the tourist movement toward Mexico.

From the Rio Grande to Monterrey, capital of the state of Nuevo Leon, commercially and industrially the most active of the twenty-eight Mexican states, and second only to the national capital itself, runs a modern highway over which autos and buses make sixty miles an hour. And beyond this throughout the state the national road connecting Laredo with Mexico City is in good condition. Nuevo Leon is extending its highways and improving them.

Coahuila, one of the largest of the Mexican states, has not only laid out an ambitious highway building plan, but is steadily carrying it out. Being a country of extensive plains interspersed here and there with low ranges of mountains, Coahuila has the advantage over most of the other Mexican states when it comes to road building, and it is taking advantage of this with the vision ever in view of what the one modern tourist highway has brought to Monterrey.

Takes Metropolitan Air.

Already Coahuila has a modern highway connecting the state capital with Monterrey and over this American tourists are pouring into the state capital, Saltillo, in ever increasing numbers. The once little country capital is beginning to take upon itself a metropolitan air, and English is taking the place of the various Indian dialects, which have almost disappeared. Only a short stretch of this highway, which, however, is in Nuevo Leon, not far outside Monterrey, remains to be put into first class condition.

The people of the state of Coahuila are unkind enough to hint that Nuevo Leon hasn't got a hustle on and urged the national highway commission to attend to it because it is feared that the tourist traffic that now stops at the state capital of Nuevo Leon would be carried on to Saltillo. In this work of connecting the capitals of Nuevo Leon and Coahuila the latter state contributed one and a half million pesos in a time of crisis which hit the northern Mexican states hard because of the decrease of trade with the United States, upon which they largely depended.

One of the most ambitious highway projects which the state of Coahuila has now in hand is the road conecting Saltillo with Piedras Negras, on the United States border, 260 miles away, which is being built in sections. The work is well advanced, important bridges have been built, and parts of the highway are now being used extensively for local traffic between Coahuila towns along the way. When this road is finished American tourists will be able to enter Mexico by way of Laredo and, passing through Monterrey and Saltillo, recross the Rio Grande at Piedras Negras, opposite Eagle pass, a distance of over 500 miles.

Feeders Being Built.

The governor of the state of Coahuila, Nesario Ortiz Garza, who is collecting funds from people all along the Saltillo-Piedras highway to finish it, is urging the Mexican national government to chip in with a liberal subvention for the good of the cause. It is likely the invitation will be accepted if the road building program now on the tapis is carried through. This includes the borrowing of upwards of twenty million pesos, to be paid yearly over a stipulated period of time, from the oil and other transportation interests in Mexico.

The state of Coahuila is also building several feeders to these two roads already mentioned. One of these runs from Piedras Negras to Guerrero, and another from Guerrero to Nava. A third, beginning at Allende, of historic fame, passes through Morelos, Zaragoza, Jimenez, and San Carlos, on its was to Villa Acuña.

Huge Monoplanes to Be Put in Use on African Line

LONDON.—(AP)—The first of a fleet of eight 4 engined passenger monoplanes designed especially for the 5,500 mile trans-African line between Cairo and Cape Town is about ready for preliminary tests.

The whole fleet is expected to be in operation by the end of this year.

When loaded the plane will weigh eight tons, with two tons of that available for passengers and goods.

The engines will develop 1,400 horse power, sufficient to enable them to negotiate the high airfields, some 5,000 feet up, that dot the African airway. Their reserve power is expected to permit the ships to rise with only three engines up to 9,000 feet.

Maximum speed will be between 140 and 150 miles, with cruising at 120 and a landing speed under 50. Wing span is 90 feet and nose to tail measurement 71 feet 6 inches.

Special cooling equipment is being installed for tropical flying, and furnishings include arm chairs which extend full length for reclining. Up to now the British have preferred biplanes for their airlines.

Hold "Brick Party."

COLOGNE.—(AP)—A gesture against high taxes, rivaling the Boston "tea party" of American history took place at Opladen where unidentified citizens, under cover of night, held a "brick party" and sealed up the door of the tax collector's office with masonry.

English M. P.'s Go to Work by Devious Routes

Yacht, Bicycle, Horse, Carriage Convey Them to Parliament.

By Ann Whittingham.

LONDON.—[Special.]—The Thames in front of the houses of parliament may shortly resemble a regatta if all the M. P.'s who are buying yachts decide to live in them. The first to take up his residence this year anchored off the terrace is Maj. Lionel Beaumont-Thomas, M. P., who is also known as the best dressed man in the house. His converted warship has returned to her old moorings, and her owner has only to step off the gang plank to find himself in the midst of his parliamentary duties.

Shortly, Commander Southby will anchor his yacht somewhere near, and the Earl Fitzwilliam will be occupying a third birth later in the month. There is also a motor launch which ties up there. It brings a member from Richmond to Westminster each day. This boat does not boast living quarters, however.

Bicycle Also Popular.

Besides using the ancient waterway to get to work, England's ruling classes also use the bicycle. There are stands for parking bicycles in Palace yard and, although they are used mainly by officials, it is not long since Lord Dunedin, until recently the lord of appeal, rode to the house regularly on his bicycle. Col. Josiah Wedgewood, Mr. G. N. Barnes, and Sir Harry Brittain are other cycling politicians. Until recently one member arrived at the house on horseback, and in faultless costume used the ancient mounting stone. Sir Bertran Falle enters Palace yard each day in a carriage which conveys him from South Kensington in just a little more time than it takes a bus.

Great men have their whims but few confess to a liking for knitting and embroidery. Sir Alan Anderson, a director of the Bank of England, knits in bed, and Mr. Thomas Dunhill, honorary surgeon to the king, knits because it is soothing. The prince of Wales is said to do petit point. The earl of Harewood knits scarfs, and has taught his sons to do likewise. Viscount Lascelles, at the age of 5, took a prize for knitting at an exhibition of needlework.

Trinity Term Begins.

Trinity term, or summer term, has begun at the universities. In Oxford the main street, Carfax, presented a few changes to the returning undergraduates. The southwest corner of Carfax presents a brand new bank building, rebuilt on the site of the famous Swyndlestock tavern, notable for a fourteenth century brawl, known as the riot of St. Scholastica's day, in which sixty-three scholars were killed.

The trouble began over the disputed quality of some wine, and in the battle which followed the university completely lost the day. The results of this town and gown uproar led to the subjection of the town to the university. The king's orders on the subject were severe, and apart from the imposition of heavy fines, the mayors and sixty-three other citizens were compelled to attend the university church on the anniversary of the riot, wearing halters, which custom was continued for more than two centuries.

The general retrenchment of the last few months has brought about an analysis of the extra college expenditure of the average undergraduate at Oxford. In 1909 the "average undergraduate" spent $150 [at par] on clothes, $70 on wines, and $100 on tobacco. In 1932 the corresponding figures are $50, $20, and $35.

Changing Oxonians.

A quarter of a century ago, there was a large percentage of undergraduates with generous allowances and no idea of regarding their time at Oxford as anything other than a pleasant method of spending three years. Today there are more young men with a determination that those years at Oxford shall be of use to them in after life in more than merely a social sense. In short, the drones are almost extinct. There is less money to spend, and there is less time available for spending it.

Scotland Yard has got us all watching sixpences for bad acorns. Bad acorns mean bad sixpences. Counterfeiters seldom trouble to make sixpences but it is a profitable step in the plan of rifling automatic machines. These exist in thousands to get around the restricted hours for the sale of tobacco, chocolates, etc. The sixpences are dated 1929—the acorn issue—but they have their imperfections, and can be detected easily by persons without expert knowledge.

The largest gathering of Freemasons ever held in this country will take place on May 19 at Olympia. Five members of the royal family will attend the service for the laying of the dedication stone of the Freemason's hospital at Ravensbrook park. The actual stone on the site will be connected electrically so that the duke of Connaught, as provincial grand master of Berkshire, may lay it from Olympia. Also taking part in the ceremony will be the prince of Wales as provincial grand master of Surrey, the duke of York as the provincial grand master of Middlesex and Prince George as master of the Navy lodge. Eleven thousand people, including 3,000 women, will attend the service that day.

The present Freemason's hospital and nursing home in Fulham is one of the few hospitals in England which acknowledges the existence of a class of patients who cannot pay the exorbitant "nursing home" fees and are not the objects of charity usually cared for by the hospitals.

Paying patients of limited means did not until a few years ago have anywhere to spend an illness except at home. The Freemasons were among the first to provide such accommodation, and their field is being widened by the building of the new hospital, which is one of the few hospitals not to ask the public for money for its support.

Where the Ice Slips Into the Sea

The Taku glacier, in Alaska, with a steamer in the foreground. The sight of the ice crunching down into the sea from the mountains never fails to draw exclamations of awe.

Alaska and Back in Two Weeks Is New Schedule

HAWK FACED totem poles, gargantuan forests, snowcapped peaks, Indian villages and the whole panorama of Alaska are now within the range of two weeks' vacationists from Chicagoland.

Coördination between railway time tables and summer steamship schedules makes it possible for the city bound mortal to follow for a while the Trail of '98 and to re-live, in retrospect, the glamorous stories of Robert W. Service. The trip at sea may be started at either Vancouver or Seattle.

The liners thread the narrow sea channels of the British Columbian coast, outbound and home bound, in nine days. The ports of call, after leaving Seattle, are Victoria, Ketchikan, Sitka, Skagway, Juneau, Taku Glacier, Wrangell, Ketchikan again and Prince Rupert. There is time for explorations ashore, for chatting with old sourdoughs and for souvenir hunting in the Indian shops.

6½ Glorious Days in the CANADIAN ROCKIES.. $60
From Banff or Field—All Expenses

IT'S TRUE!... that whole kaleidoscopic Banff-Lake Louise region that you've dreamed of seeing, is squeezed into those two neat little figures —$60, and you live like a king.

You lunch at the one-and-only Banff Springs Hotel of international society. You spend two glamorous nights and a day at matchless Lake Louise —world's beauty mecca. You take the same fabulous motor trips, live at the same exhilarating alpine Chalet-Bungalow Camps, swim—dance—climb—ride in the same magic setting that other years was priced notches higher.

Make no plans for this summer until you've read that exciting day-by-day folder called "6½ Glorious Days in the Canadian Rockies"—on the other side of the Border, in a "foreign" land, as far from gloom as East from West.
